With a view to the convenience of purchasers of trust lands in Kansas at the approaching June and July sales, the Treasury Department has made an arrangement by which parties in New-York, Philadelphia, or at any other point on the Atlantic shore, may deposit money here in sums of any amount, with the Treasurer, whose checks or transfer drafts may be transmitted to Kansas and received by the Agent as cash. The Secretary of the Treasury has directed the Treasurer to send to the Assistant Treasurer at St. Louis, fifty transfer drafts for $1,000 each, which, with those of larger sums now on hand will be sufficient to meet all possible demands.

The letter received from Major M'CULLOCH's Deputy Marshal, merely expresses the belief that the Major, "with was not at home," will accept the Governship of Utah.

Annual Meeting of the American Baptist Publication Society.

BOSTON, Wednesday, May 13.

The thirty-third annual meeting of the American Baptist Publication Society was held at the Charles-street Baptist Church, to-day. Rev. Mr. LIMAN, of Pennsylvania, presided.

The annual report was quite satisfactory, although the business of the Society during the year has been somewhat embarrassed by change in the officers, and by resignations and death. The number of stereotype plates now owned by the Society is 44,611, and the whole number of pages printed during the year, 23,438 000. The colportage of the Society has been successful during the year, beyond example, and their Sunday School operations have been very extensive and prosperous. The receipts for the year have been $48,150, and the expenses $48,000. A history of the Church of Christ, from its earliest day to the present time, is in preparation, under the auspices of the Society. The report concludes with a hopeful view of the prospects of the Society in the future.

National Quarantine Convention at Philadelphia.

FIRST DAY.

From the Evening Bulletin of Yesterday.

The Quarantine Convention met, this morning, at the Supreme Court Room, east wing of the State House. A very full list of Delegates was present.

A few minutes after 11 o'clock the body was called to order by WILSON JEWELL, M. D., of this city, who nominated WM. BORSALL, Esq., as temporary Chairman. A reed to unanimously.

Dr. JOSIAH R. COAN was then appointed temporary Secretary.

Mr. BORSALL, on taking the Chair called on Dr. JEWELL, who had been selected to deliver the introductory address.

Dr. JEWELL took the stand and delivered an able and elaborate address, in which he welcomed the delegates from foreign bodies to the hospitalities of the City, and expressed the wish that their stay would be pleasant and their conventional experience agreeable and profitable. He then spoke of the importance of the present gathering, the first American Quarantine Congress; alluded to the deep interest which all the seaboard cities had in the subject of sanitary regulations, and gave a sketch of the origin of the present Convention, which, it appears, was first brought to the Fall of 1856, by a member of the Philadelphia Board of Health. He also read an extract from the minutes of the Philadelphia Board of Health, Feb 11, 1856, describing the objects of the Convention.

Dr. JEWELL then proceeded to give a long and interesting sketch of the Quarantine regulations of the ports of the various States and cities as they at present are.

On motion, a Committee of one from each State was appointed was appointed by the Chair, to nominate permanent officers. Messrs. Thompson, Biddle, Barker, Rich, Parsons, Valentine, Selden, Kent and Nicholls were made the Committee.

Mr. BARNELL, of New-York, moved that a Committee of five be appointed to adopt a basis of representation for the Convention. It was discussed for a few minutes and passed. The following gentlemen were appointed the Committee—Messrs. Russell of New-York; Conner, of Philadelphia; Jones, of New-Orleans; Jones, of Mississippi; and Quince, of Baltimore.

The Committee to nominate permanent officers having returned, reported the following as permanent officers. They were unanimously confirmed:

President—WILSON JEWELL, M. D.

Vice-Presidents—E. H. Barton, M. D., of La., Hon. A. ex. B. Ely, of Miss.

Secretaries—Ed. Hartshorne, M. D., of Pa.; Homer Franklin, Esq., of New-York.

Dr. JEWELL, on taking the chair, thanked the body for the unsought honor conferred upon him, and for the assistance he would endeavor to perform his duties as faithfully as his deficiencies would allow.

A Committee of seven was appointed to prepare business for the body.

The Committee to prepare a basis of representation reported a resolution to the effect that, on all questions requiring a final vote, each body represented should have one vote; on all matters of business coming before the Convention, each delegate represented should have one vote. The resolution was agreed to.

The Convention adjourned to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, which will henceforth be the hour of meeting in the afternoon.

[TELEGRAPHIC.]

In the afternoon session a communication was presented from Dr. STERLING of New-York, advocating the enforcement of strict Quarantine regulations, as the only mode of preventing imported contagious diseases becoming epidemic.

Alderman FRANKLIN, of New-York, was added to the Business Committee, which reported a series of resolutions for the action of the Convention.

Adjourned until to-morrow.

THE MEMORY OF CHIEF JUSTICE OAKLEY.

LARGE MEETING OF THE BAR.

Speeches by Daniel Lord, Esq., Judge Duer, F. B. Tillou, Esq., and Hiram Ketchum, Esq.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

JUDGE DUER IN THE CHAIR.

Yesterday this court-room was crowded to overflowing by members of the legal profession and others, to listen to the eulogies to be pronounced on the character and abilities of the late lamented Judge of the Superior Court. Among the distinguished lawyers present we noticed Hon. Judges Nelson, Betts, Ingraham, Brady, Daly, Mitchell, Davies, Strong, Emott, Roosevelt, Clerke, Duer, Bosworth, Sloason, Hoffman, and Woodruff. Messrs. James T. Brady, Wm. Fullerton, F. B. Cutting, Wm. Curtis Noyes, Hiram Ketchum, F. B. Tillou, Ex-Judges Dean and Edmonds, and others.

Mr. F. B. CUTTING moved that the meeting come to order, and that Hon. Judge DUER take the Chair.

The motion was carried unanimously, and the learned Judge took his seat.

Mr. CUTTING also moved that Judges NELSON, BETTS, MITCHELL, INGRAHAM and Mr. BRADFORD, the Surrogate, be appointed Vice-Presidents. Carried.

The President asked the pleasure of the meeting.

Mr. CUTTING moved that Messrs. VANWINKLE and EVARTS be appointed Secretaries, which motion was carried.

Mr. DANIEL LORD—Mr. President, I move the adoption of the following resolutions, which I will read:

Resolved, That in the death of Chief-Justice OAKLEY the bench and the bar have lost one of their most distinguished ornaments, for during the forty years that he has been one of us he has never for one moment ceased to be a bright and leading example for the profession.

Resolved, That distinguished as he has been throughout his whole career, for great good sense and a clear, vigorous and powerful intellect, he has in all situations occupied a prominent position.

As a legislator ranking among the first, though without ambition for political distinction.

As the chief law officer of the State, standing at the head of the profession, even when there were giants in the land.

And as a Judge, during the whole thirty years of his sitting on the bench, occupying a place among the first of the judiciary of the country.

Resolved, That honoring his unswerving integrity, his grasp of intellect, and his decision of character, we mourn over his departure as that of one whose place will not soon be filled among us.

Resolved, That as a slight testimonial of our respect for his memory, and of our regard for his character, the members of the bar will attend his funeral and wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, elected by the officers of this meeting, be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

Mr. LORD said: Mr President, in offering these resolutions we do not refer to the well-known character of the departed. The eulogy of such a man as Justice OAKLEY is in his character,—so well known, so perfectly understood, so plain to be observed, and so impressive upon all the community that the character itself is its own eulogy. But there is a fitness that when worth like this is passing from us we should mark its trail by some distinguishing notice—that we should so far as we can express some appreciation of that worth which has so long stood before us to confer upon us its favors. No place could be so fitting for a eulogy on the departed Judge as this very locality, where has been the seat of his judgments, and this bar among whom he has exercised his dignity, and his gentle authority,—who have been the eye witnesses of his learning, of his talents, his impartiality and his justice. Sir, it is fitting to the truths of history, as well as becoming in the way of gratitude from this community, and an appreciating profession, that we should mark the traits which have attracted our admiration, and which are worthy of being perpetuated as a model for those who succeed him.

The leading feature, and indeed the rudimental element of Judge OAKLEY was his great and predominating common sense—a large, and all absorbing genial common feeling with the general interests of truth, justice and humanity, and a practical devotion to all his duties, which drew forth all his powers, invigorated him to every proper exertion, and which was the only consolation and enjoyment of his life.—Probably no man has ever known an individual whose common sense was a more marked and striking characteristic. No man knew Judge OAKLEY who did not know that every genial feeling between man and man found a response in his heart. When him no meanness could find a sympathy,—no wrong but that would find a sympathy,—no injustice that would not meet with opposition,—no just cause that would not invite some effort to secure and promote it. It resulted from this general character of the man, that in all his conduct and deportment, judicial and personal, he was marked with an almost extreme directness and simplicity. His directness was not uncourteous. It was undoubtedly difficult for a man of his clear understanding to have a sophistry presented to him,—to have the smoke and fire of rhetoric and eloquence brought to obscure a plain object to his own eye.

It was with reluctance that his vision was ever attempted to be impeded by anything but the pure object upon which truth threw its light. Therefore it was that, to some small degree, he was impatient of that which he considered unfair,—that which he considered unjust, that which he considered deceptive, or false; but yet I bear him the testimony of a young man, growing old in his acquaintance, that I have never known him to be rough or rash, or uncourteous, to that which was in any fair sense meritorious and just. He was, Sir, in regard to matters which were weighty and worth observation, a most patient Judge. His mind was rapid, his vision was rapid in the discernment of truth and justice. He saw at a glance, but he waited with patience until his mind was instructed. He had no first impressions which led him away. His was a patient mind of investigation, research of truth, desirous of justice, desirous of no personal bias in his own character, desirous of no adventitious reputation, but his great object as a Judge was to ascertain truth and justice, and to administer the law. No one in all the wide circle which is now listening to this poor and feeble tribute to him can charge him even with an attempt, or a wish to see other than the truth and justice of every case that came before him.

It resulted from these traits, from this common sense, from the common feelings which he partook with all his community, that he was a man of great clearness of apprehension. Few men, judicial, professional, or in any department of life, saw that which they undertook to speak about or to think about, with more transparent clearness. There was nothing belonging intrinsically to a subject before him, which he did not measure and investigate, and thoroughly appreciate and understand. Consequently, in the complicated trials which were had before him, no matter how intricate, no matter how numerous the witnesses, no matter with what conflict of circumstances, or with what opposition of evidence, he classified by almost instinctive power, and rapid reasoning, all the facts: he placed the circumstances all in their fit relations, he conceived and understood the bases of men, and knew how to make allowances, how to weigh, how to sift, how to judge, how to decide. Were it in question of law that he were to judge, he feared no obsolete and unreasonable cases. He refused his assent to no well settled decisions, but eminently his judicial mind was one of well-settled principle—principles which he strove to fasten, and which with him were founded upon the principles of human nature,—principles of general justice,—principles of an enlarged policy,—principles which in him had been exercised, and which had been enlightened by a large and profitable experience. Consequently, whether we hear him charging the common twelve men in the box, or delivering judgments from the forums of Justice, that same clearness of appreciation on his part, that same clearness of expression to others, marked everything that he did journally, as well as before he had done it professionally. Sir, another trait was very remarkable in this distinguished man: his great impartiality,—by which I do not mean a comparison with any of the Judiciary as not being intentionally impartial, for although we have a Judiciary whose mode of appointment many question, yet as to intentional partiality, as to the same way as to intentional pecuniary interest, biasing decisions, the very breath of slander has no right to speak. But what I mean by this is, that he had a remarkably cool and deliberative mind,—that he weighed, that he pondered, that he reflected, and that, when he decided it was the pure emanation of an enlightened, unclouded, unbiased and well-instructed intellect. He felt in that regard to a high degree his responsibility of respect as a man and a Judge. He fully appreciated the dignity of the great office, which placed him as a superior to moderate among the conflicts of men, who always would feel themselves his equals, except from the dignity of his office. No man exceeded Judge OAKLEY in the sagacity with which he applied his knowledge to that which was in hand before him. Whether it was a question of the ordinary experience of life, his was the sagacity of a man, of a great and wise man. He never applied the wrong principle to the wrong case. It was always the right principle of investigation as principles of evidence, and the right principles of decisions as principles of law. In that respect, as well as in the clearness of his understanding, and in the clearness with which he made himself understood by others, I think this learned Judge has not left a superior. Again, in the judicial character and acts of Judge OAKLEY there was always to be remarked a deep statesmanship of views. I do not mean by statesmanship the relation to the artificial distinctions of life or of society, but that all his law had reference to general principles of fitness, such as a wise statesman would establish, and which wise juries treat as the foundations upon which justice is to be administered between man and man. And I will finally add, as to his personal character, that he was a man of the most unapproachable uprightness, by which, as I remarked before, I do not allude to that vulgar uprightness which refuses a bribe, but there was a characteristic perpendicularity in this man's mind, a character which allowed him never to waver—never to hesitate. It would be in vain to bring against him that here was a popular opinion, or a personal friend, or a great personal interest. No such considerations would ever be placed before him, because they would be treated as so out of place that a man would be mad to mention any such thing to him. And in his administration of the law to juries, where the power of the Judge is so great as to give a leaning, where the natural biases and sympathies of a man so often might work injustice, I call my professional brethren and the public to witness that when he left a matter to a Jury, he left it to their common sense. He left it not as a ship without a rudder—not as a ship without a compass—but he gave all the benefit of his enlarged experience and wisdom, all his legal knowledge, all his statesmanlike views upon the aberrations of society. He instructed the Jury, but when it came to the deciding of turning facts, after giving them the principles which they ought to apply—the principles by which their judgment ought to be formed, it was a general fact that he left the matter to the impartial decision of the common sense and common feeling congenial to that which was in his own bosom of those who sat as constitutional triers of the question. It may be, that sometimes when he knew that there was prevalent error, by which the minds before him were liable to be disturbed, then he laid himself out to remove every wish to take away all false decoys, strip the case of its disguise, and place it so clearly that the common mind assumed an ability almost equal to his own, by the inspiration which his own genius as a judge gave them.

With all these excellences as a judge, I will ask how did he derive them? And here permit me, if your honors please, to say, that the bar is the mother of the bench. Although the Queen is the subject of the King, it is the Queen who gives the King. It would be injustice to the distinguished judge not to look at the early training which he received at the bar, and in this assembly I am sure I shall be pardoned for a few words of eulogy upon his. Judge OAKLEY did not originally belong to this City. He came from Dutchess County, which has furnished eminent talent. He belonged to a class of men to whom it was an honor to belong. He was the contemporary and successor of MARTIN VAN BUREN. He was the friend of EMMETT, THOMPSON, TALCOTT and WIGHT and others. It was a noble brotherhood. It was an honor to be upon an equality in most order. It was a great distinction to meet upon an equality at the bar, and in fair competition the gentlemen I have named. But his sphere at the bar was still wider, because it must be admitted that in addition to the ability and learning which the bar requires to produce men fit to be great judges, there must be also a large field of action. Mr. OAKLEY first filled the office of Attorney General of this State, succeeding Mr. VAN BUREN, and at a time when that office was one of great responsibility, dignity and difficulty. Shortly after this he went into the federal judiciary. He appeared before the bar of the United States; and I cannot close the remarks I have to make, I think, more appropriately or justly to the deceased, than by calling up before you the great case in which he was distinguished. Picture to yourselves that room in the Capitol, to which there stood JOHN MARSHALL, Judge STORY, SMITH THOMPSON, the late Judge WASHINGTON, Mr. Justice TANEY, men of the greatest distinction in this wide country—picture to yourselves these great functions of that great Court, men drawn together from the head of the profession to give to their combined wisdom the quivering effect of a final judgment. Presented before yourselves the parties in the great Steamboat case. The State of New-York, you will remember, always full of the spirit of progress and improvement, gave to this country the first example of a great canal. She had already fostered steam navigation by a grant to ROBERT FULTON, and she had secured to the country and the world the greatest boon that ever was conferred upon commerce. She also is a State which first set the example of the construction of a passenger railroad. She, in the magnificent spirit of what was considered a wise legislation, had given the privilege to Mr. FULTON, the inventor, although eventually taken from him, of the exclusive use of steam on the waters of the Hudson. That was assailed by great power and wealth. It was also assailed as being against the freedom of the great commercial interests of the country, and in that arena was the case tried, Judge OAKLEY representing the mighty sovereignty of the State of New-York. His associate was THOMAS ADDIS EMMETT. And by whom were they met? By DANIEL WEBSTER and WILLIAM WIRT. Those four men debated that question before MARSHALL, STORY, WASHINGTON, TODD and THOMPSON. This I conceive to have been the culmination of professional eminence. What Court could have so great a question? What Court could be so greatly constituted? What Court had the power of bringing private men to sit in judgment upon sovereign States? What Court could feel the capacity to arbitrate among arguments of such talent, power and learning? No one will say that the argument of Mr. OAKLEY on that occasion did not place him at least in the front rank, if not superior to others. This was a noble achievement! It ought, and it did satisfy his ambition at the bar. To him the bar could have no higher honors, and he took a seat on the bench. How he has administered justice there I have already said. So then are judges to be trained. Let it be remembered that you cannot make a judge by election or by appointment. You may give a man a title to the office, but you do not thereby make him a judge. You do but bring him into a position in which deficiency becomes a defect, to which darkness becomes confusion, and in which every failing becomes a minister of evil. But it is still the bar which is to furnish the judges, and in this day when the great community itself selects them, it is worth while upon occasions like the present, to know that the very persons whom they look up to as the models of justice are men to be found only among the severer trials and conflicts of the bar.

I close by saying how noble a fame has he! How great a loss have we sustained! Who shall fill his place? Who shall fill up that measure of usefulness which has created among us as a community one vast abyss and void.

REMARKS OF JUDGE DUER.

The learned Judge said that before he took the sense of the meeting he deemed it proper to say that it had been his intention, in compliance with the wishes of the bar and in accordance with his own feelings, to have submitted somewhat at large his views in regard to the character, virtues and public services of the late deceased friend and brother, Judge OAKLEY.

Probably no person lived who knew him more intimately than did he. He (Judge DUER) had had frequent and favorable opportunities to acquire a knowledge of his character, temper and disposition, together with his moral and social virtues. I had been his (Judge DUER'S) intention to announce these facts in respect to the deceased with some personal anecdotes of circumstances that had taken place between them, but the learned gentleman who had just spoken (Mr. LORD) had so fully gone over the subject that he deemed it expedient, at the present time, to remain silent, thus giving an opportunity to any gentleman present to address the meeting. His intention, however, was at some subsequent period to publish a full memoir of the deceased, which in due time would be presented to the public in such a form as would render it valuable to the entire profession. He would only add, on behalf of himself and his brethren, that the merits of Judge OAKLEY, as a Judge, could only be properly known to those who were associated with him, and although it might be possible that the loss which the public sustained might be supplied, yet his personal loss never could be supplied.

SPEECH OF MR TILLOU

MR. PRESIDENT: From the commencement of the Superior Court up to the present time, I have been a practitioner in that Court, and I have had almost daily in course with the illustrious person whose death we now meet to mourn. All that has been said by Mr. LORD in reference to his character and qualifications is undoubtedly true as we all know. There were great and powerful points of character in relation to the deceased which rarely, as I think, are found united in the same person. He had undoubtedly all the virtues of a great man. He had invincible integrity in the highest degree. He had firmness. He had gentleness. He had a discriminating mind rarely to be found. United to these qualities was the acquisition of profound learning, not only in the legal department,—not only in the science of jurisprudence in all its branches—not only in its early history and variety, but also in all its sciences, for in belle lettre literature, rarely was it that he could not speak upon any topic—anything that he did not understand and did not know. But it is, Sir, as to his greatness, and his great power as a judge that I will more advert to. It was wonderful to observe, after the trial of a long and complicated case, involving questions of law and fact, in such variety, to perceive, when he came to charge a jury, or deliver his opinion, with what rapidity he would winnow out the truth from sophistry and error, so that the humblest mind could understand it. It was rarely the case that a discomforted individual left his court without entertaining towards him feelings of regard. Perhaps no man has ever filled the duties of that Judge. No man ever expressed him in the true dignity and efficiency with which he performed all the duties of that office. He was a man to be admired for the kindness and attention which he bestowed upon the young members of the bar. On all occasions were they treated with an urbanity and gentleness and liberality that won their confidence, and disarmed them of that timidity which often leads a young man into error, when really encouraged properly, it would tend to develop his talents and his qualifications. Judge OAKLEY always had an equal mind—always a calm manner. The confidence, therefore, placed in him was not only in his wonderful ability and learning, but in his kindness of heart, in his amiable disposition, and in his general excellence of deportment to every one who approached him. He was really loved. It is hardly possible to find an instance where a young man was turned away with a rough answer. Throughout all his long course of service in this Court I have never heard of an instance of complaint against him, either as to his manner or as to his conduct. He has cast a lustre upon that Court which never can be extinguished, and raised it, in conjunction with his brethren, to a state of dignity never excelled by any Court. One point in his character only seems to have been omitted by the gentleman who last spoke, (Mr LORD) and it is this: Besides his great character as a Judge and as a man, he was a most sincere and devoted Christian. Perhaps no man has passed into the other world better prepared to meet his Maker. His life has been one of purity and piety—a most devoted worshiper of his God. And it is one of the great considerations with those who are in limate, or are connected with him in social relations, or in family connection, that during all his life he never forgot his religion. It is consoling to men and to Christians to know that a man of such profound learning, talent and ability, never, in all the varieties and multiplicities of his avocations, ever for a day forgot his Maker.

In rising, therefore, to second these resolutions, I feel that I have paid but a just tribute of respect to one whose official and ordinary life was pure and unblemished, and, Mr President, I second them with the most sincere and heart-felt gratification.

REMARKS OF MR KETCHUM.

Mr. KETCHUM said: A year ago, Sir, the State of New-York had reason to mourn the loss of one of her native sons in the death of OGDEN HOFFMAN. To-day we are assembled to mourn the loss of another born upon her soil and nurtured at her bosom. Standing, Sir, beside the tomb open to receive his mortal remains, and with recollections fresh of all that we know of him, we are compelled to exclaim, as a nation must say, that THOMAS J. OAKLEY was a great man! He would have been distinguished in any age of this country, or of England. If he had been a legislator by higher parliamentary qualification, no man of his time would have surpassed him. As a statesman, a lawyer, or a jurist, Mr. President, it is right that we should say we mourn his loss. I can unite in that sentiment. But when I consider the age in which he had arrived, I rejoice while I mourn, that he was permitted to live so long,—that we were permitted to have so much of his service, and so much of his example. Mr. President, I will address you for a few moments on my personal recollections of the departed. When I was a student and first came to this bar, it was customary that the Supreme Court of the State should sit in the City of New-York once or twice a year. At that time the distinguished members of the bar assembled here in the City—the bar of the whole State—and among those members it is perfectly clear in my recollection that no man distinguished at the bar at that time—no man for clear and lucid statements and logical arguments and dispassionate reasoning—was superior to THOMAS J. OAKLEY. He was dispassionate. He was no demagogue at the bar. He resorted to arts or cunning tricks. He was skillful. He was generous. He spoke to learned brethren to the temple of Truth by a road safe and certain, though unadorned. And, Sir, that style of speaking which rendered him so eminent at the bar was equally fitted for the forum. He was equally fitted for a deliberative body. And you, Sir, remember perfectly well that, at an early day, he was called by the constituents at home, in Dutchess County, which has furnished so much greatness and talent,—which has furnished a SPENCER, a THOMPSON and a TALMADGE—he was called on by them to represent them in Congress. And, Sir, I am old enough to remember what were my feelings as a native of New-York when I read at that time the speeches of THOMAS J. OAKLEY. He stood beside DANIEL WEBSTER, and HENRY CLAY, and JOHN C. CALHOUN, and he was not their inferior. He was not their inferior in sagacity, or in debate; and every man at Washington, and every man in the country who knew them, felt that he was not their inferior. He distinguished himself greatly at about the age of 30 on the floor of Congress. He was great among the great men of that day; and if he had continued in public life he would have been equal to the very best of them as a statesman. Well, Sir, afterwards he went into our own Legislature, and there you will remember how distinguished he was. He was then made Attorney-General, having succeeded MARTIN VAN BUREN, and afterwards he was succeeded by Mr. TALCOTT. New-York had reason to be proud of her Attorney Generals at that time. He was afterwards chosen to Congress, but he disliked it. I believe it was his intention to resign, and about that time—and that is the point I will call your attention to—about that time the Bar of New-York, feeling the necessity of another tribunal to dispatch business here in this City, originated the idea of a Superior Court. They appointed a Committee to devise measures to bring about the establishment of that tribunal. THOMAS ADDIS EMMET was the Chairman of that Committee. It fell to my lot, as an humble member of the Bar, to be a member of that Committee. The bill for that Court was prepared, and in March, 1828, it passed the Legislature, and the Court was established. This Court having been the creature of the Bar, and it is to be remembered now that it is made by the Bar,—the Bar of this City thought they had a right to respectfully indicate who should be their Judges. They met on the 4th day of April 1828, and that Bar meeting was nearly as large as that which I have the honor to address this day, and they balloted for Judges. I have never known of such an operation since nor before. But be it remembered that they balloted for Judges, and that the majority of the ballots present were for WILLIAM SLOSSON, THOMAS J. OAKLEY and PETER A. JAY. If that tribunal had been established, there is not a Court in England or this country, where the administration of the Common Law would have been superior to it in learning, integrity or efficiency. But that selection was not made at Albany. THOMAS J. OAKLEY was the only member selected by the Bar who had the good fortune, and that after difficulty, to be nominated and sit as one of the Judges. He was a Judge made by the Bar and the City of New York. Remember it! He was the only Judge who I ever knew was made by the Bar. Let the public bear it! Let it be remembered every where that THOMAS J. OAKLEY was made a Judge by the Bar. I remember perfectly well at that time that a party came forward and nominated this meeting. What right had they to interfere? They nominated and caused to be elected one Judge, and here he has sat twenty nine years before this community scarcely absent a day from his post. Wherein he man who can say that he has not administered justice in the Superior Court. What is his eulogy? Thirty years of his life which has been spent here without suspicion or reproach. With these remarks I now take my seat.

The resolutions were then read a second time, and passed.

Mr. GERARD moved that the resolutions be published in the daily papers. Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

Important Decision in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—MAY 13.

Before Judge Nelson.

RIGHTS OF MORTGAGEES UPON VESSELS—LIENS.

In the matter of the ship Angerique.—In this matter, as will be recollected, some fifty or sixty libels were filed by material men, passengers and others, against the vessel, and decrees entered in many of them against her. The vessel was sold and the proceeds brought into Court. A libel was then filed by Schuchardt & Gebhard against one-half of the proceeds, claiming to be entitled to the same as mortgagees of one half of the vessel, in preference to all others. Their claim was carried to the Supreme Court at Washington, and the decrees of the District and Circuit Courts, dismissing the libel of Schuchardt & Gebhard with costs, was there affirmed, that Court holding that the only way they could have come in was by opening the decrees in the District Court or by petition.

The Ocean Mutual Insurance Company thereupon filed a petition in this Court, claiming to be subrogated to the rights of Schuchardt & Gebhard, and asking that the Court proceed to examine the matter, and decree that they were entitled to the one half of the proceeds in Court.

The matter coming up before the Court this morning, Judge NELSON said that argument of the petition was unnecessary, as he should hold the law to be that a maritime lien which attached to the res was entitled to a preference over a mortgage, although the mortgage had been duly recorded; that no difference could be made between a lien given by the maritime law and one given by the local law of the State, if the latter was one of which a Court of Admiralty would take cognizance; that the lien creditors having obtained decrees in the District Court, this Court would not review the decrees upon a petition filed in the Circuit Court. That this would dispose of the petition, and accordingly the application of the petitioners must be dismissed.

For the petitioners, Mr. Hamilton. In opposition, Messrs. Benedict, Burr and Benedict.

RICHMOND COUNTY OYER AND TERMINER—WEDNESDAY May 13.

Hon. Charles A Peabody presiding

The People vs. Matilda Decker.—This is the case which excited so much interest last Winter. The indictment charges manslaughter in causing the death of a little girl named Ann Hilton, who was formerly an inmate of the House of Industry in New York. It appeared by affidavits that the defendant was about to be confined, and the case was accordingly sent to the next Court.

The People vs. George W. Daly.—Indictment for an assault and battery on James Halliday. The defendant pleaded another trial. Set down for Friday.

The People vs. Geo. W Daly.—Indictment for perjury. A motion was made by Mr. Jonneau, counsel for Daly, to change the place of trial on the ground that the excitement was so great against the Quarantine that a fair trial could not be obtained in Richmond County. The motion was opposed by the District Attorney, who stated that at the Court at which the indictment was found, it had been put over because Daly said he had no counsel; that it had been further postponed on Daly's affidavit that he could not obtain a fair trial in the Court of Sessions; and now that the case was in the Oyer and Terminer, where he wanted it, he wished it to be again put over because the County would not give him a fair trial, and if the motion was granted probably the next application would be to remove it to New Jersey, on the ground that he could not obtain a fair trial in this State. It was also objected that the Judge could not entertain the motion in this Court. The Judge decided that the Oyer and Terminer could not grant the motion, and if applied to as a Judge of the Supreme Court he could not hear it because it was not in the Supreme Court. Another indictment was presented against Daly by the Grand Jury for perjury, while the motion was pending. After some other criminal matters being attended to, the Court adjourned to Wednesday, A. M.

APPOINTMENT OF EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.

After the adjournment of the Court, the Judges in compliance with the new Excise law, made the following appointments of Excise Commissioners:

Samuel Barton, of Southfield—first class—holds office till Jan. 1, 1861.

Lawrence Hillyer, of Northfield—second class—holds office till Jan. 1, 1862.

Richard Christopher, of Castleton—third class—holds office till Jan. 1, 1863.

Messrs. Barton and Hillyer are the Supervisors of their respective towns. The Commissioners will meet at the Court House, Richmond, on Tuesday next, to receive and act upon applications for license.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS. By ELLIS BELL, (Emily Brontë.) 12mo, muslin, 75 cents.
THE TENANT OF WILDFELL HALL. By ACTON BELL, (Anna Brontë.) 12mo, muslin, 75 cents.
The wondrous power of Currer Bell's stories consist in their fiery insight into the human heart, their merciless dissection of passion, and their stern analysis of character and motive. The style of these productions possesses incredible force—sometimes almost grim in its bare severity then relapsing into passages of melting pathos—always direct, natural, and effective in its unpretending strength. They exhibit the identity which always belongs to works of genius by the same author, though without the slightest approach to monotony. The characters portrayed by Currer Bell all have a strongly marked individuality. Once brought before the imagination, they haunt the memory like a strange dream. The sinewy, muscular strength of her writings guarantees their permanent duration, and thus far they have lost nothing of their intensity of interest since the period of their composition.

NEW TARIFF, 1857,
JUST PUBLISHED,
THE TARIFF; or, Rates of Duties on Goods, Wares and Merchandize Imported into the United States from and after the 1st day of July, 1857. Arranged by E. D. Ogden, Entry Clerk, Custom-House, Port of New-York.
Having published several editions of the Tariff, and being aware of the importance of having it correct, unusual care has been bestowed in the classification of the articles to conform to the new law; and we can, therefore, with confidence recommend it to those who have purchased of former editions, the well-known experience and reputation of the compiler being a sufficient guaranty of its correctness.
Returning thanks to our former patrons, we solicit a continuance of their favors. For sale by the publishers,

ONE PLACE.
STOCKTON'S BOOK AND JOURNAL, for May. Sermon on Current Condition of the Bible: Bibliographical Collections, and Literary Notices. $1 a year: 10 cents a number. All Mr. Stockton's Bible publications, at E. GOODENOUGH'S, No. 132 Nassau-st.

THE SUBSCRIBER WOULD RESPECTfully call the attention of his friends and the public, that after having been in business 25 years, is reluctantly forced to sell out on account of his sight failing, he will sell very low to reduce his stock, until he meets with a purchaser to buy him out: it will be well for the clergy and those that love literature to call and examine his stock, consisting of theological, historical and miscellaneous works; they would save a large per centage.
ABRAHAM MAZE, 237 Bleecker-st., opposite Leroy.

HOUSES AND LOTS FOR SALE.

LLEWELLYN PARK IS A TRACT OF 50 ACRES of land beautifully situated on the eastern slope of Eagle Ridge, (Orange Mountain) with a surface finely diversified, embracing deep ravines, bold, rocky cliffs, a brook of the purest spring water, picturesque old oaks, beeches and tulips and a noble forest of the various native evergreen and deciduous trees.
It is being laid out and embellished with drives, walks, &c., in the modern natural style of landscape gardening, and has been deeded in trust for the exclusive use and enjoyment of the purchasers of the land lying contiguous to the Park.
This tract of land, containing about 300 acres, has been divided into villa sites of from 5 to 10 acres each. It was selected with special reference to the wants of citizens doing business in the City, and yet wishing accessible, retired, and healthful homes in the country, by the proprietor, who adopted this method to secure a select and good neighborhood. Sloping to the southeast, the best exposure for health and cultivation is secured, as well as perfect protection in Winter from the northwesterly winds, while it is favorably situated to catch the sea breezes which prevail in Summer.
The whole tract abounds in pure, soft, spring water.
It is believed that there is no spot within twenty miles of New-York which is in all respects so healthy as the side of this mountain. It is almost the only location so near the City where there is really no fever and ague.
Purchasers of sites, desiring to build of stone, can obtain the material on the premises, free of charge.
The privacy of the Park and all the sites will be secured by a lodge and gate-keeper at the entrance on Valley road, one mile from North Orange Railroad station. Ascending the ridge by the Park drives, three miles of which are already completed, a charming view of the Valley is obtained for many miles around, with New-York in the distance; and finally reaching the top of the mountain, 700 feet above the level of the sea, a magnificent scene breaks upon the view sixty miles in extent, composed of forests, cultivated fields, and country seats, villages, towns and cities, rivers, ponds and bays in the valley beneath, with the Neversink hills at the south; Nyack Mountain, Haverstraw Bay, and the Highlands towards the north; with Long Island, Staten Island, and the Ocean in the east. This natural panorama is acknowledged by all to be one of the finest in America.
Llewellyn Park is distant from New-York City less than one hour, via Morris and Essex Railroad, from the foot of Cortlandt-st.
For ease of access, beauty and variety of scenery, for healthfulness of climate, for the intelligence and moral order of its population, in short, from all those considerations which combine to render a region attractive and agreeable as a family residence, it is believed that the vicinity of Orange, especially the mountain side, possesses advantages not surpassed, if equaled, by any other place in the vicinity of New-York.
For terms and other particulars, apply to the proprietor,
L. S. HASKELL,
No. 44 Cedar-st. and Eagle Rock, Orange, N. J.; or to ROGER MORGAN,
No. 3 Metropolitan Bank Building, Pine-st.

COUNTRY RESIDENCES.

COUNTRY SEAT FOR SALE—SITUATED on Long Island sound, Westchester County, New-York, formerly the residence of William Janeway, three-quarters of a mile from the depôt of the New-Haven Railroad at New-Rochelle, three-quarters of an hour's ride from the City of New-York, on the Boston turnpike road, facing Long Island Sound, about 1,000 feet, with several beautiful building sites with water fronts, good dock, and water enough for largest sized sloops at high tide, good fishing, clamming and oystering, and safe harbor for boats, being protected by the land from all winds; bathing and boat houses. The scenery cannot be surpassed for beauty in the country. Safe anchorage for yachts within five minutes' walk of the house. Contains twenty-five acres of best quality of land, producing fifty tons of the best timothy hay yearly. The grass has been cut twice every season. Sedge enough can be cut for manure and bedding. Fruit trees of all kinds; over 100 bearing apples and cherries, besides plums and pears of best quality. The garden is extensive, and beautifully laid out in beds surrounded with box; valuable ornamental and fruit trees in abundance; grape-vines and arbor; a variety of flowers and shrubbery, and over 100 imported grafted dwarf pear trees; large asparagus and strawberry beds, raspberries, blackberries, currants and gooseberries. The walks are macadamized and graveled, making them dry at all seasons. The stable is now filled-in with brick, with stalls for nine horses; good pump in stable; two good barns, will hold seventy tons of hay; work-shop, two carriage houses, corn crib, bins for feed, cow stable, pig-sty, hen house, water in cow yard, 100 cart-loads of manure; the whole place well fenced. The house is plain cottage built, in best order inside and out, contains 14 rooms, cellar and milk room; good well water at kitchen door; ice-house; a beautiful lawn, covered with forest trees on one side of house; two good cottages for workmen, each two finished rooms and garrets; also, a spring of good water; fish pond, surrounded with willow trees. The household furniture, kitchen utensils, stock of horses, cows, poultry, hogs, garden utensils, hay, boats, &c., will be sold with the place if required. A gentleman wishing such a place for a country residence would find it his interest to call and examine it. As there are several good building sites on this place, a number of gentlemen could divide it among them, and have a pleasant country residence at a small expense. Capitalists will find this a good investment, as property facing the Sound is increasing in value yearly. Apply to SEWELL V. DODGE, No. 238 Bleecker-st.

COUNTRY SEAT FOR SALE—RINGVIEW, the country residence of Mrs. David S. Jones, just beyond the bounds and south of the city of Ponghkeepsie, adjoining the grounds of M. Vassar, Esq. The house is about 50 by 40, two stories and attic, with extensive verandahs and wings, and suitable out-buildings. There are 23 acres of choice land, laid out with taste, with picturesque view of river and mountain scenery. For further particulars, apply on the premises, or to E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 14 Pine st.

It contains parlor, dining-room, library, kitchen, pantries, nine bedrooms, bath-room, hot and cold water, furnace, range, &c.; and is will finished in every respect, and three-quarters of an acre of land, (or more, if desired,) neatly improved, good stable and carriage house. Apply to J. C. SIDNEY, at No. 374 Broadway, or at Spuyten Duyvil. Price $8,000.

COUNTRY RESIDENCE.—FOR SALE OR to let, furnished or unfurnished, at Fordham, a genteel house and five and a half acres of land. The house is 42 feet by 36, is in complete order, within half a mile of the Fordham station, and commands a beautiful prospect. The place is worthy the attention of any one desiring a residence in the country in the immediate vicinity of New-York.

COUNTRY PLACE FOR SALE—BEAUTIfully situated among the hills, about 20 miles from town by Railroad, and three minutes' walk from the depôt; a healthful and convenient residence for a gentleman doing business in the City. Land from three to fifty acres; good house, abundant out-buildings, shade and fruit trees, pure air and fine mountain scenery; also, an elegant villa site. Apply to E. MARTINDALE, No. 167 Broadway, third story, front.

COUNTRY SEAT TO LET FOR THE SEA-SON, OR FOR SALE.—A fine, healthy place, situated on the east bank of the Hudson River, a mile below the new Hamburgh depot of the Hudson River Railroad. For terms and particulars, apply to JOHN P. CROSBY, No. 1 Hanover-st., New-York.

TO RENT—COTTAGES AT CLIFTON, STATEN ISLAND.—This beautiful cottage situated on the heights nearly opposite Fort Hamilton, commanding a fine view of the City and Upper Bay, also a good sea view; a large, well cultivated garden, with a great variety of fruit and shrubbery, and a good lawn, bathing house, summer house and stables, being the former residence of C. Gignoux, Esq. Possession given immediately. Also for sale or to rent, a fine cottage on Flagg-board road, containing two parlors, dining-room, large kitchen and seven bedrooms, with stable, vegetable garden, and about two acres of lawn. It is a desirable location, good neighborhood, and commands a view of the City and Bay of New-York. For further particulars inquire of LEVI COOK, No. 287 Broadway.

TO LET—A BEAUTIFUL PLACE OUT OF town, for one or more years, and possession given immediately; situated one mile from Hunt's Bridge and two miles from Yonkers city; said place contains one large double house 50 feet front, with hall through the centre, all in fine order, having just been thoroughly repaired and painted throughout. The garden contains about one acre of ground, tastefully laid out with fruit and shrubbery, and a never-failing spring of the very best of cold, soft water, carriage house, &c. Inquire of PETER I. VALENTINE, No. 346 4th-av., cor. 28th-st.

FOR SALE—ONE OF THE MOST DESIRABLE country residences in the town of Essex, Conn., only ten minutes' walk from the landing of the New-York and Hartford steamboats, and four miles from New-Haven and New-London Railroad Depôt at Saybrook. The house is situated on a lot containing three acres of the best land in the town, and beautifully located, is of modern style, and furnished throughout with the best materials, calculated for a large family, and within five minutes' walk of four churches, of different denominations, and as near to Hill's Academy and Essex Seminary. For further particulars, apply to J. E. ROCKWELL, on the premises, or to CHAS. H. PRATT, No. 85 South-st., New-York.

FOR SALE—A VERY DESIRABLE RESIDENCE at Westchester, opposite Throg's Neck, and within a short distance of the Sound. The dwelling-house is large and commodious, with handsome grounds attached, and surrounded with fruit and ornamental trees. There are six acres of land in a high state of cultivation, and every part of the property is in complete order. It is easy of access to the City by Harlem Railroad. For particulars, inquire of P. R. WILKINS, No. 11 Wall-st.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURG, PORT WAYNE & CHICAGO RAILROAD CO. PITTSBURG, Saturday, March 20, 1857.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THIS Company are prepared to issue their new Stock, in exchange for that of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies, upon the terms, and in the manner, prescribed in the Articles of Consolidation, viz:
Ohio and Pennsylvania, Interest to July 1, 1856, and 20 per cent premium.
Ohio and Indiana, Interest to July 1, 1856, at par.
Fort Wayne and Chicago, Interest to July 1, 1856, and 6 2/3 per cent premium.
Stockholders in either of the old Companies, who may have assigned any portion of their stock, previous, or subsequent, to the consolidation, (Aug. 1, 1856,) without having had such stock transferred on the books of the old Companies and parties holding the certificates for such stock, are notified that this Company will not recognize the transfer of such assigned Stock, as the full shares of the Interest to July 1, 1856, and premium, have been credited to the original holders. Scrip certificates will be issued to such original holders, in cases where fractional amounts of interest and premiums on the old stock exist.
T. D. MESSLER, Secretary.

CAUTION—TO CAPITALISTS, CONVEYANCERS AND THE PUBLIC.—The public are cautioned against certain mortgages on property in the city of Philadelphia, described as a certain tract or parcel of marsh or crippled land, situate on the west side of the Schuylkill River, north of Market-st. Bridge, formerly in the township of Blockley, and now in the XXIVth Ward of the city of Philadelphia. The undersigned, who executed those mortgages, never had any valid title to the premises, and accepted no consideration for the mortgages in question. He has been imposed upon, and the whole affair is an imposture, well understood in Philadelphia. New-York capitalists are warned against them.

THE ANNIVERSARIES.

American Home Missionary Society.

IMPORTANT PROCEEDINGS.

The Thirty-first Anniversary of the Home Missionary, celebrated at Dr. CHEEVER's Church last evening, was an important occasion, the long disputes of the body having been definitely adjusted. The proceedings were opened by a voluntary on the organ, performed in excellent style by Mr. S. LASAR, and the choir gave the hymns, part of which were original, with unusual vigor and care. The audience was very large. The Treasurer's report announces receipts at $178 060, and expenditures $197,734. The receipts are $15,487 69 less than the preceding year. The regular contributions of the churches, however, are $2 157 69 less; the greater amount of legacies—$8,233—and a special donation of $5,000 in the previous year, making the balance of the difference.

In the Slave States, the number of missionaries, the last year, has been 24—8 less than in the year preceding, and less than in any one year since 1842. In no year since the organization of the Society, has the number of missionaries in these States exceeded 57. The causes of so little progress have their origin in the institution of Slavery.

The annual Report takes up and discusses at length the relations of the Church and the Society to Slavery. It was resolved to deny aid in future to slaveholding churches. On this point, the Report says:

"It has been difficult to find men who were willing to engage in missionary service at the South, when fields so much more inviting were opening elsewhere, and difficult to retain them where they have consented to go. After a full experience, not a few of them have become disheartened, and sought spheres of labor in other sections of the country. In many cases, also, those who have been raised up on the soil have felt constrained to leave the States of their nativity for fields of labor, and circumstances in which to educate their children, in the Free States. There have consequently been large expenditures of missionary funds in the Slave States, with but small permanent results—with but here and there a church that has come to a condition of self support, under the culture of the Society, the last thirty years.

The hindrances to the missionary work arising from the same general cause, have been increased, as the cohesion of the Southern Churches to the institution of Slavery has become more and more decided, and the conviction has been gathering strength, among Christian men in other parts of the country, that the principles of the Gospel require its ultimate extinction. Formerly, the language of ministers and lay men at the South was, "We look at Slavery very much as our Northern brethren do—as a great moral wrong, to be removed before the progress of the Gospel, and we desire your forbearance and cooperation and fraternal aid, to effect this object." Recently, it has been earnestly defended, by the most prominent in the ministry at the South, as an institution of Divine authority, on the same foundation as civil government and the family relation, benevolent and christianizing in its character, to be upheld and extended for the mutual benefit of the owner and the enslaved. Churches, missionary churches, have sympathized in these views, and upholding on the part of their members has increased; the Missionary has begun to be uncomfortable in his place; he may not declare the testimony of God against this sin, nor make the least reference to the enormities connected with it which he witnesses daily. Nay, his very silence awakens distrust, especially if he be of Northern origin: a duty the most grave in its admission to the ministry, and become a sore cate in its defence, or his work as a minister is done, and his personal safety is no longer guaranteed to him.

The sentiments of the great body of those who sustain this Society have been clearly expressed on this general subject, as well as an earnest desire for the recognition of some principle of appropriations to churches in slaveholding communities, which shall be a guarantee to donors that their contributions are wisely and judiciously expended.

The Committee have given to this subject much anxious thought and careful consideration, and have adopted a resolution, the sophistication of which, they think, will be a sufficient protection against the expenditure of the Society's funds in any such manner as to give countenance or support, in any form, to the institution of Slavery, while it will provide for those cases which by common consent, are regarded as exceptional. The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That in the disbursement of the funds committed to their trust, the Committee will not grant aid to churches containing slaveholding members, unless evidence be furnished that the relation is such as, in the judgment of the Committee, is justifiable, for the time being, in the peculiar circumstances in which it exists.

The information contemplated will be sought in a kind and Christian manner, and, we trust, will be freely and cheerfully communicated, as similar information has been in times past, and be of great value to the Committee, not only in determining the propriety of their appropriations, but in vindicating many of the churches aided, and the Society itself, from unjust and injurious aspersions.

The report was unanimously adopted.

The speakers of the evening were Rev. D DWIGHT HUNT, of California, and Rev JAMES DRUMMOND, of Lewiston Falls Me.; and the following resolutions, affirmed by these gentlemen and others, were adopted:

Resolved, That the great importance of California and the Pacific Territories as a missionary field, presents a claim of special importance upon the sympathy and cooperation of the American churches.

Resolved, That it is the imperious obligation of the strong of our country to seek out and succor the weak, and that the American Home Missionary Society deserves our hearty support, as opening one and an indispensable avenue of communication between the one class and the other.

Resolved, That the tendency of the Home Missionary work to promote the unity of the people of this country, commends it to the sympathies and prayers of all good men.

The proceedings concluded with a benediction.

New-York Anti-Slavery Society.

This Society met last evening in the City Assembly Rooms, SIDNEY H. GAY in the Chair. He stated that the Society was auxiliary to the American Anti-Slavery Society which had been holding meetings there for two days past.

CHARLES C. BURLEIGH was introduced as the first speaker. He said that he stood before the audience as the advocate in the cause of human freedom. He desired to witness the total overthrow of American Slavery, not only on political but on strictly moral grounds. He would not talk of expediency, because with consistent men there was no difference between expediency and moral right. Politicians might hesitate, but honest men would not. Politicians might call "hesitation" statesmanship, but he argued that the best statesmanship was never to deviate a hair's breadth from what was absolutely right.

First, then, they were opposed to Slavery, because of its immorality. There were many who tried to prove that it was impolitic, and went no further; but his object was to impress upon the people the moral aspect of Slavery. As for the Emancipation party in Missouri, he had no hesitation in denouncing that. They ought to be called the extermination party, for their object was not so much to get rid of Slavery as to get rid of the slaves. If nobody defended Slavery, as a moral institution, he would contend himself with standing upon the ground of expediency; but, when there were religious defenders of Slavery, such as Dr. LORD, Dr. ADAMS, Dr. SPRING, Dr. BETHUNE, and others, it was needful that the institution should be held nakedly up to too curse of man.

He defied those reverend gentlemen to prove that the Slave system did otherwise than extort labor without wages. It robbed intellect of culture, abrogated marriage, and in one word dehumanized man. The fact was, that these Reverend Doctors were better than they seemed to be. They had an ideal picture of Slavery. They imagined it as a sort of patriarchal institution, a mutual relation of employer and employée with protection and affection and brotherhood about it. This they call slavery, but Slavery was altogether a different thing. Would Dr. LORD say that a system that sprouted marriage was patriarchal? Would he say that labor was patriarchal without wages? Would he say that the relation between a slave and slaveholders was the same as the relation between guardian and ward.

A great deal has been said about the dissolution of the Union. If the perpetuation of the Union were to depend on Slavery, the sooner the Union be dissolved the better. [Loud hisses and cheers. After some time the cheers achieved the victory.] To those who blamed he would put a question—If you saw a shipwrecked man struggling for life, and reaching the shore, catching at a twig that hung within his reach, would you, with a remorseless hatchet, sever that twig, and roll him back to the devouring flood? So was it when the slave had cast himself into the billows, and was struggling to reach the Free States, would you come with the hatchet of the Fugitive Slave Law and roll him back into the fiery sea of Slavery? [Loud cries of "No, no."] Well, every man who cried "No!" trampled on the blood-stained Constitution of the United States.

Mrs. ERNESTINE L. ROSE was the next speaker. After stating that she was unexpectedly called upon, she proceeded to denounce the Constitution of the United States, and to inveigh against America as a land of liberty. BUCHANAN had more right to call himself a Democrat than a Garrisonian.

By their chicanery they prevented the people from appearing at the ballot box and asserting their rights. She had heard a great deal about dissolving the Union. There was no Union, and consequently there was no Union to dissolve. If any one thought there was, let them cross Mason and Dixon's line, and come back and describe the Union. The Union was described last year in the Senate House on the head of Senator SUMNER. The thread of the Union was snapped through when the compromise was abrogated. There was no Union now, but she was sure there would one rise upon the ashes of the other.

They spoke of treason with her. There was no treason except submission to wrong. They spoke of the murder of their churches, and denounced infidels. She wished to know what they meant by the word "infidel." According to her idea, it described a person who promised one thing and performed another. If that definition were received then the churchgoers were the truest infidels in the world. But as it was often used, any one who did not believe that Sampson ran away with the "posts" of Gaza, and that "Jonah swallowed a whale" were called infidels. She was called an infidel, and therefore she was particular about its definition, as she did not wish to be confounded with the 40,000 churches.

WENDELL PHILLIPS was next introduced amid applause. He would have been glad to have addressed the meeting, but his tone was a sufficient indication of his inability to address so large an audience, while so seriously indisposed. He was glad, however, that few words were needed; that facts were speaking louder and more effectively than words could do. But before sitting down he wished to say a word with reference to the American Tract Society. It would be remembered that one year ago a Committee was appointed to whitewash the Publishing Committee. They had just reported. The man who tried to get a sunbeam out of a cucumber was thought insane. These had tried and had succeeded. They had got a sunbeam out of the American Tract Society. And by the way, while on that subject, he had another word to say. His friend, Mr. BERNARD, had said the other day, that he had been on a voyage of discovery, and had failed to find a meaner man than a Northern doughface. He had found one—a certain Dr. F. A. ROSS, a man who had been a slave, but who had inherited his master's property, and now became the apologist for Slavery. He was meaner than a doughface, for a renegade was the meanest of all men. He was to be sent to Synod that was to meet somewhere West. He hoped that if he went there the West would spue him back again to Alabama. But he would conclude, for he was not able to speak longer, with the remark that he was looking for a collision with the General Government. He desired it, and hoped it would soon come. He would have Abolitionists seize the States. He would have SEWARD called home from the hopeless minority in the Senate, and he would give him the State of New-York for a thunder-bolt, and with it, in such hands, he was sure the Carolinas would be annihilated.

He was followed by Miss FRANCES ELLEN WATKINS, of Baltimore, who addressed the American Anti-Slavery Society during the day.

Miss WATKINS retired amid great applause, when Mr. GARRISON came forward and made a short closing address, in which he declared his purpose to sit like Banquo's ghost, that would not down at the bidding of the South, or like HAMAN in the King's gate. The meeting then adjourned: after which was an election of officers for the ensuing year.

The Blind.

The Anniversary Exhibition of the pupils of the New-York Institution for the blind, took place yesterday at the Academy of Music. That vast building was crowded from pit to dome, and hundreds of people were turned away from the doors. The following was the order of exercises: 1. Introduction by the Band; 2. Original Poem by Miss CYNTHIA BULLOCK; 3. Chorus from the "Messiah;" 4. Examination in History; 5. Solo on the piano; 6. Quartette by HAUPTMAN and four part song by MENDELSSOHN; 7 Scotch air by the Band; 8, Solo, "Come unto Him" HANDEL; 9. Examination in Geography; 10. National Hymn by the band; 11. Trio, by MENDELSSOHN, and duet and chorus by the same composer; 12 Grand March by the Band; 13. A Dirge, by HENRY H. PIERSON; 14 Reading from raised print; 15 Solo on the piano; 16 Song, "Jerusalem," by MENDELSSOHN, and "Winged Messenger," by PIEKA; 17. Examination in Arithmetic; 18. Duet Polka by the Band; 19. Chorus from the "Messiah"; 20 Finale, by the Band.

This long programme was divided into two parts, between the first and second of which Mr. COOPER, the Superintendant of the institution, addressed the audience and explained its objects. He dwelt on the mistaken notions which people in general entertain concerning the blind, and invited all present to visit the establishment, and judge for themselves how happy, contented and unembarrassed they were.

The examinations were satisfactory, the pupils being prompt and correct in their answers. The musical portion of the entertainment was conducted with marked ability, the choruses being especially good. It is an evidence of unquestionable enthusiasm in the vocal teacher, Mr. LASAR, that he can induce his scholars to study and retain such difficult compositions as those of MENDELSSOHN and PIERSON. Mr. RAIFF, the instrumental teacher, is also deserving of praise.

The anniversary passed off to the satisfaction of every one.

QUARANTINE

Anchorage for Infected Vessels.

It is a mistake to suppose that unless the buildings at Seguine's Point are speedily rebuilt, our City is to remain throughout the Summer equally exposed as last year to Yellow Fever or other imported diseases. The act under which the Quarantine Commissioners are at work, made it their duty to designate an anchorage ground in the lower bay, for infected vessels. The four buoys are now constructing for this purpose, and they will probably be anchored by the 1st of June. The spot selected for the infected anchorage is about half way from the Great Kills (S. I.) to Point Comfort, (N. J.) and west ward of the Knolls. The Health Officer has a steam-tug placed at his disposal with which to board vessels of this anchorage.

The importance of these arrangements will be seen when it is remembered that the first Yellow Fever cases last year broke out at Gowanus and Bergen Point, and were clearly attributable to the infection of bedding and rags thrown ever from infected vessels. Anchored in the Lower Bay, this great cause of disease will be lacking, at least for our immediate vicinity. We are not sure that our Jersey neighbors will be gainers by the removal, however; for unless the Health Officer carefully restrains vessels from throwing infectious materials overboard, except at particular times of tide, Monmouth and Middlesex Counties are likely to find an infinitely greater nuisance in this Raritan Bay anchorage, than in all the fever hospitals that our State would like to have located at Sandy Hook.

Grand Jury of Richmond County.

RICHMOND OYER AND TERMINER—May 13.

Hon. Charles A. Peabody, presiding. Hon. G. B. Molloifs, County Judge, and Justices Frean and Hilyer, Associates.

Judge PEABODY delivered an eloquent and able charge to the Grand Jury alluding to the recent fire at Seguine's Point, and giving them full instructions as to their duty in the premises. A large number of witnesses were examined before them during the day.

The Grand Jury of Richmond County held their first session at Richmond on Tuesday. The subject of the incendiarism at Seguine's Point was the second or third topic upon the docket.

Among the witnesses subpœnaed were Mr. JOEL WOLFE and Mr. THOS. R. LUSH, of this city. Major GUION, from the south side of the Island, was too first one called.

The questions put to these witnesses were directed to such matters as the ownership of the property, its transfer, the terms of sale, and where the money came from to pay for it. Few questions were asked with regard to the fire.

Mr. Joel Wolfe being called, was questioned by the District Attorney, (Mr. Degroot,) as follows:

Question.—Are you the owner of the property known as the Wolfe Farm on the south side of the Island?

Answer.—I sold it to Mr. T. R. Lush.

Q.—What is Mr. Lush's business? A.—I believe he is a Land Broker, Sir.

Q.—Whom did he purchase for? A.—I understood that he wanted it for a man by the name of Robbins, when he first applied.

Q.—When did he first commence talking to you about the purchase? A.—In January.

Q.—When did you see him again? A.—In February, when he made me a direct offer of $30,000 cash for the place, but I laughed at him and told him that nothing short of $40,000 would buy it; finally he came and offered me $35,000 net cash, and I entered into an agreement, which is on record.

Q.—When was the money paid? A.—On the 1st of May.

Q.—Who paid it to you? A.—Mr. Lush gave me a check for $5,500, which, with $700 he had previously paid, made $6,000, and gave me a bond and mortgage for $35,000.

Q.—Where was that money paid? A.—At my office.

Q.—Who was present? A.—Mr. Lush, and his lawyer, Mr. Tucker.

Q.—Were any of the Commissioners present? A.—No.

Q.—Were you not at the Commissioner's office? A.—Yes, afterward on the same day; Mr. Hall and Mr. Benson were present at the office of Mr. Silliman, where I went at the request of Mr. Lush, who had sold those gentlemen fifty acres for $25,000, in money, which they would not pay until they had obtained a release from me of that amount on the mortgage; upon the payment of that amount I did release the fifty acres sold by Mr. Lush, which included all the buildings.

Q.—Who paid you the money? A.—It was handed to my lawyer.

Q.—Who is your lawyer? A.—Augustus Schell, Esq., (the new Collector,) who afterwards handed it to me.

Q.—Was the money paid by the Commissioners, or by whom? A.—By one of the Commissioners; I would not sign the receipt until the money was paid.

Q.—Had you any furniture in the house? A.—I had.

Q.—What amount? A.—I have not my memoranda present, and do not know the exact amount.

One of the Grand Jurors asked Mr. Degroot, the District Attorney, what all this had to do with the burning of the buildings? The District Attorney replied that he wanted to trace the right of the property in the State.

Q.—Who were in the house at the time of the fire? A.—I understand that there were a colored woman and two men.

Q.—What was the name of the colored woman? A.—Mary Atkinson.

Q.—What are the names of the men? A.—One was Samuel Fitzpatrick and the other James Murray.

Q.—Were you at the grand feast that the Commissioners had on the day of the fire? Did you hear of their having champagne there? A.—I left none there.

Q.—Couldn't they have taken it down with them? A.—That they may have done—I don't know.

Q.—Couldn't the fire have happened from a match which they threw after their grand feast? A.—No Sir, I understand not, for the colored woman said they did not eat there, but at the farm house; she was in and out of the rooms many times after they left.

Thomas R. Lush was then called, and passed through a short ordeal as follows:

Q.—Are you a real estate Broker? A.—All I do in the line is on my own account; I seldom act as Broker.

Q.—When did you first commence to negotiate for the purchase of this estate? A.—Three or four months ago.

Q.—Whom did you purchase for? A.—For myself.

Q.—What did you give? A.—Thirty-nine thousand dollars.

Q.—Where did you get the money to pay for it? A.—I gave my own check on the Mechanics' Bank in Brooklyn.

The other questions were of the same import.

Mr. LUSH denied the right of the Jury to question him upon these purely private matters, particularly as the answers to most of them were to be found in the records of the County Clerk's Office, on the opposite side of the street; at the same time offering to inform the Grand Jury of all he knew of the transaction of the purchase. The Grand Jury admitted the questions were irrelevant, whereat the District Attorney threatened to throw up the examination, but continued it awhile longer. When he had concluded, Mr Lush asked the Jury, "But, Gentlemen, don't you want to know something about the arson case?" [Laughter.] Certainly, answered the Jury; if you know anything about the fire we would like to hear it. Mr Lush said that he had heard Mr. Cropsey say in reference to the burning of the buildings, "We have done right, and would do it again."

Q.—Which Mr. Cropsey was this? A.—I cannot give his name, but I can recognize the man—he is a tall man.

One of the Jurors moved to strike that out. Mr Degroot seemed about to follow the suggestion, when Mr. Lush was permitted to retire.

Up to 4 o'clock P. M. of Tuesday, no person from the neighborhood of the fire, who would be likely to know anything of that event, had been seen at the Court.

MORE FIRES PROMISED

Mr. Voorhies, who has offered his house, adjoining the Commissioners' property, has a man in charge of it, who has been notified by a verbal message that he had better get out of that house, as it was intended to burn it down.

The Coney Island Lease.

The town of Gravesend, after leasing Coney Island to HENDRICKSON & Co., go on to make the following observations: "Saving and reserving, however, to the said town, and the inhabitants thereof all and everything, rights and privileges of fishing, gathering seaweed, mowing hay, and all others the rights and conditions originally granted and contained to the said town, and its inhabitants, in and by the original grants of the lands hereby leased and conveyed." From which it is evident that the people of the town would have the right to fish, mow grass and gather seaweed on the Quarantine grounds, if it and been leased for the purposes of a temporary hospital, unless—(which of course was possible)—the town of Gravesend had consented so to modify the terms to its lessee as to permit the exclusive jurisdiction of the State.

LATER FROM HAVANA.

Arrival of the Empire City—Increased and Increasing Exient of the Africas and Coast Trades—Mutiny and Riots on board American Ships—Business, &c.

The Empire City, S. P. GRIFFIN commanding, left New-Orleans at 8 A. M. on the 5th and arrived at Havana on the 7th at 7 P. M.

The steamship Granada not yet having arrived from Aspinwall, the Empire City landed the California mails and passengers, left for New-York at 9 o'clock on the 8th and arrived here yesterday morning.

The Empire City brings $68,000 in specie, of which $45,000 were from Havana, and $43,000 from New Orleans.

In Havana, left at anchor steamships Isabel and Mexico, the latter having arrived from Vera Cruz an hour before the departure of the E. C.

There is nothing new at Havana. Exchange is looking up: London, 9@9¾ premium; New-York, 2 ₱ cent. discount; New-Orleans, par to 1 ₱ cent. discount. Sugars have advanced. Molasses is reported "hard to find;" Freights are "ditto;" box Sugars are taken at 50c.

The health of Havana is stated to be excellent.

Among the passengers from Havana, the E. C brings Capt. LOVELL, bearer of dispatches to our Government from the United States Minister at Mexico. Capt. LOVELL arrived per steamer Mexico as above.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Friday, May 8, 1857.

On the 29th ult., the British bark Joseph Shepherd, BARKER master, arrived from Swatow, Hong Kong, and St. Helena, 116 days, with 399 Asiatic laborers, under contract for eight years' service in the cane fields of Cuba. The deaths during the voyage are reported as being 56 of the 425 put on board. The receipts under contract since the 10th of April, 1855, have been 10,983, and deaths on board of the various vessels used in transportation, which have arrived, have been 1,825. In the darker brand of this trade with the coast of Africa we are extending business, and our preparations for the coming emigration are unusually large. Many vessels have been purchased and fitted out in the various ports of Cuba for the slave-trade, and the probabilities are in favor of a larger importation this year than was ever before made in the same period.

The grand speculative movement in banks, gives impetus to this branch of our commerce, and many thousands will be invested in the negro trade, from the increased facilities of procuring money, and to carry out the designs of the "Credito Mobiliario" embracing all kinds of productive property, which would have been occupied otherwise in more honest business. Several vessels now in this port, belonging to worthy church-going people down East, are being under discussion for sale;—of course the business for which vessels are wanted cannot be unknown to owners or agents of the property.

Our trade in sugars has not declined under other excitements about us; and prices are firmly maintained at $10 25 to $12 for whites; yellow $7 to $10 do. Molasses is more difficult to obtain, as there is no stock here or at the out ports; Clayed 10¾ to 11 rials per keg. In Freights there is nothing doing, except at ruinous rates, for the immense shipping interests now idle in Cuban ports and to the Gulf of Mexico:—this helps the disposition for sale when it can be effected.

Exchanges have improved, and are prime, with good business tendency for New York 2 per cent. discount; London, 9¾ premium; New-Orleans, par to 1 discount.

The Consul General's office has been the scene of various examinations of American seamen, for mutiny, attempts at murder of officers, &c., which have been connected with great propriety, as well as ability, by Consul General BLYTHE. The captains, being anxious to substitute brute force for justice, have not been remarkably well pleased, to find that their seamen had notions could not be carried out in contravention of law—and are inclined to pour over with indignation. LATE FROM MEXICO.

The Rejected Treaties—Rebellion in the Church—Highway Robbery—Symptoms of the Church Returning to its Allegiance

By the arrival of the Empire City we have advices from the city of Mexico to the 22d of April, two days later than those previously received.

The Mexican Extraordinary of the 22d, referring to the rejection of the Forsyth treaties, says:

"No true friend of Mexico, who has his wits about him, will attempt to excite jealousy and distrust of the good faith and the friendly purposes of the United States towards Mexico. That the Government and people of the United States will find their highest political desires and interests in the stability and welfare of the Mexican Republic, is a supposition that needs no vindication, and the strong and practical good sense of the North American Republic is a guaranty that they understand the proposition and will act in obedience to it."

It is equally true that the United States are just in that position where they can render the greatest service or produce the greatest mischief to Mexico. Her purposes are altogether friendly and pacific, and it has been the business of her diplomacy for years back to persuade Mexico of the fact. Until the accession to power of the enlightened Government of Mr. COMONFORT, American Ministers have labored in vain in this friendly effort. Happily, the liberal views of the President, and peculiarly favoring circumstances opened the door for the establishment of entirely new relations upon a footing of mutual goodwill and confidence, which Mr. FORSYTH taking advantage of, resulted in the negotiations now before the Cabinet at Washington for their consideration. That out of those negotiations will grow up international relations, reciprocally beneficial to the two neighboring Republics, we have no doubt.

The public opinion, both in Mexico and the United States, induced by the newspapers, in reference to the fate of the treaties at Washington, is entirely erroneous. So far from having been rejected with that rudeness and want of national courtesy, which the Trait d'Union charges, the treaties are undergoing the dispassionate consideration of the Buchanan Cabinet. Col. BUTTERFIELD, the Commissioner on the part of Mexico, has returned to this city, and bears with him to this Government the most friendly assurances of the desire of the United States to assist Mexico, not only in her financial need, but to back her in her more serious contingencies. There is nothing in this necessary delay to act upon the treaties at Washington city calculated to lead to offend the dignity of Mexico, or to indicate American indifference to her honor and prosperity. The treaties were objected to because it was physically impossible to do so—receiving as they did, on a moment when the multifarious duties of an outgoing and incoming Administration were absorbing all the time of the members of the Government.

We venture to predict that the result will belie all the predictions of the croakers and grumblers, that the United States will show itself the friend of Mexico, and that substantially the policy of the treaties signed by Messrs MONTES and FORSYTH, will be successful."

The Extraordinary says: "A decree of the Government was issued a few days since, reviving and enforcing certain ancient regulations, whereby the clergy were enjoined to administer the rites of marriage, burial, the holy sacraments, &c., to the poor, free of charge. In pursuance of this decree, the Archbishop issued his order to the same effect to the curates. We understand that the latter have in a body refused to obey this order, and have resigned their charges, to avoid complying with it."

The diligence which reached Puebla on the 14th was robbed at a place called the Barranca de la Coores, about a league from Puebla. The robbers numbered about twenty, and were well armed.

It was rumored that the Archbishop had given in his adhesion to the new Constitution, and that he would preach a sermon in defence of it and the Government.

WEDNESDAY, May 13—P. M.

The telegraph from New-Orleans announces the George Law steamship, of the California line, as having sailed from Aspinwall for New-York on the 4th inst., with the mails and treasure from the Pacific side of 20th April. The treasure list is stated to be $1,700,000. The steamer Africa, of the Cunard line, sailed from this port at noon today, for Liverpool, having on freight $1,533,578 in specie. The shipment appears to have had no influence on the Money Market, which is reported quite easy in nearly all the Brokers, both for call loans and discounts. The Summer dullness of general trade contributes to the inactivity of all new financial negotiations, and there is not much prime business paper making at present. Some few of the merchants who are disappointed in their Western Spring collections, are borrowing on the hypothecation of their best Fall paper. The reports are coming more favorable from Chicago and other lake points as to the movement of Grain to the East, now that both lake and canal are open for navigation.

Before the formal meeting of the Brokers this morning, advantage was attempted to be taken by the Bears, in the Street, of the announcement of the large shipment of Specie by the Africa. About 2,000 shares of Erie were pressed on sale at 41¼@⅜. On the opening of the Board the same feeling was manifested, and sellers' options pretty freely offered on several of the Railroad Stocks. But the market immediately strengthened, and the closing sales of the forenoon were at an advance of ⅛@¾ ₱ cent. on Erie, Southern Michigan and Illinois Central. Cleveland and Pittsburg was an exception, and declined to 44; subsequently, however, recovering to 45¾ ₱ cent. At the Second Board the general market was dull. Some sales of Southern Michigan were made at the close at yesterday's price, 67¾; Erie 41¾@¾.

The subscription to the Guaranteed Southern Michigan Stock has reached $2,923,000, which is already $123,000 in excess of the amount to be distributed on this side; with six business days remaining before the shutting of the book. The following notice was issued to day, calling for a surrender of 50 ₱ cent. of the awarded subscriptions in the common shares on Thursday, 21st inst. This will at once reduce the common stock to $7,000,000. At the same time 15 ₱ cent. in cash will be paid on the new stock.

OFFICE OF THE MICHIGAN SOUTHERN AND NORTHERN INDIANA R. R. CO., No. 18 Wall-street, NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 13, 1857.

NOTICE.—In answer to inquiries made at this office, the subscribers to the guaranteed stock of this Company, are hereby notified that the fifty per cent stock payment on the amount of their subscriptions will be required to be made at the time of payment of the first cash installment.

THE ANNIVERSARIES.

Congregational Collation.

The Collation of the Congregational Union was enjoyed last evening at the City Assembly Rooms. The rooms were opened at 6 o'clock, at which hour already a large company of ladies and gentlemen had collected. At 7 o'clock, in the east side of the hall, separated from the dining-room by a screen, Rev. Dr. THOMPSON (of the Tabernacle) called the meeting to order, and announced as Chairman of the evening, the son of Dr. JEREMIAH EVARTS—a name dear to every friend of missions—WM. M. EVARTS, Esq., of this City. Mr. EVARTS took the Chair.

Rev. Dr. TAPPAN, of Maine, opened the exercises with prayer. A fine band in the gallery filled up all the gaps and very much heightened the enjoyment of the occasion.

Mr. EVARTS then opened with some remarks on the lessons of the Anniversaries, and closed with the suggestion that speakers should remember a well authenticated fact, to-wit: that though a man should talk some twelve or fourteen hours, it would take but ten or twelve minutes to say all his good things in. He then read the first sentiment of the evening.

"The New-York and Brooklyn colonies of Congregationalists send greeting to their New-England mother; as long as she shall continue to send us pure sound and vigorous sons, we shall remain faithful to her teachings and interests."

Rev. R. W. CLARKE, of Brooklyn, responded, happily guessing the greetings that the mother would have sent by him if she had suspected he were going to represent her there. Greetings she would have sent to her RICHARD, at Brooklyn, and her HENRY, (W. BERCHER,) a wild boy in his youth, but now trusty enough to be Captain of a citadel out of which he is perpetually throwing hot shot upon the enemy; and to another HENRY, (BOWEN, it was presumed,) who furnished the powder; to her JOSEPH, (THOMPSON,) who, though he was not sold into Egypt, had lately come from there, and now has the honor of carrying for the Tabernacle; and to her GEORGE, (S CREEVER,) who is judging the Judges. The mother rejoiced to remember that all these preach the Gospel, and never dreamed that preaching the Gospel meant pitching over the heads of all living men into those who lived ten thousand years ago, or that preaching the Gospel to Americans meant abusing old Babylon for its sins. It might have been very safe, very judicious, for the allied forces, instead of going to Sebastopol, had gone off to old Nineveh and sat down about its walls, but if they had they never would have taken Sebastopol. He had felt embarrassed on rising to address so many ladies, but he once addressed one and was so successful there that he felt emboldened to try. He would like to speak for New-England, a word too as to the schools she won't have her children keep, but he must be brief. The smell of supper at the other end of the hall he suspected affected the majority just as it affected him—for there were two places where he always had a good appetite, one was at home the other was abroad.

The second sentiment was read:

"The principles of New-England; they can never die out while Berkshire continues to be an Index Rerum."

Rev Dr. JOHN TODD, of Pittsfield, N S—known in all colleges as the author of The Student's Manual, and everywhere as the inventor of the Index Rerum—replied. He ran over the honored list of Berkshire County men who are now making New-York and Brooklyn famous, and gave the impression very decidedly that in the list of Berkshire emigrants we had a fair index of our best things. He said it was often wondered why Congregationalism had so little adhesiveness. It was because Congregationalists were so busy. The old Waterloo soldier said that in the camp he thought of his regiment's standard and his own brigade, but in the battle he thought of Britain and fought all France. So with Congregationalists in the world's battle; they fought for God; quietly at home they gloried in their sect. When President MONROE was on the top of Bunker Hill, he asked so many questions of old Deacon ———, who was along as the best men to point out the position of the parties when the battle was fought, of which he brought away some scars, demanding where stood WARREN, and where stood that one and the other, that at last the Deacon said, "Why, Mr. President, I am ashamed that I know so little about it, but it happened that I was very busy that day." So Congregationalists were too busy in the fight to take the best care always how their sect prospers. They loved to have their loose jackets on, so as to be ready to work with any or all that would unite with them. He wished every old soldier present could tell his experience through. If he did, no doubt every one would feel himself, in view of his little labor, so exceedingly little man, and indeed hoping to grow smaller and smaller, until he become like a little child again, and so fit for the Kingdom of Heaven. When a child, said Dr. TONN, I saw around me superhuman physicians and tall lawyers. A live Governor would have been too much for one day's vision. But now, lawyer, doctor, judge, or governor, he saw few men over six feet high, or of more than two hundred pounds weight. We shall never more see great men. Where are the eggies that we so much relished then? Where have the great stars dropped?—now we see only small stars glimmering in the sky. The Christian minister as he neared his end, however, must not look only on the dark side. His Divine Master might have felt, as he came near to the Cross—"Here am I, thirty years in the flesh, yet have but twelve disciples, all of them looking for a temporal Saviour, and one of them a devil to betray me; I have brought not peace, but a sword;" and so might have sunk crushed with the weight of his sorrows. But the tan light he saw himself in was as one who had almost accomplished his work, and that work the redemption of the human race. He urged every man not to turn from the shady to the sunny side. They must not, like the clown, tremble at the dancing puppets, but remember Him who pulls the wires, and fear nothing. In conclusion, he said the principles of Puritanism were never held with a firmer grasp in New-England than now.

Rev. Dr. BUDDINGTON, in most flattering and eloquent terms, introduced Rev. DUDLEY A. TYNG, whom he welcomed as a representative of a Church whose LATIMER and RIDLEY and ROGERS were ours as much as the Church of England's, and from which our fathers were separated,—leaving her by no means as loathing the milk they had been nourished on, and he welcomed him, too, for himself, in whose blood flowed some of the best blood of the Puritans. WM. TYNG, one of the early settlers of Boston, was an executor of WINTHROP, and THOMAS DUDLEY, the Puritan, died with a protest in his pocket that, though his body was worn out, his spirit was as young as ever. He welcomed him, though in some respects a non-conforming Puritan, who, as he united their names in his, so in his character united their love of liberty and truthfulness;—one who had already shown that he preferred the freedom of the pulpit above a time-honored Church.

A Quartette Club present sang "God speed the right."

The third sentiment was read:

The Ministers of the Churches of the Empire State—May their sympathies flow together for the cause of truth, as the waters of her lakes and rivers flow together to the sea.

Rev. Mr. THOMPSON, of Buffalo, responded heppily. He confessed to being more than half a Congregationalist—at least his better half was one by education and he had been quite one for 8 years of his ministry.

The fourth toast was read:

The one Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church—While we boast the primitive and Apostolic platform, we do not count our Episcopal brethren guilty of schism while they remain true to the Gospel of charity and of freedom.

Rev. DUDLEY A. TYNG, a small bronzed-faced man, of heavy whisker, but with no moustache, with a white cravat, but no collar, then rising amidst great applause, addressed the company. He always felt, he said, that among the Congregationalists he was treading free soil; the atmosphere was perfumed with the odors that came over bottled in the Mayflower, and is now spreading over all the land, but not quite yet killing out the miasma that spring up about the new settlements of Jamestown. He spoke happily of their differences, and thought in concluding, that he saw the ragged edges knitting together again of that sad wound in the Church's side.

The fifth sentiment was

New-England Patriotism—A living sentiment from early times in the hearts of the New-England Ministry. While they live it cannot die.

Rev. Mr. STONE pictured the patriotism of sundry of the clergy of the old times—old Dr. DAGGER, in his bands, on his black mare, drawing himself up into line and keeping watch against and conquering whole battalions of Hessians until they conquered him; old Dr. STEARNS, who owned a slave, and whose last service received from "Peter" was the stripes upon his own back, because he (the Doctor) had left the garden gate open to the cows, and so came under the law that who ever did that should be flogged; old THOS. ALLEN, who went out and finished a campaign between two Sundays and preached his two sermons upon each of them; of old SAMUEL EATON of Brunswick, Maine, who, when Falmouth, (now Portland) was burned, told the Recruiting Sergeant, who came along on Sabbath day, that seeing it was Sabbath day and Communion day, too, he could not consent to give secular notices, but on the going down of the sun, would—and he did—hold a third service and preached from that text in Jeremiah: "Cursed be the man who keepest back the sword from the Slaughter." And before the next night 40 men were on their march to the field; of old MATTHEW BYLES, D. D., who was incorrigibly set against patriotic prayers and political preaching and was, too, an incorrigible tory. Afterwards, when the rebels took him in hand and set a sentry over him. One day he coaxed the guard to run an errand for him, meanwhile fulfilling his promise to take the musket and himself stand sentry, guarding himself till his accommodating guard returned to relieve him.

The merry and eloquent speaker alluded in concluding to Dr. CHEEVER who began his reforming as a dreamer, but in his dreams was most puissant when most waking men, but now is wide awake.—"God Bless Him" said he, and if any body here is tired of him he has the first place in our hearts at his service.

The band played "Hail Columbia" and afterwards "Sweet Home."

The sixth sentiment was:

The Mother Country—She drove our fathers out, we "take in" her sons.

Rev. Dr. WILKES, of Montreal, confessed he was "taken in" to speak for the mother country whom the preceding speaker had so heartily and so properly abused. He complimented us on our charitable "taking in" so many of "the foe," "the British," "the enemy," &c., and stopped short, knowing that all were anxious to be taking in the creature comforts of the next room.

Dr. THOMPSON read the next toast, explaining that in the early times the Presbyterians were so feeble in New York City, that a Committee of the New England clergy was appointed to take charge of them. It was when JONATHAN EDWARDS was sent over to preach here, but returned shortly, satisfied that it was too contracted a field. The sentiment was as follows:

The Presbyterians in New-York—While we rejoice that they no longer need the supervision of a Committee of Ministers in New-England, we assure them of our continued fellowship in their prosperity, as they had the sympathy of our fathers in adversity.

Rev. Dr. KEESE responded. He gently scored them for claiming all the Puritanism for Independents—Presbyterians were Puritans too. He honored their outspoken independence, and claimed to possess the same. He was born south of Mason and Dixon's line, and believed his native soil. [Applause.] He was born a Presbyterian, and he loved his church but their church and them he loved too. There was no better Presbyterian than those who were converted out of the Independents. Deploring the coming divisions of the Church, he still rejoiced in its unity. With a story about the grim disappointment that he once saw depicted on his brother THOMPSON's face, when, at La Salle, that brother sat down to the slim relics of a feast that fifty hungry Presbyterians had just left, and nothing remained upon the table but a bottle of claret, so sour that not POPE's "Presbyterian sour" would touch it, and an allusion to the supper that was then due, Dr. KEESE sat down, and the Quartette Club immediately sang: "There's a Good Time Coming!"

The next sentiment was as follow:

The successor of Jonah—He lives in an age when the sea of Tarshish is so navigated without the help of whales.

Rev. Mr. WILLIAMS of Mosul, took the house down with the shortest speech of the evening. He had been introduced as the "successor of Jonah." There were others better entitled than he to that honor, "for you remember," said he, "that Jonah made his reputation not because he went to Nineveh, but because he didn't." (Laughter.) When the Lord ordered him to go there and speak, he went the other way. I am not his successor; but there are a good many, even in this audience, who have not yet got out of the whale's belly. (Great laughter.)

The tenth sentiment was read, as follows:

The Pioneers of Christian Civilization in the West—The founders of an Empire greater than COLUMBUS discovered, or CORTEZ conquered.

Rev. President STURTEVANT, of Illinois College, in a few pertinent remarks, responded.

At 10 o'clock the President announced that this part of the entertainment was closed, that an abundant supper was provided in the next room, and that the twelve minutes' restriction of each one's gratification was now removed. Immediately, but without confusion, the immense crowd "went to press" into the supper room. The coffee seemed very fragrant, and no doubt all proved that something else than "reading makes a full man."

The American Abolition Society.

The American Abolition Society held an anniversary meeting yesterday morning in the City Assembly Rooms. The President, GERRIT SMITH, was present, and thereupon Mr. LEWIS TAPPAN one of the Vice-Presidents, occupied the Chair. Soon after the meeting organized, Mr. TAPPAN read the following

ADDRESS:

In the absence of the President of the American Abolition Society, Hon GERRIT SMITH, I am called, as the senior Vice-President, to preside on this occasion. Twenty-five years ago the term "anti-slavery" was hateful to the people of the Free States. Now a majority glory in the appelation. But anti slavery, in the mouths of politicians, means non-extension, and in the minds of the largest part of the religious community, "Slavery sectional—Freedom national." The Bible, the Missionary and the Tract Societies are the representatives of the religious people of the Free States. But the Bible Society elects as a Vice-President a Southern Judge who sentenced to death a free man of color for an alleged attempt to secure the freedom of a slave girl, his betrothed wife. The Foreign Missionary Society affords quasi support to Slavery, by supporting Missionary pastors of churches among the Indians who fellowship slaveholders so members in good and regular standing. The Home Missionary Society is not prepared to disfellowship all slaveholders, and the Tract Society is not ready to call American Slavery a crime or a sin.

While this state of things exists it is necessary to sustain societies which aim at the enlightenment of public opinion at the North on the subject of Slavery. There is the American Missionary Association, which is both a foreign and home missionary society—Anti-Slavery in its principles and history. There is the American Anti-Slavery Society, of which Mr. GARRISON is President, which employs "moral suasion." And this Society, which employs both moral suasion and political action. The question is often asked, what need does this Society differ from Mr. Garrison's Society? The answer is, his society is merely an Anti-Slavery Society, while this is an Abolition Society. That Society believes that the Constitution of the United States is Pro-Slavery, and therefore considers it "a covenant with death, and an agreement with hell." They proclaim "No union with Slaveholders," and urge a dissolution of these States. This Society, on the contrary, while agreeing with Mr. GARRISON that slaveholding is a crime against man and a sin against God, believe also that the Constitution is Anti Slavery—altogether so—in its design and provisions, and should be wielded directly for the Abolition of American Slavery.

While, therefore, we cannot have any moral or religious union with slaveholders, we must have and will have political union with them until, at the ballot box, and by the instrumentality of the government of this country—its legislature, its judiciary and its executive—the whole system of Slavery is annihilated—root and branch—and the accursed system no longer acts as a moral and political cancer upon the body politic, bringing American Republicanism and American Christianity into deserved contempt in view of the civilized world. We insist that the Constitution, interpreted by the legal rules and principles by which other instruments are interpreted, is Anti-Slavery; that instead of sanctioning Slavery, it wages war against it; and that those who administer the government are bound to use it for the protection of the citizens—black as well as white—and the delivery of the country from the great disturbers of its peace and prosperity.

A dissolution of the Union, were it practicable, would be useless and ruinous. Until the free States are sound on the subject of human rights, such a measure would afford no remedy to the evils we deplore. The Pro-Slavery men in the free States compose as large a body, to say the least, as the slave oligarchy of the South. A dissolution of the Union, therefore, would leave the slaves to the tender mercies of the slaveholders, and leave the Pro Slavery men of the free States in our midst. We must labor to save the Union, put an end to Slavery, and have the Constitution what its framers intended it should be, a bond uniting in peace, harmony and freedom the whole people. To this end we must enlighten the public mind; purify the churches; awaken the consciences of the people; send to the State and National Legislatures those, and those only, who read, study, understand and obey both the Bible and the Constitution.

Then Slavery will come to a speedy end without a dissolution of the Union, without a servile insurrection, without, we trust, a display of the retributive justice of the Almighty. God speed the day!

But I will not further detain you, but invite you to listen to shler presentations of truth from those who have been invited to address you on this occasion.

The Treasurer's report was then read, as follows:

Repor of the Transactions of the American Abolition Society during the past year.

Receipts	$6,546 14
Expenditures	6,134 26
Balance in Treasury	$411 88

The Society have published 104,520 copies of the Radical Abolitionist, a monthly paper, devoted to the promulgation of the doctrine of the power and duty of the American Government to abolish American Slavery. Sixty thousand copies have been distributed gratuitously.

The Society has also published the following: The Kansas Struggle, 3,000 copies; Abolition Documents, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, 9,000 copies; Review of Apologies of American Tract Society, 2,000 copies; Peirkins' Sermon, 4,000 copies; Our National Charters, 1,000 copies.

The Society has employed four agents during the past year, and hope to extend its usefulness by increasing the number of its publications and agencies.

Rev. WILLIAM GOODELL then read the following

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the interpretation under which the Constitution of the Republic is generally received and applied, officially and unofficially, is in harsh conflict with the laws of human nature, and the principles of the English language—is absurd, malignant and mischievous—and is, therefore, to be indignantly and loathingly rejected.

Resolved, That the protection of human beings is the essential rights of our common humanity, is the first duty of Society; that Government is an institution of Society and an ordinance of God for this very end; that allegiance is conditioned upon protection, and is due in the nature of things, there can be no legitimate civil Government, however constructed or however limited, that is not bound and authorized to secure to all human beings, within its geographical limits, their natural, inalienable rights, such as life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Resolved, That American Slavery is a most atrocious violation of essential human rights—that from the beginning of our national history, the Nation and its Government have been responsible for its existence—that its tolerance has ever been, and still is, our great national sin—and that its long continuance has at length brought with it a pressure of retributious and dangers, which now render a National Abolition of Slavery a national necessity, indispensable to our national freedom and our nations existence.

Resolved, That by the laws of the living God, man is made in the image of his Almighty Creator, in divine relationship, and moral and intellectual dignity ranked but a little lower than the angels, unchangeably and immeasurably separated by nature from the brute creation, and that all usage, customs and judicial decisions which reduce men to the condition of brutes by rating them as property, are enormous customs and decisions in open violation of the laws of God, and ought to be disobeyed, despised and branded as vile and wicked before all the people.

Resolved, That we repudiate all compromise with Slavery, as being iniquitous in principle and suicidal in practice; that we have no confidence in any expedients for the limitation or restriction of Slavery, short of its utter and universal extinction, throughout the whole country; that we consider the Constitution amply adequate to that purpose, and, therefore, we call on all the friends of liberty, North and South, to unite in availing such constitutional powers for the direct abolition of Slavery, as the means of overturning the oligarchy that oppresses both the white man and the colored man.

Resolved, That the doctrine contained in the decision of the Supreme Court, in the case of DRED SCOTT, with all its atheism already, barbarism, and deadly hostility to American freedom, we regard as the natural and logical result of the sentiment that Slavery has a legal and constitutional right to exist, and to be tolerated in the Slave States, and hence a repudiation of that doctrine by the people of this country, must be the first step toward neutralizing the effects of the decision, and of affording protection, either to our colored citizens, to the free settlers in Kansas, or to the liberties of the people in general.

Resolved, That inasmuch as all just government and righteous political action must have their basis in the principles of morality and religion, we earnestly implore all religious teachers, churches, missionary and publishing religious societies and committees, not only to forbear all religious fellowship with slaveholders, and commodity with slaveholding, but in all suitable ways to bear testimony against our great national sin, as they would against all other great sins, and instruct the people in their duties to the oppressed in accordance with the teachings of the Saviour, who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Rev. BERIAH GREENE was the first speaker introduced. He moved the adoption of the resolutions, and said he considered them worthy of universal admiration. The natural results of the establishment of justice were, he said, clearly described in the introduction to the organization of our government. Said he, there exists among us a thing which bears the name of an "institution," in which all the objects described in the constitution are ruthlessly trampled under foot, and divine law utterly repudiated. This "institution" has attained such a commanding prominence as to exercise a controlling national influence. It has become the institution. It is the existence of this institution which had called the convention together—which had occasioned wide-spread alarm, and the deepest solicitude for our national security. It is alleged by those who speak authoritatively, and those who must content themselves to speak flippantly, that there was a secret understanding, and that the terms in the constitution here used are to have some other interpretation—that our fathers understood among themselves that they meant no such thing as they said—that while they talk of great injustice and the general welfare, after all they understood each other full well to make no sacrifice to attain any such results—that in their aims they intended no such thing. Of this we are very confidently assured; and those who hold up our fathers in this respect, bid us look upon them with deep reverence, and tell us if we do not recall their memories with veneration, we are not patriotic. At the same time they hold up their character as base and infamous. Just as if a minister should hold up God as a very fiend—a most essential devil—and then bid us fall down and worship him as worthy of all love and worship. If this character of our fathers was established, he could feel nothing further but deep abhorrence. He then referred to the clauses of the Constitution that are quoted to show that Slavery is embodied therein. There was not, he said, a word in our mother tongue more definite in its meaning than the term persons. They to whom this term is to be applied are described simply and absolutely as persons. Has this word a signification of its own? There is another term used in distinction from this, and that is property. These are distinct terms, and you must not confound them. You may take one of these words, property, and torture it as you will, and you can never raise that which it describes to the dignity of persons. Property, in all cases, belongs to personality. Strike personality out of existence and where is property? Suppose there is no I myself, and where would you find property? If there is no I, where is mine? Your possessive pronouns depend entirely upon your personal pronouns. We are required to fall foul of our own mother tongue, and confound things entirely distinct, by those who seek to justify Slavery by the Constitution. Slaves are neither treated as persons or property—or, rather, they are treated sometimes as persons and sometimes as property. By whose authority are we thus to rush into conflict with the English language, and tear out the heart-strings of human nature and trample them under foot? If we attempt to digest such absurdities, we shall find ourselves choked and suffocated in the attempt. Have we derived our rich privileges from these men, who would thus have us torture words? No! We appeal to the Almighty God. Every man is to receive the Constitution for himself. As the Indian Chief, when King GEORGE held out his hand for him to kiss, said, "No! No King, too!" so we approach the graves of our fathers, and interpret their words for ourselves.

He was followed by Mr. WILLIAM GOODELL, who read the resolution again. He repeated that it was the duty of every Government to protect the natural rights of all its unoffending people, and that, if such protection were not afforded, the people were not bound to sustain it. He entered into a somewhat lengthy consideration of the power of the General Government over the subject of Slavery, and arrived at the conclusion that no State Legislature could pass a Personal-Liberty bill, while allowing the National Government to have anything to do with the existence of Slavery.

SPEECH OF FREDERICK DOUGLAS.

I have traveled four hundred miles and more to attend this abolition meeting. I am not discouraged by the present aspect of the country, but rather feel encouraged. It has nothing to lose, but all to gain. Starting with nothing, all was clear gain. There has never been a real victory over the Anti-Slavery movement, but it has been rolling on all-powerful, and will eventually be triumphant. Many efforts have been made to settle this question by the wisdom of our statesmen by a compromise—that is the name our legislators gave it. [Applause.] Then there was another settlement in 1835, when JOHN QUINCY ADAMS advocated it. It was settled again by the annexation of Texas, and then again in 1850, by declaring the black monstrosity of human bondage should find admission into this Union. The Fugitive Slave bill was to settle it, and four years afterwards it was again settled by what is called the "Douglas settlement,"—the scamp, I wish he had another name. [Laughter and applause.] Now we have another settlement, called the "Taney settlement." The fact that there is no settlement must greatly encourage us. I have no idea that the Taney settlement will lull the nation to sleep upon the subject of Slavery. They provide that there is no justice or mercy for the black man. No outrages that may be committed upon them will be regarded within the Temple of American Justice, for there they will receive no consideration. It is settled by that decision that we are not and cannot be citizens, but only regarded as property. Wherever the Constitution extends that right of property must be regarded. This is peculiarly the colored man's question. It is a question of colored men's rights in this Republic, and he has everything at stake in this controversy. While my hair is woolly, my nose flat and my skin dark, this will be a colored question. There are, however, some colored men who are not exactly of African descent, but partly of Anglo-Saxon and Mongolian descent. Formerly the Anglo Saxons were the slaves of the Celts.

I will now examine the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, which cannot stand or injure us, for it oversteps the modesty of nature and accomplishes its own defeat. A huge judicial lie has been palmed off upon you. You cannot look upon us but as human beings with the same feelings and having the same destiny as yourselves. You must brand this infernal decision as a lie before God. Happily for us, human rights have been decided in a higher Court than that of the United States—the Supreme Court of God Almighty. The Supreme Court cannot undo what God has done, which is to create all men free. Man was born with this right, and it was his before they comprehended it. Some have laughed at SEWARD when he talked of a higher law, but Lord BROUGHAM told us of that long ago. Freedom is inherent in us, without any declaration of Judge TANEY. I am not afraid of this decision, for it will increase agitation, and the effort will not silence the question. Agitation will continue. WEBSTER, CLAY, and CALHOUN, who have undertaken to put down the movement, have been silenced by it. Judgments have come and will come upon us if we continue Slavery, Kansas, the striking down of SUMNER, and other things, and the crushed worms in the Southern States who have been whipped into submission—these worms from whom we never expected one manly—movement will turn against their oppressor. I believe that the judgment of God is shown in the poisoning at Washington, for when men whip and prostitute their cooks they must expect to meet death in the pot. Don't enslave me to cook for you. [Laughter.] The insurrections in Kentucky and Tennessee are hopeful signs. No sign of encouragement was so hopeful. I am satisfied that we must do something like what the white people have done. We are regarded as quiet, pious people, who can shout hymns, and are as good as other people, but it is said we do not love liberty well enough to die for it, but the insurrections that I have alluded to give the lie to it. The negro who was whipped to death with a view to extract from him the names of his confederates in the late insurrection died a martyr to his cause. We have no right as individuals to go out of it until we put down Slavery. We are responsible in the Union for Slavery, and going out does not free us from it. Within or without the Union, you are responsible for Slavery, and you are bound to use every means to put an end to the Slavery system. The numerical, intellectual, moral and literary power, is north of Mason and Dixon's line—among the Northern and Anti Slavery States, and they alone should govern. I do not agree with those who say it is to their duty to go outside of the Union to abolish Slavery. The Constitution does not recognize Slavery.

Mr. REMOND said that he should be happy to meet the orator on any platform that he might select to discuss the question.

Mr. DOUGLASS said that he should be happy to meet him any evening after Wednesday to discuss that subject. And now, as there were pistols and coffee for two, he would retire.

The meeting then adjourned sine die.

American Temperance Union.

The twenty-first anniversary of this Association was held last evening in the Central Presbyterian Church. The attendance was by no means large.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. Dr. JOHN MARSH. He stated that, owing to illness, the President of the Society, Hon. GEORGE N. BRIGGS, of Massachusetts, was prevented from attending. He read a communication from Mr. BRIGGS, in which he refers to the license law recently passed by the Legislature.

Rev. Mr. DENNISON, of Buffalo, then offered prayer.

The annual report was read by Rev. Dr. MARSH, the Corresponding Secretary. It alluded to the fact that a system of license had succeeded a free trade in liquor. Connecticut, Indiana, Wisconsin, had sunk into apathy on this subject. On the other hand Maine, New-Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Michigan and Iowa, maintained the law. England, Scotland and Wales were making rapid strides towards a prohibitory law. Other parts of the world were adverted to, where there are hopeful indications. The Report closes with the expression of regret that no more has been accomplished during the past year. A resolution is appended that the friends of Temperance seek in future their great dependance more on moral than on legislative influences, and yet that the sale of intoxicating liquors should not be licensed beyond the license allowed to any other civil and moral evil. A special Temperance Press is commended as necessary and obviously very useful.

The Rev. RUFUS W. CLARKE, of Southwick, then addressed the assembly. The great question was, whether in this country 400,000 drunkards should be permitted to proceed without molestation. It was not a one-sided issue, nor a thing for one-idea men. And yet we have to thank God for one-idea men—FULTON, for instance, or NEWTON and his law of gravitation. The speaker rejoiced to see the question agitated either in the pulpit or on the platform, or in the Legislature—any where, if there be power. The reverend gentleman regarded the Prohibitory Law as growing out of the civilization of the 19th century, and told several illustrative anecdotes, interspersed with very harmless attempts at drollery. The idea of "moral character" as a pre-requisite for a rum-seller, was rather cleverly satirized. The necessity of "backbone" was dwelt on as a qualification especially for legislators. Drugged liquors came in for denunciation. It was "green vitriol," "Prussic acid," and the so-called "sacred rights of property," against sobriety, health and common sense. Little, emaciated children are mostly the offspring of drunken parents. Intemperate fathers frequently have children more or less idiotic or unintellectual. Many other broad and general principles were excellently illustrated—some of them by stories of an amusing, others of a deplorable character. There was a deal of laughter, especially among the ladies, at the funny anecdotes of the reverend speaker.

The Rev. THEODORE CUYLER, D. D., was the next speaker.

Rev. T. L. CUYLER said: This temperance cause of ours, Mr. President, is like the old Stuyvesant pear tree. As I passed the veteran tree on the Third-avenue, to day, I noticed that it is still "fair and flourishing." That tree was a veteran when PATRICK HENRY was pouring his red hot eloquence into the Virginia House of Delegates and WASHINGTON was encamped on Dorchester Heights; when CLINTON was yet a schoolboy and WEBSTER was unborn; when CHATHAM was yet thundering in the British Parliament and JOHNSON was growling in the literary clubroom. But it is blooming still. To day it is white with May blossoms; to-morrow it will be green as an emerald with Summer leaves. So with our good old cause. Its "leaf never withers, and whatsoever it doeth shall yet prosper."

To be sure, Sir, we have had wintry days. Things have looked discouragingly lately. But the truth is an everlasting plant; Satan never yet cut the limbs so close but that they grew again. The great questions for us to-day, are: 1st. How shall we restore an earnest tone of public sentiment in behalf of total abstinence and prohibition? The two must go together. It is idle to separate them, or raise foolish conflict between them. As well set a man's hands fighting his feet. We need both; we must have both. The English people are just now most unwisely setting the two into opposition to each other. Whereas moral suasion and legal action are Siamese twins; you cannot make one live without the other. Let no moral suasionist cease to battle for prohibition, let no prohibitionist forget that the support of all good law rests on the moral conviction of the people, and these come from the spread of truth.

The second practical question is "What shall we do as to the new License Law?" Shall we ignore it? Shall we assail it? or shall we try hard to enforce it? For one I say, let us enforce it thoroughly so as to make it as prohibitory as possible. It will not answer for Temperance men to set the pernicious example of despising law! No, No. This is not the law we asked for; but it is the law our Legislators have given to the Empire State. Let us stand by it. Abominable and wicked as is the principle of licensing men to sell poison and pestilence and perdition, yet this new law does not require the granting of license. It only allows the licensing of dram-shops under certain conditions. If the Commissioners see fit to withhold licenses they can do so, and then we can punish severely the unlicensed vender. I earnestly hope that the friends of Temperance will everywhere sustain nobly the Commissioners of Excise in refusing all licenses to keep a tippling house. This law requires backbone to enforce it; but without that, the original Maine Law would be worthless.

Besides the possibility of prohibiting the sale of liquor, the new law has other features which give it a strong claim for a fair, impartial trial. It forbids the opening of a grog-shop on the Sabbath. It requires Railroad Companies to keep sober employés. It forbids the sale of liquor to servants and minors. On election days it puts the ballot-box out of the intolerable stench of the rum-bottle. If men ought ever to be sober it is when they are made "the powers that be" to control the policy of the nation through the ballot. The lowest tyranny on earth is the tyranny of a drunken mob led up to the polls by a pot-house partisan, as bullocks are led up to the shambles.

Mr. CUYLER urged upon his fellow reformers the need of bold-on-stiveness and patience in this good work. WILBERFORCE toiled through a whole generation before the accursed slave-trade was pronounced and punished as piracy. Opinion grows slowly; but, like the Stuyvesant tree, it survives its planters and bears fruit through the ages. We must put our trust in truth rather than in majorities. He who has God on his side is always in a majority. GALILEO was once in a minority of one; so was COLUMBUS; but they have both brought over the world to their positions. The day is coming when the whole civilized world will as surely believe in NEAL DOW's moral discoveries as they do now in the results of the Florentine's telescope and the Genoese navigator's compass, after a hymn from the choir,

Mr. SINCLAIR, from Scotland, addressed the audience.

He said that from the observations he had made in this country, where he arrived only three months ago, he had not met with that abandonment of the efforts of the friends of Temperance, he had been led to expect. What good cause has not been wounded in the house of its false friends. It was so in the cause of religion, but that was no argument against its truth. Of the 24,000 commitments at the Tombs, he could not find that during the last six years there had been more than two temperance men in that prison. He regretted the difficulty of obtaining accurate statistics to carry home with him to Scotland. The Scotch had got so accustomed to value correct tables, that they could hardly investigate any subject without their aid. He was delighted to find that reformatory institutions take the lead in America, and they are made up as he believes of the children of drunkards. He thought it important to determine whether it be not literally and absolutely so. Men are never more moral than the law—on this account, he regretted we had come back to a license law. Scotland could not take such rapid steps as America, but her steps were surer. The Scotch deliberated, but it was to save retrograde movement. Their inquiry is, What is the next step? making the footing always firm and good. In Scotland, closing the liquor-stores on the Sabbath had diminished the number of criminals one-half. Time only could show whether it would have the same effect here. Why not? One of the prisons in Edinburgh is to let, and there will soon be another. The Scotch cannot (he says) comprehend how it is that where every man is an equal law-maker, the people are such notorious law-breakers. Now, the Scotch reverence and obey the laws which they have no hand in making. The Americans obey such laws as they have "a mind to." What do they mean by a law being right and lawful, yet not "constitutional?" Is that which is "constitutional," something which is above that which is right. Have you, said he, some higher standard than that of right and law? The speaker hardly knew how to report the matter on his return. He commended the Sunday Schools and denounced the liquors which were not correctly designated merely as alcoholic.

Mr. SINCLAIR proceeded to argue the general question of temperance in a very forcible and perspicuous manner, and though the hour was getting late, the interest of the meeting showed no diminution to the close.

The Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents.

The Convention of Delegates from various Houses of Refuge in the United States entered upon their third and last day's session at 10 o'clock, at Clinton Hall. Mr. ISAAC COLLINS, of the Philadelphia House of Refuge, the President in the chair.

The discussion upon the resolutions offered at the previous day's session was resumed. The following resolution was the only one adopted:

Resolved, That committals to the House of Reformation shall always be till the children are of age, to be released only at the option of the managers of such Reformatories, that the object of such committals is not punishment but reformation, and that no delinquent should be discharged until satisfactory evidence of reformation is given.

The nine resolutions offered in connection with the above it was voted to let lay over till the next annual meeting, in order to give them more thought and further discussion.

A large number of delegates spoke to the different resolutions, giving their views as to the best general management of the inmates of Houses of Refuge. Some of the resolutions, however, were thought to be of most vital import to the interests of those placed within the walls of reform ory institutions as the resolution acquired. The evils above all evils in the management of Houses of Refuge, was unanimously observed to be not committing the inmates for a long enough period. Under the present system of short committals, it was urged that the inmates did not go away reformed. By being subjected to longer detention they would each be learned a good trade, and go into the world at an age when they were better able to resist temptation. It was thought that the resolution should be passed, now that the attention of different State Legislatures might be called to the fact, and take action accordingly.

The reports of Standing Committees were presented. Mr. WOOD, Superintendent of the Western House of Refuge, Rochester, New-York, from the Committee on a uniform system of reports, submitted the report of his Committee. The Committee recommended that the annual reports of Houses of Refuge should give more extended and uniform details relative to their respective institutions, as follows:

1. The whole number received since the opening of the Institution.
2. The number received during the current year, and offences for which committed.
3. Number disposed of during the year by being discharged, escaping and death.
4. Nativity of all the inmates.
5. Average age of those received.
6. Their domestic condition before entering, whether parents are dead or living, temperate or intemperate.
7. Literary attainments on entering and progress during term of detention.
8. Minute details of the receipts and disbursements, showing as nearly as can be the cost per capita for maintenance, exclusive of buildings and permanent improvements.

Hon. HENRY BARNARD, of Connecticut, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Reformatories, made an exceedingly interesting verbal report touching the number, history, condition and government of houses of refuge in Europe. He mentioned the receipt of a number of reports, as also an invitation to attend an International Congress of Reformatory Institutions, to be held at Frankfort-on-the Maine, on the 12th of next September.

The two reports were accepted. It was decided, also, to send delegates to the International Convention referred to. The naming of these delegates was left with the Business Committee, to be agreed upon at a future period.

Mr. PACKARD, of Hartford, submitted the following questions to the Convention, which were referred to a Committee to report upon at the next Convention:

1. Would you prescribe any general rule as to the age over or under which boys or girls shall not be admitted to a Reformatory?
2. What has been your experience or observation as to the average age of those who have derived most benefit from a House of Refuge?
3. Is there any objection to binding several children to persons living in the same district or neighborhood?
4. Have you had any difficulty in finding employment for inmates, and if so, by what means and to what extent has it been obviated?
5. What has been your experience or observation as to the trades or business to which it is best to bind the inmates of a Refuge?
6. To what extent and by what means is religious instruction given in connection with secular?
7. Is any special attention given to the improvement of the present habits and manners of the inmates, particularly cleanliness and propriety?
8. What is the best method of employing the Sabbath, and what auxiliary sources have you found most valuable, to secure a proper observance of this day, without weariness and disgust to the pupil?
9. Do you approve of associating together under any circumstances boys and girls committed for truancy and filial misconduct, but without any imputation upon their honesty or chastity with those committed on a charge of felony or prostitution?
10. Would it be wise (if practicable) to compel parents to contribute to the support of their children in the Refuge?
11. What would you regard as the chief points to be kept in view in selecting a site for a Refuge and in the construction and arrangement of buildings?
12. That on the leading considerations that should determine us on a longer detention of an inmate in a Reformatory is unexpedient.

Closing the Convention, resolutions were passed returning thanks to the officers and managers of the New-Jersey House of Refuge for the hospitality shown to delegates in attendance from Houses of Refuge in other cities, as also to the venerable President for the able and impartial manner in which he had presided. In reference to the latter, the President made some very feeling and touching remarks. It was agreed to hold the next Convention in this City on the second Tuesday of May, 1858.

American Congregational Union—Business Meeting.

The business meeting of the American Congregational Union was held yesterday afternoon, in the lecture-room of Rev. Dr. CHEEVER'S church, in Union-square. Rev. Dr. WALKER of Ohio, offered prayer. The chair was filled by the President of

THE MYSTERY OF JANE EYRE.

The most ambiguous apparition that has ever risen in English literature, was CURRER BELL, —a literary ephynx—an anthor whose sex and history were alike mysterious. When Waverly first startled the world, whatever donbt there might have been as to the individual from whose fertile brain that marvelous fiction had proceeded, there was no donbt whatsver that it was the production of a man, and that he was a Scotchman. But CURRER BELL might be a man or a woman. There were parts of the work that could only have been written by a woman, and parts again that could only have been written by a man. And then, to add to the embarrasement of the literary world, and heighten the mystery which involved that work, came the weird romance of Wuthering Heights, by ELLIS BELL, which could hardly have been written by either man or woman. The mystery was still further deepened by the Tenant of Wildfell Hall, by ACTON BELL, and a volnme of poems by the three BELLS. These various works had enough in common to have been all written by the same hand; and what was very certain was, that whether CURRER, ELLIS and ACTON BELL were one person or not, they had shared a common fate, and the dark shadow of some deep calamity enshronded the souls of all three. The deep and solemn sadness that pervaded these remarkable works; the wail of a distressed spirit; the utter hopelessness, the wild and dismnl tone that seemed to rise from them, told that whoever wrote these tales had been stricken by an incnrable sorrow, and that life had presented to them its dreeriest and most barren aspects. The vivid descriptions of external natnre which they contained, were full of sleet, and snow, and howling blasts; of cheerless moors, of dull and leaden skies, and etunted herbage. The characters were strange, repulsive beings, rude in speech, and brutish in manner; yet, runniag like a golden thread through this harsh and gloomy woof, there was ever present the feeling of a gentle, religious, refined, and deeply sympathetic nature. The artist was unmistakably a high-sonled and tender creatnre, bnt the materials in which he worked were of the hardest, roughest, and most repulsive nature. On the appearance of Shirley, a glimmering of light began to dawn npon this mystery of the BELLS; then, with Villette, came more enlightenment, and it was reported that CURRER, ELLIS, and ACTON, were the assumed names of three gentle sisters named BRONTE, two of whom had already passed away, before even their existence had become known to the world. Then the death of the other was announced, and the mystery still remained of who and what they were, and what was that heavy grief, that dismal suffering, which the writings of each of the sad sisters so painfully proclaimed.

In the life of Charlotte Bronte, by Mrs. GASKELL, the dark secret is explained, and the mystery of Wuthering Heights, of Jane Eyre, and the Tenant of Wildfell Hall is unraveled, in one of the most remarkable revelations of literary history that has ever been given to the world. It is a cause of congratulation that the materials for the composition of this Life were placed in hands so perfectly competent to the execntion of the work as those of the author of Ruth and Mary Barton. No other living author could have done so well. Her affection for the snbject, her personal knowledge, her previous experiences, and her natural genius, all fitted her for the work, and the manaer in which it has been executed entitles her to the gratitude of the literary world. There might have been a better arrangement of the matter, the descriptions of local scenery and history might have been curtailed with advantage, and the letters, which interrupt the flow of the narrative, would have lost none of their interest by being placed together in a supplement. But we are not disposed to find aay fanlt with the manner in which the author has chosen to develop the character of her snbject. She has presented us with a piece of family and individual history which is more fascinating than any romance, and which few can read without profit. Its effect is that of a moral tonic on the mind, and, while it thrills the nerves and engrosses the imagination, it gives strength to the religious fibres of the heart.

Mrs. GASKELL commences her narrative by showing us the tombstones of the whole BRONTE family, excepting only that of the head of the fated band, who still survives in his desolate home, bowed down by the weight of years and accumulated sorrows, a strange, stern, silent and almost sightless old man. Seven tablets in the gloomy old Church of Haworth record the deaths of Mrs. BRONTE and her six children. Brief, but melancholy memorials of an entire family.

PATRICK BRONTE was the son of a humble farmer in the North of Ireland, and having nothing to hope from his father, at the age of sixteen he had the courage and strength of mind to emancipate himself from the dependent condition to which he was born, by undertaking to educate himself for a higher sphere of life. While gaining his education he supported himself by keeping a public school, and, at the age of twenty-five he entered St. John's College, in Cambridge, England, where he remained four years, when, on obtaining his degree of B. A. he was ordained to a curacy and removed to Yorkshire. He never returned to Ireland, and while in his first curacy he wooed and married Miss BRANWELL, a Methodist, and a native of Penzance, in Cornwall. He was a tall, powerful and handsome man, and she a slight, small and delicate woman. They were married at the close of the year 1812, and first lived at a cold, wild and desolate place called Thornton, where their daughter CHARLOTTE was born on the 21st of April, 1816. In the year 1820, with his wife and six children he removed to Haworth, a still wilder and more desolate place in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Mrs. BRONTE was then in failing health, and all of her six children appear to have inherited her delicate organization and feeble health, while, with the exception of the only son, they inherited the indomitable will and intellectual traits of their father. Haworth was naturally unfit for the residence of human beings; it is so cold and bleak that none but the hardiest plants indigenous to a northern clime will grow there; trees there are none; it is on the side of a steep hill which is exposed to fierce blasts, and is nearly always enveloped in mists or covered with snow. But a strange neglect of all the necessary protections from the rigors of such a bleak and exposed situation rendered it a peculiarly unfit place for the residence of a delicate family. The parsonage, which is an old stone building, with a roof covered with heavy flat stones, because a less solid covering would not be able to resist the howling blasts which constantly sweep over it, is built on three sides upon the churchyard, which is terribly full of graves; and the unwholesome exhalations from the damp earth, as well as the dismal sights which the abode of the dead presents, were calculated to depress both health and spirits, to undermine both body and mind. The house has stone floors and stone stairs, which were uncarpeted, and the little room set apart and used for the children's study had not even the convenience of a fireplace. The parsonage of Haworth was cold without and cheerless within. It was a house without a smile—a tomb-like residence for the living among the last resting-places of the dead. The father of this doomed family was a man of strange passions and ideas. He was subject to fits of gloomy abstraction, and to relieve his feelings of angry violence he would fire off his pistol at midnight, while his feeble little wife lay moaning on her death-bed, and his timid children were often disturbed in their slumbers by his savage methods of easing his disturbed temper. Another of his expedients for giving vent to his anger without making nse of unseemly langnage was cawing off the legs of chairs and tables. The impression made upon the minds of sensitive children by snch acts of violence in a parent remain forever, and sadden the whole conduct of their after life. To teach his children the worthlessness of gay attire he burned up their shoes, because they were of too brilliant a color, and tore the silk dress of his feeble wife into strips. He would not allow his motherless daughters to eat at the same table with him, and, to harden their nerves, deprived them of all animal food, and gave them only potatoes for dinner. When his wife died, which was soon after they removed to Haworth, her maiden sister came from Cornwall to oversee the family affairs; but she was an invalid, and was confined nearly all the time to her room. The children had no other companion than Tabby, an old Yorkshire servant, who told them stories of grim superstition, and filled their imaginations with the strange legends of that wild district.

One sorrowing event followed another; four years after the death of the mother, MARIA, the eldest daughter, followed her, and in another month, ELIZABETH, the next sister, was added to the dead. CHARLOTTE was now the oldest of the flock, and at the tender age of ten she was called upon to act in the place of a mother to her two younger sisters and brother. They had no companions, and their only recreations were walking on the wild moors in the day time, and at night huddling together in in the dark—for they were denied the expensive luxury of a candle—and telling stories. As they grew older they wrote stories, and had a magazine to which they contribnted articles in the style of the Spectator; they were high tories, because their father was a tory, and discussed politics instead of playing at the games with which ordinary children amuse themselves. Their brother, BRANWELL, was a brilliant boy, full of shining talents; he could do everything, had a great genius for drawing, and fascinated everybody by his conversation. He was to be the head of the family, and many a fond vision of his future greatness was indulged in by his loving sisters. But these visions were cruelly disappointed. He proved as weak and wicked as he was brilliant. His ill-conduct was a gnawing agony to his family. The small savings of his father were taken to pay his debts, and he died at last in a delirium brought on by his reckless habits of drink, and the only apology for him was that he drank to drown remorse. CHARLOTTE and her sisters were sent from home to a half-charity boarding school, where their ill-luck followed them. The schoolhouse was in a damp, unhealthy situation; they had unwholesome food; they caught cold; were taken down with low fevers; they had to walk two miles through the snow to church, and sit all day in a dismal, damp room, without a fire; the woman who had the charge of them was a heartless fiend, who appeared to take delight in making them wretched; the well-meaning clergyman at the head of the school was one of those misplaced people who have every conceivable disqualification for their places. Among his melancholy mistakes was his habit of daily reminding his wretched pupils of their dependent condition in life, to teach them humility. After suffering beyond expression at this miserable school the two sisters, CHARLOTTE and EMILY, were obliged to be sent home to save their lives; Ann, the younger, had remained at the parsonage to take care of the father. CHARLOTTE and ANN were afterwards sent to better schools, but EMILY would not leave her home. When they were together their time was spent in devising plans for their future support, and the sole hope that cheered them was that they might obtain situations as governesses; and to this miserable resource of friendless girls they did betake themselves, and had bitter experiences, glimpses of which we have in Jane Eyre and Agnes Gray.

The necessity of finding some new employment which would secure them from want and render them independent, was an ever-present thought with these unhappy sisters; and it was to qualify themselves for becoming the principals of a school that CHARLOTTE, at the age of 25, with EMILY, went to Brussels to acquire a better knowledge of French and German. Yet, after becoming thoroughly proficient in these languages, they found it impossible to obtain a solitary pupil. They advertised and sent round their circulars; they appealed in every quarter, but not a pupil came. No parent was likely to send a child to live at so desolate and unprepossessing a home as the bleak parsonage of Haworth. Neither discouraged nor disheartened, these poor girls bore up under all their affliction. Their brother's misconduct, their father's blindness, which was added to their other misfortunes, the ill-health of all three, the death of their aunt, and an accident which deprived them of the services of their faithful Tabby, and rendered it necessary that she should be waited on by them, instead of rendering them assistance, could not depress their energies or induce them to neglect any of the duties which they felt themselves called upon to perform. They bravely faced their responsibilities, and, without murmuring or wavering, took to shirt-making, and attended to all the drudgery of the kitchen themselves, never abandoning their studies or relinquishing the hope of literary distinction, which they appear to have always entertained.

Mrs. GASKELL has thought it necessary to give, not only an accurate topographical description of the region in which these sisters were born and lived, but also a characteristic description of the people by whom they were surrounded, as a necessary key to the comprehension of the peculiarities of their minds, and of that vehement coarseness of expression which is common to all their writings. The West Ridingers are a strong, coarse, willful, superstitious, mercenary, revengeful and industrious people. Their one virtue is sincerity. Bad as they are externally, they are no worse than they seem. Their rudeness and savage ways are unimaginable to people who have been accustomed to more refined society. Mr. HUNTER, in his Life of Oliver Heywood, quotes a sentence out of a memorial of one JAMES RITHER, living in the reign of ELIZABETH, which is partially true to this day:

"They have no superior to court, no civilities to practice: a sour and sturdy humor is the consequence, so that a stranger is ebocked by a tone of defiance in every voice, and an air of fierceness in every countenance."

Mrs. GASKELL illustrates their character by some striking anecdotes. The predecessor of Mr. BRONTE as the incumbent of Haworth was not acceptable to the people and they adopted a remarkable course to compel him to leave them.

"Hitherto they had not proceeded to anything like personal violence; but on the third Sunday they must have been greatly irritated at seeing Mr. REDHEAD, determined to brave their will, ride up the village street, accompanied by several gentlemen from Bradford. They put up their horses at the Black Bull—the little inn close upon the churchyard, for the convenience of arvills as well as for other purposes—and went into church. On this the people followed, with a chimney sweeper, whom they had employed to clean the chimneys of some outbuildings belonging to the church that very morning, and afterwards plied with drink until he was in a state of solemn intoxication. They placed him right before the reading-desk, where his blackened face nodded a drunken, stupid assent, to all that Mr. REDHEAD said. At last, either prompted by some mischief maker, or from some tipsy impulse, he clambered up the pulpit stairs, and attempted to embrace Mr. REDHEAD. Then the profane fun grew fast and furious. They pushed the soot-covered chimney-sweeper against Mr. REDHEAD, as he tried to escape."

"The first Sunday he officiated, Haworth church was filled [even to the aisles; most of the people wearing the wooden clogs of the district. But while Mr. REDHEAD was reading the second lesson, the whole congregation, as by one impulse, began to leave the church, making all the noise they could with clattering and clumping of clogs, till, at length, Mr. REDHEAD and the clerk were the only two left to continue the service. This was bad enough, but the next Sunday the proceedings were far worse. Then, as before, the church was well filled, but the aisles were left clear; not a creature, not an obstacle was in the way. The reason for this was made evident about the same time in the reading of the service as the disturbances had begun the previous week. A man rode into the church upon an ass, with his face turned towards the tail, and as many old hats piled on his head as he could possibly carry. He began urging his beast [down the aisles, and the screams and cries, and laughter of the congregation entirely drowned all sound of Mr. REDHEAD'S voice; and, I believe, he was obliged to desist."

This kind of treatment proved perfectly successful, and the objectionable pastor abandoned his unruly flock to the charge of Mr. BRONTE. Mrs. GASKELL says:

"Even now, a stranger can hardly ask a question without receiving some crusty reply, if, indeed, he receive any at all. Sometimes the sour rudeness amounts to positive insult. Yet, if the 'foreigner' takes all this churlishness good-humoredly, or as a matter of course, and makes good any claim upon their latent kindliness and hospitality, they are faithful and generous, and thoroughly to be relied upon. As a slight illustration of the roughness that pervades all classes in these out-of-the-way villages, I may relate a little adventure which happened to my husband and myself, three years ago, at Addingham:

From Peolgent to Pendle Hill,
From Linton to Long-Addingham,
And all that Craven coasts did tell, &c., one of the places that sent forth its fighting men to the famous old battle of Flodden Field, and a village not many miles from Haworth.

We were driving along the street, when one of those ne'er-do-well lads who seem to have a kind of magnetic power for misfortunes, having jumped into the stream that runs through the place, just where all the broken glass and bottles are thrown, staggered naked and nearly covered with blood into a cottage before us. Besides receiving another bad cut in the arm, he had completely laid open the artery, and was in a fair way of bleeding to death—which, one of his relations comforted him by saying, would be likely to 'save a deal o' trouble.'

When my husband had checked the effusion of blood with a strap that one of the bystanders unbuckled from his leg, he asked if a surgeon had been sent for.

'Yoi,' was the answer, 'but we dunna think he'll come.'

'Why not?'

'He's owd, yo seen, and asthmatic, and it's up-hill.'

My husband, taking a boy for his guide, drove as fast as he could to the surgeon's house, which was about three quarters of a mile off, and met the aunt of the wounded lad leaving it.

'Is he coming?' inquired my husband.

'Well, he didna' say he wouldna' come.'

'But tell him the lad may bleed to death.'

'I did.'

'And what did he say?'

'Why only, 'D——n him, what do I care?'"

It ended, however, in his sending one of his sons, who, though not brought up to "the surgering trade," was able to do what was necessary in the way of bandages and plasters. The excuse made for the surgeon was, that 'he was near eighty, and getting a bit doited, and had had a matter o' twenty childer.'

Among the most unmoved of the lookers on was the brother of the boy so badly hurt; and while he was lying in a pool of blood on the flag floor, and arying out how much his arm was 'wrenching,' his stoical relative stood coolly smoking his bit of black pipe, and uttered not a single word of either sympathy or sorrow."

There is a grim and fantastic looking stone house in the neighborhood, with hideous visages carved upon its front, called Spite Hall, which was built by its occupant expressly to annoy his opposite neighbor, whose view it obstructed.

It was amid such a grim, coarse, vindictive people; in such a wild, solitary and cheerless country; under such depressing and saddening domestic affections, that these three women grew up, and when their troubles had reached their height, when disappointed, sick, weary, and distressed in body, and anguished in mind, they commenced and completed those remarkable works which at once created so much interest, and excited so much wonder as to their authorship. The Life of Charlotte Bronte gives a sufficient insight into the mystery of Jane Eyre, of Wuthering Heights, and the Tenant of Wildfell Hall. What seems to the uninstructed reader like the wild ravings of a coarse and malignant nature, that delights in the disturbed creations of a disordered imagination, are simply the sober experiences of a refined and gentle observer of nature, whose love of truth will not allow her to be guilty of a simulation.

The characters of the three sisters had very marked differences, but they were alike in one remarkable peculiarity, a strange reticence which made it painful almost to communicate their own thoughts and feelings to another. Living so closely and affectionately together as they did, they did not make confidants of each other. It was only by accident that CHARLOTTE discovered that EMILY had written a volume of poems; and it was not until long after the publication of Jane Eyre, and when the public journals were full of discussions as to its author, that the father was intrusted with the secret that all three of his daughters had written books which had become famous. Scarcely had they begun to taste the sweets of success when EMILY, the most heroic of the family, and whose writings give evidence of the most original and powerful genius, sickened and died. She was a woman of the most remarkable qualities, and, though always weak and bordering upon consumption, she had the iron will and firmness of nerve that distinguish our aborigines. Several instances are given of the fortitude and strength of will of this strange creature.

"The feeling, which in CHARLOTTE partook of something of the nature of an affection, was, with EMILY, more of a passion. Some one speaking of her to me, in a careless kind of strength of expression, said, 'she never showed regard to any human creature; all her love was reserved for animals.' The helplessness of an animal was its passport to CHARLOTTE'S heart; the fierce, wild, intractability of its nature was what often recommended it to EMILY. Speaking of her dead sister, the former told me that from her many traits in Shirley's character were taken; her way of sitting on the rug reading, with her arm round her rough bull dog's neck; her calling to a strange dog, running past, with hanging head and lolling tongue, to give it a merciful draught of water, its maddened snap at her, her nobly stern presence of mind, going right into the kitchen, and taking up one of TABBY'S red-hot Italian irons to sear the bitten place, and telling no one, till the danger was well-nigh over, for fear of the terrors that might beset their weaker minds. All this, looked upon as a well-invented fiction in Shirley, was written down by CHARLOTTE with streaming eyes: it was the literal true account of what EMILY had done. The same tawny bull-dog, (with his 'strangled whistle') called 'Tartar' in Shirley, was 'Keeper' in Haworth personage; a gift to EMILY. With the gift came a warning. Keeper was faithful to the depths of his nature as long as he was with friends; but he who struck him with a stick or whip, roused the relentless nature of the brute, who flew at his throat forthwith, and held him there till one or the other was at the point of death. Now Keeper's household fault was this: He loved to steal up stairs, and stretch his square, tawny limbs, on the comfortable beds, covered over with delicate white counterpanes. But the cleanliness of the parsonage arrangements was perfect; and this habit of Keeper's was so objectionable, that EMILY, in reply to TABBY'S remonstrances, declared that if he was found again transgressing, she herself, in defiance of warning and his well-known ferocity of nature, would beat him so severely that he would never offend again. In the gathering dusk of an Autumn evening, TABBY came, half triumphantly, half tremblingly, but in great wrath, to tell EMILY that Keeper was lying on the best bed, in drowsy voluptuousness. CHARLOTTE saw EMILY'S whitening face and set mouth, but dared not speak to interfere; no one dared when EMILY'S eyes glowed in that manner out of the paleness of her face, and when her lips were so compressed into stone. She went up stairs, and TABBY and CHARLOTTE stood in the gloomy passage below, full of the dark shadows of coming night. Down stairs came EMILY, dragging after her the unwilling Keeper, his hind legs set in a heavy attitude of resistance, held by the 'scuff of his neck,' but growling low and savagely all the time. The watchers would fain have spoken, but durst not, for fear of taking off EMILY'S attention, and causing her to avert her head for a moment from the enraged brute. She let him go, planted in a dark corner at the bottom of the stairs; no time was there to fetch stick or rod, for fear of the strangling clutch at her throat—her hair clenched fist struck against his red fierce eyes, before he had time to make his spring, and in the language of the turf, she 'punished him' till his eyes were swelled up, and the half-blind, stupefied beast was led to his accustomed lair, to have his swelled head fomented and cared for by the very EMILY herself. The generous dog owed her no grudge; he loved her dearly ever after; he walked first among the mourners in her funeral; he slept moaning for nights at the door of her empty room, and never, so to speak, rejoiced, dog fashion, after her death."

But the most touching scene of all in the life of EMILY was the last. She knew her time had come, that she was dying; but she stontly refused all sympathy or assistance; she would not permit a physician to see her, and even her sisters were afraid to look as though they were conscious of her condition. The death of EMILY was soon followed by that of the gentle ANNE, the youngest of that doomed family; the brother and the aunt were already gone, and CHARLOTTE was left alone in her now more than ever sad and solitary home. She could not sleep, her health was gone, and she paced the room alone, night after night, in which she and her sisters had walked the dark and weary hours away, and had beguiled themselves of their sorrows by laying out plans for their future life. Yet, in her intervals of rest she wrote her novel of Villette, and as she had become known to many eminent literary persons, she received many visitors, and was often invited to pay visits, which she always did unwillingly. She was in London during the great Exhibition; she visited Miss MARTINEAU at her cottage in Cumberland; she visited Mrs. GASKELL in Manchester; she went to Scotland and kept up an active correspondence with a good many literary men who had sought her acquaintance; but she clung to her desolate home and would not desert her father in his loneliness. If she had been blessed with health, life would have opened brightly to her at last. She was married to a man for whom she had the highest esteem, and who regarded her with the deepest affection. But, a few months after her marriage, her health gave way; her constitution could no longer resist the pressure of disease, and she was laid by the side of her mother and sisters.

CHARLOTTE BRONTE was, from her birth, feeble; she was stunted in person and extremely frail and delicate; her face had an old and care-worn expression, and she was so near-sighted that she could only read by holding the book close to her eyes. She was reserved in manner, but vehement when excited, and painfully timid, and averse to company. Yet, with all her physical defects, she must have been singularly winning in her manners, and her noble and generous natnre attached every one to her who became intimate with her. She received three offers of marriage, and one of them was from a gentleman who saw her but once. The only person who appears not to have been fascinated by her, was Madame HEGER, the directress of the school in Brussels; but this lady's estrangement was owing purely to religious feelings. She was a Catholic, and a devote, but CHARLOTTE BRONTE was an uncompromising Protestant, who was at no pains to disguise her disgust at the mummeries of the Catholic Church.

It is not the least remarkable part of the history of these sisters, that Currer Bell's first novel has never yet been published. Their first project was to publish a volume containing three stories; for which purpose CHARLOTTE (Currer) wrote The Professor; EMILY (Ellis) wrote Wuthering Heights, and ANNE (Acton) wrote Agnes Gray. The stories of Ellis and Acton were published, but Currer could not find a publisher for The Professor, and it has not yet seen the light; but we are happy to learn that it will be very soon given to the world. We have alluded to Wuthering Heights and the Tenant of Wildfell Hall as succeeding Jane Eyre, although they were published before that work was written, as was the volume of poeme by the three sisters. But they were hardly known to the reading world, until the endden popularity of Jane Eyre attracted attention to them.

The Life of Charlotte Bronte will become a permanent addition to the vast store of English literature; it has all the requisite elements for a classical work; the theme is noble and individual; its treatment is sincere and sufficiently able; its motive is pure, and its story is at once instructive and engrossing. It is very rare in literature that so good a subject has fallen into hands so capable of rendering it adequate treatment.

A Justification—Mr. District Attorney Hall's Opening Speech.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, May 12, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The trial of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, otherwise called BURDELL, being now over, the discussion of questions which naturally flow from such an excitement seems to be quite the order of the day. Among these discussions, however, I seriously think that there is room for one more, which seems to have escaped the minds of your correspondents. Having waited then until now to see if, among the numerous communications which have found their way into the public mind through the medium of your unusually liberal-minded sheet, some refutation of the attacks upon Mr. A. OAKEY HALL'S "opening speech" in the late trial, as made in many of the journals of the day, would not appear, and none such having as yet met my eye, I have determined to act as I may be able as his upholder, in repelling, as I consider them, the unjust aspersions against his character, whether moral or mental, as shown up in some of our leading metropolitan journals.

I go upon the principle which I consider by all means the safest, and, in fact, the only true one, that there are always two sides to every question which is broached to the public. Mr. HALL has been, then—as I hope to show—treated in a manner which his merits, even as shown in his "opening," would not by any means receive if it were candidly and impartially investigated how far he was right in acting and speaking as he did. I must confess, too, that at the first blush I was carried into the current of public opinion which ran so strongly against him, and especially was I influenced in such opinion by an editorial which appeared in your issue of the 9th inst., entitled "The Burdell Murder," which, however, I am now convinced, upon sober second thought, was rather more severe a rebuke than the truth of the case would seem to warrant.

You say, and I believe that you speak true to your feelings on the subject, that "none read the speech with more pain than those who feel the warmest interest in his (Mr. HALL'S) success." But, Mr. Editor, let me suggest some few arguments, which will tend, perhaps, to change your tone of harshness towards Mr. HALL.

In my opinion you rightly think, generally speaking, that "it is the duty of the prosecuting counsel, acting in the name of the State, to confine himself in his opening in criminal cases, to a calm, temperate and unimpassioned statement of the facts." You are also right, I allow, that "any invective or abuse directed against him or her (the prisoner) previous to conviction, is not simply cruel and indecent, but has not the shadow of authority in law." The truth of these two propositions I willingly admit as general principles; but there are to them, as to all other propositions, exceptions, making them vary, as the facts upon which the "opening" is founded may vary. But you add in your next paragraph this direct accusation, that "Mr. HALL'S opening speech in this pending case afforded as gross a violation of all these salutary rules as can be discovered in the whole history of State trials since the palmy days of JEFFREYS and SCROGGS." This comparison, as one tending to show how low Mr. HALL sank in the mire of partisanship in his opening of the Burdell case, I deem wholly unwarranted. And for this reason:

Like every other prosecuting counsel, Mr. HALL obtains his information as to the guilt of a prisoner at the bar from the facts which are called forth to the notice of the Grand Jury, to which tribunal, during its sittings, he alone has access. There he receives his impressions as to the guilt of the accused, there he makes up his mind as to the real character of the criminal and the crime, and there he decides upon the manner of treatment necessary. Now, allowing to Mr. HALL that sincerity and uprightness of motive which every person ought to have allowed him until the contrary is proved, and you yourself will allow that no man in our community, especially among those in public life, deserves the compliment, if true merit is to be so styled, more than Mr. HALL;—allowing him this, I say, you are to believe that facts, certain, convincing facts, had been laid before him, which had convinced him that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM was a guilty and unprincipled woman. Acting, therefore, upon this supposition, let us look to see how far out of the beaten path which professional etiquette and the common dictates of humanity have made in "opening speeches," Mr. HALL strayed.

We all know of what a jury consists, often; you will allow, of men, simple-minded though honest, unskilled in the arts of logic and the sophistry of argument, especially when directed against themselves, and unable to check the inroads which sympathy would and does naturally make in their determination of "a true deliverance to make between the people of the State and the prisoner at the bar according to the evidence," when that quality of their hearts is appealed to. Now it was as you must also readily acknowledge the duty of Mr. HALL to see that sympathy which finds its origin and home in the heart, should on a trial like this, be entirely excluded and should give place to that candid judgment and earnest attention which belongs exclusively to the mind.

This he undertook and as effectually accomplished his purpose as he might under the circumstances. And what were those circumstances? Why simply, say you, that the prisoner was a woman. Simply? Not at all. I believe sincerely that on that account Mr. HALL saw fit, in his purpose, to put to rout all sympathy, to lay the course of his opening as he did. A woman? Why, is it not natural that the fair forms and loving faces of the mother, wife or sister of each man in the jury box, should come flitting before his mind's eye with sympathy and compassion expressively stamped upon every feature? I tell you, sir, the generality of men seem to think, and naturally too, that woman is utterly incapable of being in moral conduct anything different than their own good wives and mothers. And to this fact Mr. HALL undoubtedly directed his attention, thinking it worth while to show to the jury how wicked a woman could be. Indeed not only was he justified in impressing upon the mind of the jury the fact, important, indeed, that "crime knows no sex," but it was his bounden duty so to do. This is law. As to the manner of making such impression, was it not perfectly in place to bring up to the aid of law the appalling facts of history which show how frequent has been the case of almost incredible wickedness on the part of women.

Was then the allusion of the eloquent District Attorney to the "SEMIRAMIS of Kingly Rome," to MESSALINA, "whose name was as odious and abhorrent in profane history as that of JEZEBEL in Sacred Writ," to FULVIA, to AGNES, Queen of Hungary, and to HERODIAS, so vastly out of place, when the object in so doing, is kept in view; and will it still continue to appear "no less striking as an instance of rhetorical absurdity than of forensic folly?" These are, indeed, harsh terms. You say that "whatever Mr. HALL himself may think of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, when he speaks in the name of the people, the people have a right to expect dignity and sobriety at his hands." Again, I agree with you as to the truth of your proposition, but is it apparent in what respect Mr. HALL was undignified? Is it clear that there was a want of sobriety?

With regard to the failure of Mr. HALL to prove all that he said he would, I may well ask the question of the people, is it at all uncommon for counsel to fail in this respect? I, as one of "the people," am satisfied, from the past course of Mr. HALL, that he acted all through the trial conscientiously, and as he thought was right; and, having entire confidence in him in his official as well as in his private station, cannot believe that he had no good grounds for what, now that the trial is over, appears mere assertion. The truth of the matter no doubt is, that Mr. HALL promised much, and having been, through circumstances beyond his control, unable to fulfill his promises, the mass of people were disappointed, and blamed him, without thought, as to the matters which lay behind, and which may have prompted him in his "opening speech."

For myself, and I may say for most of those who have respect for a man's character and reputation, I can say I have little care for the mean and sarcastic remarks of one of the daily papers, the Herald, in this matter, which paper in its usual manner turns everything over to politics. Mr. HALL'S conduct, always pleasing and satisfactory to the majority of our citizens, would naturally be laid hold of by such a press as a means of political capital without regard to the subject of the conduct chosen for sarcasm. Therefore, it is not surprising that the present subject should have had its share of frivolous fault-finding on the part of that journal.

I had intended when I began this paper to have alluded to some of the articles which have made their appearance on this subject in some of the journals of our City, but I have even now, I fear, transgressed upon your space. However, if I have by the course of my remarks caused any to think of this matter, which has seemed to me thus far to have been entirely ex parte, in a different light from that in which it appeared before, I am satisfied, and I feel certain that you, with your usual candor, will do justice to the character of our District Attorney by giving this hastily-penned argument your consideration.

Yours truly, G. E. S.

The National Hotel Disease.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 13, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: As there is much interest evinced by the public in the origin of the "National Hotel disease," I deem it the duty of every one to throw all the light in their power upon the matter, and to correct any statement they may detect error in. I notice in the letter of your Washington correspondent, "Uno," in this morning's TIMES, he says: "To establish the fact beyond doubt that this disease proceeded from the malaria at the hotel and not poison, Mr. BUCHANAN, when at the hotel, neither ate nor drank there." It is conceded that the first symptoms of the disease in Mr. BUCHANAN made their appearance while he was at the "National," in the latter part of January; he arrived on the 27th. I was at the hotel when he arrived, and breakfasted at the same table with him. I also saw him at dinner twice that week in the ladies' ordinary. The rooms he occupied at that time were Nos. 15 and 16, in the west wing on the corner of Sixth and C streets, second story above the street; that is the wing in which your correspondent of this morning, "J. D.," speaks of noticing "a deadly and disagreeable smell." The middle of December I arrived at the "National," and occupied the rooms alluded to, with my wife; both of us noticed the peculiar close and nauseating smell, particularly an entering the hall in the morning. On the third day after our arrival I was taken with the disease, and have been dangerously ill with it until a month since, when I for the first time got relief, and trust I am now free from it.

As to the suggestion that the slaves in the establishment poisoned the food or water, I would remark that all the servants were white, and during the past two years I have not seen a black on the premises, save one old man, whose station was in the water closet. There may have been some employed in the cooking department, but my impression is they were all white. The proprietors can easily set that hypothesis at rest.

I would further remark in order to settle the question as to the date of the appearance of the disease, that I know five or six gentlemen who were suffering under it when I was taken, (about the 15th December.)

The National Hotel Sickness.

NEWPORT, R. I., Tuesday, May 12, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I have read a letter in your issue of yesterday from a victim of the "National Hotel sickness," who thinks it was produced by poisoning with arsenic.

He states, that while at the Hotel, he became unwell on the 22d of April, and hastened home, where, on the 25th, he became much worse and sent for an homœopathic physician, who pronounced his symptoms those of poisoning by arsenic, and cured him with homœopathic doses of iron!

From his own history of his case, it seems highly improbable that arsenic could have produced his illness, or that he could have received any benefit from the treatment to which he resorted. The best authorities on the subject state, that the worst effects of a poisonous dose of arsenic are produced within twenty-four hours after it is swallowed. Hence, if his sickness had been produced by arsenic taken into his system at the National Hotel, the acute symptoms of which he complained would have come on within a few hours after he left there and not at the end of three or four days after his return home.

It is quite improbable that he received any benefit from the treatment to which he resorted; for under any circumstances homœopathic dose of iron must prove useless as an antidote for arsenic; nor could any dose be of service after the poison had found its way into the circulation.

The hydrated oxyd of iron, recently prepared and given in large doses, soon after arsenic is swallowed, is the only antidote found in the preparations of iron. Given under these circumstances, while the arsenious acid is free in the stomach, it effects a chemical reaction, which results in the formation of the arsenite of iron, which has no effect on the living tissue. To effect this chemical change requires, according to the best authorities, 32 parts of iron to one of arsenic; hence, to counteract the effects of a poisonous dose of arsenic would require more homœopathic doses of iron than have been given since the days of Hahnemann.

Respectfully yours,
W. ARGYLE WATSON.

Card from Counselor Sheehan.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In the DAILY TIMES of yesterday appeared a letter signed "Juror," containing, among others, the following:

"Coroner CONNERY, as the world knows, took the matter into his own hands at once. His first act was to send for his son-in-law, a Mr. SHEEHAN, to act as counsel for Mrs. CUNNINGHAM. The offer of his services was respectfully declined."

Let me inform "Juror" that he has been imposed on.

That I am the son-in-law of the Coroner I am willing to admit, nay, am even bold enough to be proud of. That he sent me to act as counsel for Mrs CUNNINGHAM is not only false but patent to every person that knows my character, or was present when I voluntarily assumed that position, which occurred in this way:

On the first day of the inquest, when the City was startled by the horrible tragedy, I, as well as hundreds of citizens went to No. 31 Bond-street to view the location. Whilst there in my private capacity, Mrs. C. was on the witness stand, and was being asked by one of the intelligent jurors questions which might directly criminate herself. Seeing her falter—in such a terrible ordeal, and a woman—my sympathies as a man were enlisted in her behalf, and I impulsively told her to answer no questions that would criminate herself; for which impulse, the Coroner (very properly) put me under arrest, for tampering with witnesses on the stand. Let me again inform [illegible] offer of this material service was [illegible] declined, but was joyfully and gratefully accepted, followed by boundless thanks from Mrs. C. and daughters. Next day, while that zealous minister, Mr. MARVINE, was on the stand, to identify Mrs. C., and having previously seen her in her every-day dress failed to recognize her, I hastened to her room up-stairs, and had herself and daughter AUGUSTA dressed in the same clothes they wore when Mrs. C. was married, and brought before Mr. M., who at once recognized mother and daughter. Were the offer of these services respectfully declined, Mr. Juror? Other and valuable services I also performed for that family—which were not most respectfully declined—all without fee or reward, save that of shielding too unfortunate. I asked for none, and under the attendant circumstances would receive none.

JAMES M. SHEHAN, Attorney.

N. B.—It will be news to the Coroner and his friends to know that he has a brother in-law in this country.

French Settlers in Virginia.

ASTOR HOUSE, Tuesday, May 12, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Two weeks ago I was called upon by Rev. Mr. LORRIAUX, a Protestant minister of France, in company with Mr. WM. E. LAWRENCE, of Boston, seeking homes for the freedom-loving Waldenses of the high Alps in the southeast of France, who prefer a milder climate than that of our northwestern Territories. I gave them such information as I could of the soil, climate, and social condition of Virginia, and of the protection they might expect from the American Emigrant Aid and Homestead Company. This afternoon Mr. LORRIAUX has called again, and seems delighted with his success in securing 3,000 acres of good land for his congregation of some 500, in Monongalia County, Va., within eight miles of Morgantown, the County seat on the Monongahela River, and within twenty miles of the Pennsylvania Line, at the moderate price of seventy-five cents per acre. He thinks the report he will bear to the French Protestants will induce many thousands to leave a country where their rights are but poorly protected, and where, from the crowded state of the population, land brings from $300 to $500 per acre. Welcome to these countrymen of LAFAYETTE, professing the faith of the HUGUENOTS, of the JAYS of New-York, and the MARIONS of South Carolina.

J. C. UNDERWOOD, Secretary
A. E. A. and Homestead Company.

SETTLEMENT OF THE DIFFICULTY WITH GREAT BRITAIN—RIOTS AT ELECTIONS—FATAL RIOTS AMONG CRIMEAN IMMIGRANTS—OPENING OF THE MONTEVIDEAN LEGISLATURE—FINANCIAL REVIEW.

We have received Buenos Ayrean papers to the 1st of March.

The long-pending difficulty between the Governments of Buenos Ayres and Great Britain has been settled. It may be remembered that in January, 1853, the British Chargé, Hon. ROBERT GORE, was handed his passports by the Government of Buenos Ayres and dismissed from his office. The charges made against the British Representative were subsequently examined by his Government, and declared to be without foundation. After protracted negotiations the Government of Buenos Ayres has at length expressed its regret for its action, and requests that the note addressed to Capt. GORE on the 6th of January, 1853, and the passport inclos

THE WAR ABOUT THEATRES.

Mr. Dion Bourcicault and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher—Interesting Controversy.

To Rev. Henry Ward Beecher:

SIR: It would be scarcely reasonable to look in you for any judgment beyond a passionate exclamation of your intolerance of any set of opinions not your own. To propose a patient, calm investigation of any evil would, I fear, be an insult to your rampant virtue, for you seem to understand no remedy but extermination—no cure but kill. How, then, can I hope to find in you an unguarded moment of gentleness, when I can ask you why, with one sweeping anathema, you declared the Stage to be not only essentially vile—an institution by its nature confirmed as the arch-minister of Vice and the stronghold of Evil.

May I ask on what grounds you founded this belief? I will not call it an opinion. Did you investigate this matter upon which you, a minister of our Saviour, decided so vehemently? Have you visited the scene you so strongly condemn? Have you so studied the lives of theatrical people and made yourself acquainted with the history of the Stage. And if you have no experience, have you even a moderate share of data on which to establish your conclusion?

Or do you assume the vice of the stage to be a social axiom; in fact, a question on which from lack of information you would rather decide than debate? Yet the social degradation, the wrongs borne with patience, and the slavery to prejudice endured by those whose state you assign even lower than that of the slave, are subjects as interesting to a Christian mind as that which has engaged your sympathy for many years. It is true the actor cannot, like the slave, show the fetter on his wrist; he cannot exhibit the stripes on his back; and therefore his case is less succinct in the mouth of an orator; it is not so pictorial, so profitable. But wrong is wrong, and the physical well-being of a class is no plea that their wrongs should be set aside, leisurely regarded, or their injuries aggravated with impunity.

You have said that the theatre is calculated to demoralize and do mischief. That it is a radiating centre of vice and dissipation, and no reform could ever make it otherwise.

To these sweeping assertions, based on no facts whatever, I submit to the world this reply:

The audience in a theatre go thither and pay for their admission with the sole object of causing the wells of emotion in the heart, sealed by the strife for daily bread, to be opened up. In no assemblage of human beings is selfishness less dominant; all thought is banished save hatred of vice, sympathy with virtue, pity for the tempted and woe for the fallen.

History has been defaced with falsehood, poetry with atheism, romance with debauchery and libidinous works. The press has been defiled by every means to which man could apply it. The drama alone by its very nature can live only by one means, that is by showing virtue the loveliness of her form, and vice the hideous outline of her feature. If, in its former ages, it contained expressions that seem coarse to our ears, those errors belong to those times; and being common to the Church, the Legislature, the Court, were simply reflected from them on the stage.

There is less evil thought in the minds of an audience assembled to witness a good play than in the same number of persons occupied in any other kind of known entertainment. The drunkenness and debauchery attendant on fairs, agricultural meetings, elections, balls, and parties, excursions and assemblages of all kinds, notoriously exceed any such evils attendant on theatres.

The drinking saloons attached to theatres are to my knowledge nearly invariably failures as speculations.

By the rules of all theatres, prostitutes are banished from them by every means ingenuity can devise. No female is admitted without a gentleman, and the auditorium is so constructed that the privacy which vice seeks is practically and purposely defeated.

There is more blasphemy uttered in a single railroad car in one hour than I have heard on the stage in all my life.

We desire to ask why persons who need such salutary moral influences as the theatre is said to possess should be so unfeelingly excluded? If "all thought is banished, save hatred of vice, sympathy with virtue, pity for the tempted, &c.," then why is there any need for constructing the auditorium so skillfully to defeat vice? Why are not those poor outcasts allowed to enter the theatre, and to revive under those benignant influences which are said to abound in theatric life?

We will give but another extract:

"The drama and its followers demand investigation, and it will not be withheld. I urge you most earnestly and most sincerely to apply your powerful veiled to examine this thing. Let an assemblage of those concerned in the matter be convoked—managers, actors, dramatists, and the light of literature—to meet those clergymen who will devote their attention to the object. It is no small thing, as you may judge, from the fact that eighteen per cent of the populations of cities in this country visit the theatre per week during the popular season."

To this demand for investigation and comparison of opinions, no man can object. The manner suggested is not the best. An assembly and a discussion are not as good as a pen and considerate readers. The subject has been ably opened by Dr. BELLOWS. There seems to be no likelihood of its falling without respondents. We intend in good time to meddle a little ourselves in this interesting discussion. Dr. BELLOWS' argument seems to us to be just this: Amusements are necessary to moral health; therefore theatres ought to be countenanced by Christians. There is a middle term left out, which no ingenuity can supply, and without which the argument cannot be saved from ridicule.

Meanwhile, we desire to say to Mr. BOURCICAULT and to his brethren of the profession, that our feelings toward them personally or professionally are neither savage nor contemptuous. We should be glad to serve them, as we would any other class of men. We do not deny them the sympathy which we owe to all men, because we pronounce their calling injurious to good morals. If Mr. B. will but come to Plymouth Church, he and his friends shall have a sitting as often as they visit us; and we will satisfy them, too, that we are not of the race of lions or bears—that we have a heart and a hand for our fellow men. And if he will go home and dine with us, we should not despair of satisfying him of our good nature not only, but of so much information upon the history and moral effects of the theatre, that the next time he addresses a letter to us through the public prints, he will not forget the style which is due to good manners.

PRACTICE—INJUNCTION.

James Kain vs. Harman Gunter et al.—The question presented here is, whether parties in the property in question and its proceeds are not so entangled and involved, that it is essential that they be adjusted in one suit, and that the parties be enjoined from prosecuting any other suits. A statement of the facts will answer the question. Previous to May, 1854, Guoter and his wife had mortgaged his real estate to Hunt for $9,000, to Maxwell for an amount, of which $3,594 is now due, and to Halstead for $20,000.

On the 24th of the same month, being involved in debt, he alone made an assignment to Postley for the benefit of all his creditors, setting forth in a schedule that he owed Conant $1,910. This assignment was recorded in the same month. After that, Conant, with actual and constructive knowledge of the assignment took a mortgage for $4,300 of Gunter and wife. He knew of the assignment, for he says that Postley approved of it. The assignment to Postley gave him no power to mortgage. Conant afterwards rented part of the assigned premises, and received, as he admits, over $1,100 of the quarter rents, due May, 1856, to reduce the mortgage to him.

The plaintiff and all the other parties, except Gunter, say he so reserved $2,000, or near half that sum; also, that the whole amount due to him was but the $1,960, and perhaps some small additional sum of $500, thus alleging a case in which he, a creditor of the estate, or part subsequent to the assignment, claims a larger sum as due him than they admit to be due.

The plaintiff is assignee of one or more of the creditors protected by the assignment, and has a right to have the claims of all the creditors under the assignment investigated. He also claims that if advances were made under the mortgage, subsequent to the assignment, they are to be postponed to those protected by the assignment. Conant disputes this, and even disputes the allegation that the plaintiff is such creditor. He contends that Conant had no right to rents in preference to him, and Conant insists on his claim.

After discussing the points raised upon this state of facts in detail, the Court concludes as follows:—"It is evident that all these rights are so complicated that they can be best settled in one suit; and the injunction should be retained so as to prevent any other action than this. Grosvernor should be required to pay into Court $2,440, and interest thereon, or give security for its payment when required."

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM

Before Hon. Justice Bosworth.

THE METHODIST CHURCH TROUBLES.

Wm. D. Berrian vs. The Methodist Society of the City of New-York.—This was a motion to set aside a judgment rendered against the defendants for moneys alleged to have been advanced by Cornelius Berrian for these defendants, amounting to about $2,500. The motion was made upon the ground that Cornelius Berrian, alleged to be the President of the Corporation, was not at the time of the service of the summons and complaint the President of the Board of Trustees, and that therefore the suit was not properly commenced.

The history of the society, which was not discussed upon the argument, is, in brief, as follows: In 1820 certain members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, becoming discontented with its too conservative views on the subject of Slavery, broke off their connection with it and started a new society, under the pastoral charge of Rev. Wm. S. Stillwell, who continued in active service until 1851, when he was succeeded by Rev. J. M. Smith. Mr. Smith, with the view, it is presumed, of returning into the old fold, started a conference—the society had hitherto been conducted on Congregational principles—by the action of which certain obnoxious members were expelled.

Finally, the Society retaliated upon Mr. Smith and ejected him and his adherents, among whom were the present plaintiff, his father and brother-in-law.

An action was subsequently brought against the Society by some of the exiles, in order to get possession of the Church, which was discontinued after a pendency of three years.

This action was then commenced for the amount of an alleged claim against the Society, and the plaintiff served his summons upon his father, as President of the Board of Trustees, and thus representing the Society. A judgment was therefore taken by default, which the party now in possession of the Church, &c., moves to set aside on the ground that their Trustees are such both de facto and de jure—which is therefore the question at issue. The case was argued a week ago by C. Schaffer for the plaintiff, and D. McMahon for the defendants.

BOSWORTH, J.—The defendant moves to set aside a judgment rendered against it by default, on the 26th day of March, 1857, for $2,507 99 damages and costs. The action was commenced by the service of the summons and complaint, on the 28th day of February last, on Cornelius Berrian, who is described as President of the defendants' Board of Trustees, and its managing agent.

The defendant moves, not only to set aside the judgment, but the summons and the complaint, on the ground, among others, that Cornelius Berrian was not any officer of any kind of the defendant.

The affidavits of both sides, although in painful conflict with each other, leave no doubt that sometime in 1853, neither Cornelius Berrian, nor those alleged to be, with him, trustees or other officers of the defendant, have, in fact, acted, or being permitted to act as such.

John P. Concklin was the acting President of the defendants' trustees when this action was commenced. He and his associates were, so far as statutory formalities are concerned, regularly elected officers of the Church and Society, have acted as such, and have had, and now have, exclusive possession and control of the church edifice and the temporalities of the Society.

The persons who, for over five years, have met in the church edifice for worship, have elected the officers of the society and appointed and supported its preachers, must be deemed for all the purposes of this motion as competent to appoint the trustees—And the trustees and officers appointed by them, in conformity with the provisions of the statute, and who have in fact, acted and are continuing to act as such, are, at least trustees and officers de facto, and on them alone, while such a state of things exists, can a valid service of process be made.

How much a want of conformity in their proceedings to the discipline of the society may affect the title of the acting trustees or their agents to their officers, cannot be investigated on this motion.

If the trustees and officers de facto are intruders, the proper proceedings to determine that question, and obtain such an adjudication and their removal, and a new election of trustees and officers in a lawful manner, must be taken and prosecuted elsewhere.

This court has no jurisdiction of such matters.

All the proceedings must be vacated, as being irregular, with $10 costs of this motion

Before Hon. Justice Slosson.

In re H. C. Traphagen.—Motion to discharge attachment denied, but without prejudice to a renewal of the motion on further papers, if so advised.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

DECISIONS.

Eli Jennings vs. John Dixon et al.—Motion to dismiss complaint granted.

Cornelius C. Stryker vs. Jacob Wolf.—Referred to Robert D. Holmes, Esq.

Hudson L. Linsley et al. vs. C. J. Nordguest.—Motion denied without costs.

The People et al. vs. Ransom Beman.—Order discharging judgment.

Peter Clarke et al. vs. James Bingham.—Motion denied, unless plaintiff file a new undertaking, &c.

Thaddeus Willsen vs. Daniel G. Taylor.—Motion to vacate judgment granted.

Alexander Fraser vs. William T. Child.—Motion granted.

Richard Temple vs. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company.—Motion granted without costs.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Daly.

Morris W. Strouse vs. Theodore W. Dennison &c.—The plaintiff brings this action as the assignee under a general assignment of one Jonas Heilbromer. The action is for trespass in wrongfully taking and converting by attachment $18,000 worth of goods so assigned to plaintiff.

The defence set up is that the assignment was fraudulent and void.

Fullerton & Whitehead for plaintiff; Stoughton, Osborne & Olney, for defendant.

The case is still on.

THE LAW MUSKETS AGAIN—SUIT TO RECOVER FEE OF $10,000.

Wm. H. Bigelow, Special Assignee of David A. Bokee vs. George Law.—It being generally known that this case was on the calendar for to-day, there was a large attendance of professional lobby agents.

The action is brought by plaintiff, as a special assignee of Hon. David A. Bokee, to recover $10,000 alleged to be due for special services rendered the defendant at Washington during the Administration of Gen. Taylor. Mr. Law, it will be remembered, purchased a large quantity of old muskets soon after the close of the Mexican war. Those muskets were bought of Government on time, and when the first payment became due, Mr. Law desired an extension of time. In casting about for a proper person to negotiate the matter for him, he hit upon Hon. Mr. Bokee, who, in the language of the complaint, was an ex member of Congress, on intimate terms with the officers of Government, was a man of influence and understood the ropes. The selection proved a judicious one, for he obtained the desired extension of time. The complaint sets forth that Mr. Law agreed to pay a "liberal compensation" for the "services and influence" of the party employed. Mr. Bokee, it seems, estimated his "services and influence" at $10,000—the amount now sued for.

The case was opened for plaintiff by J. M. Van Cott, Esq., who proposed to prove the value of the services rendered.

Judge Lott, for defendant, moved to dismiss the complaint. He argued at some length that the transaction was not legitimate—it was a violation of public policy, and one that could not be recover in any court of law. In support of this position references was made to the case of Harris vs. Ruff, in Barber's Reports, and quite a number other and similar cases.

Mr. Lott urged that if such a claim as this should be allowed, it would be an implication upon the officers of government. Every person occupying a public position should be compelled to do his duty, and the purity of our government would be stained if it was acknowledged that they could be influenced in a transaction of this kind. The whole case, he said, was based upon the idea that no other man but Mr. Bokee, could have exercised the necessary influence with President Taylor and Secretary of War Conrad.

Mr. Van Cott, in speaking against the motion, said the defence had not dared to put in a demurrer, and meet the case boldly, but claim that it is a violation of public policy. He did not consider it hardly necessary to answer the argument of counsel on the other side. The reports referred to were not parallel cases. The contract with the Government was the same as with an individual, and asked if it would be considered unlawful for Mr. Law to employ an agent to transact any business of his, which, from necessity or otherwise, he saw fit not to attend to himself. He considered that in all lawful transactions a man had a right to employ an egent to represent him.

The motion to dismiss was granted, and twenty days allowed to amend the complaint.

Mr. Van Cott asked for permission to strike out of the complaint the word "influence," which was used twice, as there was an attempt to construe it improperly, and offered to prove the services rendered.

Mr. Lott objected, as the motion had been decided, and as no proof had been offered it could not now be offered.

Mr. Van Cott hoped that this would not be choked or garroted out of Court in that way, and insisted that the words be stricken from the complaint.

Mr. Lott said the difficulty could be arranged by the Court refusing to grant the motion to amend, and an exception could be taken.

After some further talk the Court consented to amend the complaint as moved by Mr. Van Cott.

The case will be carried up.

CALANDER FOR FRIDAY, May 15.—Nos. 4, 8, 12, 35, 40, 46, 49, 57, 59, 65.

STRANGE CASE OF SUICIDE.—Yesterday afternoon the dead body of a man was found in a thicket at a lone spot at Green Tree Run near Roxborough, in the Twenty-first Ward. The deceased was a man apparently fifty-five or fifty-six years of age. In his right hand he held a pistol tightly grasped, the contents of the barrel of which had blown off the entire face of the deceased. The latter had evidently been dead some three weeks or a month. The body was clad in a dark tweed coat, single-breasted black cloth vest, dark ribbed pantaloons, black cloth cap, white shirt, gray knit drawers, and leather shoes with gums over them. In the pockets were a number of rubbers, some powder and matches, and a cigar case. There were also two memorandum books written in a foreign language, and several Belgian coins. A red cotton handkerchief in one of the pockets of the deceased bore the initials "R. S." and the figures 12. The deceased was about five feet six or seven inches in height, and had gray hair. A verdict of suicide was rendered. The body was sent to the Green House to await recognition.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

SHOCKING SUICIDE AT NEWARK, N. J.—A German named AUGUST MICHEL, residing at a boarding-house corner of Marshal and Broome streets, deliberately shot himself at about 8 o'clock, last evening, with a single-barreled gun, blowing his head literally to pieces, scattering blood, brains and flesh in various directions for about five feet round. He had retired to bed, but suddenly arose, and taking up his gun, passed through the room of a fellow-boarder, said, "Good bye, FRANK," and then walked to the middle of the street, placed the butt of the gun on the ground and the muzzle under his chin, and with his foot discharged it, blowing his head to atoms.

Deceased was about 38 years old, a mason by trade, and had a wife and two children residing in Germany and about two months since received a letter from his wife which appeared to give him much uneasiness of mind.—Daily Advertiser.

It is stated that upward of 10,000 Norwegians will proceed from Norway to Quebec during the Summer. Some will remain in Canada, but the larger portion will pass on to the Northwestern States. Sir CUSACK RONEY has left England for Christiana to make arrangements for the transport of those persons from Quebec to their destination.

The Daily Herald is a new fire-eating daily issued in Galveston, Texas. It intends to pitch into Northern fanaticism.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A telegraphic dispatch from New-Orleans states that advices from the City of Mexico to the 29th of April have been received. Great excitement existed relative to the filibuster expedition in Sonora, and 4,000 troops had been sent against it. Gen CRABB, the leader of the invading party, it was reported, had already captured several points.

Nothing had been heard of the steamship Asia up to the time of going to press. She brings a week's later news.

The National Quarantine Convention, yesterday, passed a series of resolutions reported by the Business Committee, which specify in what manner infectious diseases may be introduced, and what precautions are necessary to prevent contagion. The proceedings, reported at length, will be found elsewhere.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners sent an order to Mr. TALLMADGE, the newly-appointed Superintendent, for five men to go Staten Island and protect the house of the Health Officer, who feared violence. The Superintendent called on his Deputy, Mr. MATSELL, for the men, but Mr. MATSELL said he could not recognize the new authorities.

Thirteen members of the Board of Aldermen presented a protest, in their own Board last evening, against the acts of the late Legislature. It was adopted by a vote of 14 to 5—a party vote.

In the Board of Councilmen last evening, the state of the streets formed a prominent topic. A resolution was referred to the Committee on Streets, calling on the City Inspector to clean them forthwith. Communications were received from SIMEON DRAPER, Esq., and from the City Hall Commissioners, asking for the coöperation of the Board under the new Charter. These were referred to appropriate Committees, and, after the transaction of other routine business, the Board adjourned until Monday.

The Governor has appointed Captain WM. A. ELLIS, late an Inspector in the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, Port Warden, in place of Captain JOSEPH TINKHAM, who declined the appointment.

The American Abolition Society held their anniversary meeting in the City Assembly Rooms, yesterday morning. Speeches were made by Messrs. GREENE, GODDELL and FREDERICK DOUGLASS, and a series of resolutions were passed. From the Treasurer's report it appeared that the receipts for the year were $6,546, and the expenditures $6,184.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, Mr. BENJAMIN DENHAM was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in Sing Sing Prison for extensive forgeries on the Bank of Commerce. MICHAEL HENNESSY, for an assault on Capt. DOWLING, of the Sixth Ward, was sentenced to one year in the Penitentiary. JOSEPH MILLER, indicted for murder by beating his wife to death, pleaded guilty of manslaughter. His sentence was deferred.

The Centennial Celebration of the Swedenborgian Church was celebrated yesterday with appropriate services at the Church in Eleventh-street. The entire commemoration will occupy four days, and on Sunday the services at the Church in Eleventh-street will be specially worth attendance.

The Ladies' Five-Points Mission collected upwards of $4,000 at the Academy of Music last night, to aid in the construction of its school-rooms, which are rendered necessary in order to meet the demands upon that Institution.

The election for Trustees and Committees of the American Institute was held, yesterday, at the Rooms of the Institute, No. 351 Broadway, and resulted in the triumph of the "regular" ticket. The following are the Trustees elect: ROBERT L. PELL, President; WM. Hall, Edwin Smith, Benjamin Aycrigg, Vice-Presidents; Henry Meigs, Recording Secretary; Wm. B. Leonard, Corresponding Secretary; C. T. Backhouse, Treasurer. One hundred and eighty votes were polled.

The Convention of Delegates from various Houses of Refuge in the United States closed yesterday. A large number of resolutions were submitted, but only one adopted, recommending longer terms of committal. The remaining resolutions lay over till the next Convention, which was fixed to be held in this City the second Tuesday of May next.

The Congregational collation, last evening, was an eminently successful and brilliant affair. Addresses were delivered by some eight or ten ministers of various denominations, after which the large assembly sat down to an abundant collation.

The anniversary of the Deaf and Dumb was postponed yesterday in consequence of the storm.

Mr. HENRY HENDRICKSON, a resident of Brooklyn, has been missing since last Friday, and his friends are fearful that he has been foully dealt with. He left Brooklyn last Thursday morning, and went to Huntington, West Hills, on the Long Island Railroad, at which place there was paid to him on a mortgage nearly $1,000. He started directly to return to Brooklyn on foot, driving five cows which he had purchased at Huntington, West Hills. He drove his cows through the toll-gate, west of Jamaica, after which he turned on to the Williamsburg road. It is supposed that he was waylaid on this road, which leads through a piece of dense woods, and murdered. A man passed through the toll gate west of Jamaica shortly after him, and inquired if he had previously passed, and suspicion is directed to this individual.

Kansas Politics Again.

We publish this morning a very interesting communication in explanation and vindication of the course pursued by the Free-State men in Kansas, in declining to take any part in the coming election for delegates to a Constitutional Convention. It is written by one of the most intelligent and influential of their number, and is undoubtedly worthy of attention as an authentic exposition of their views.

We are among those who have questioned the wisdom of the action which our Correspondent endeavors to justify. It has seemed to us clear, from the beginning, that the Free-State men had nothing to gain by declining to vote, but that, as things stand, they were losing the opportunity to influence the result, or to convict their opponents of any illegalities by which they might be cheated of their proper weight. Our criticism of their course was based entirely upon its relation to what we supposed to be the leading, if not the sole, issue which the contest involves—namely, whether the new Constitution shall admit Slavery in the new State or not. The proposed object of the Free-State movement from the outset has been to secure its exclusion. The profound interest felt throughout the Union in the issue of the late Presidential Election grew out of the belief that upon its result depended the extension or the non-extension of Slavery into Kansas and the rest of the territory of the United States. This was the great and controlling issue of that great and impassioned canvass. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of our people felt an interest and an anxiety in the result which nothing could have inspired but such a conviction. The entire public sentiment of the Northern States,—and much of the best public sentiment of the Southern States, was earnestly and profoundly in favor of excluding Slavery in Kansas. The overwhelming popular strength of the Republican Party was due to this deep and rooted sentiment in the public mind. Thousands of men in every State were undoubtedly active Republicans for party reasons and on party grounds;—but with the great mass of that body of the people mere party considerations had no weight whatever. Nine-tenths of them were Republicans and voted for the Republican candidate solely and exclusively because they were in favor of making Kansas free. Naturally enough, these men did not cease to be in favor of freedom for Kansas when the special means by which they had hoped to accomplish that result failed of success. They did not think it best to insist that Kansas must of necessity become a Slave State because the Republicans had lost the chance of making it Free. They were in favor of seeking the exclusion of Slavery through the party which had obtained possession of the Government, inasmuch as that had become the only agency by which anything whatever could be done. And they have accordingly desired to see the Free-State men in the Territory embrace every opportunity to exert their influence, express their will and cast their vote so as to secure the adoption of a Constitution by which Slavery should be excluded. And inasmuch as the Administration and the Federal Authorities in the Territory stand solemnly pledged to secure for the bona fide inhabitants the full, free and fair exercise of their sovereignty upon this subject, they have believed that by proper energy on the part of the Free-State men this result might be secured.

Our correspondent, it will be noted, does not contest this position. On the contrary, he concedes that Kansas will be a Free State—that the party in power see clearly enough that their interest and their safety would be periled by any other result—and that the exclusion of Slavery is regarded by all parties as a foregone conclusion. He does not defend the action of the Free State party upon this basis, or from this point of view. He does not insist that it is peculiarly calculated to make Kansas a Free State, or that it is necessary to prevent its becoming a Slave State. But he says the policy of the Free-State men aims at other objects. It is designed to keep the party together—to preserve its unity and discipline, and to render it effective in the party struggle by which the contests which have hitherto divided the people of the Territory are to be succeeded. The men in power, he thinks, have abandoned the attempt to make Kansas a Slave State, and will now be contented to make it a "National Democratic" State. And in order to prevent the consummation of this purpose it was necessary for the Free-State men to consolidate their organization and to take such measures as would retain within their ranks the greatest number possible of their present adherents.

We have nothing whatever to say of the wisdom or policy of this view of the case. It may be in the highest degree important to prevent the Democratic Party from obtaining the ascendency in Kansas, and it is quite likely that the course adopted by the Free-State men is the one best calculated to secure that result. We are certainly not disposed to throw any obstacles in the way of its success. But we regard this avowal of our Correspondent as highly important, since it signalizes an entire change in the aspect of political affairs in Kansas, and affords good ground to believe that the terrible dissensions touching vital interests and fundamental rights which have hitherto disturbed the Territory, are already giving place to the mere partisan collisions which are inseparable from our political life, and which, however important they may be, do not menace either the existence or the solid prosperity of the States which they pervade. We are glad to believe that the era of usurpations and of rebellions—of civil oppression and of civil war for Kansas, is past: and that hereafter the worst contests which her people may encounter will be the contests for party ascendency and for party power.

Caustic on a Sore Spot.

The celebrated French Prince, whose name will yet be canonized as the patron saint of diplomacy, stood always in the greatest awe of committing his words to paper, and is said to have once undertaken a journey to Vienna, in the depth of Winter, rather than "manufacture evidence against himself under his own sign-manual," by refusing an impertinent invitation to some Nobody's wedding.

But the scruples which afflicted the atrabilious TALLYRAND are clearly unknown to the robuster constitution of our enterprizing fellow-citizen, Mr. S. N. SANDERS, who writes so many letters, and on such a variety of subjects that one might fancy him aspiring to be regarded as the "complete letter-writer" of the most advanced wing of the Democratic Party.

Having some time heretofore had occasion to smile at the roundabout and elaborate way in which this gentleman put forward some rather startling Democratic platitudes during his diplomatic residence in Europe, we must now do him the justice to notice the terse, pungent and vigorous handling of our municipal difficulties which we find in the last paragraph of his reply to the getters-up of the late mass meeting in the Park.

"But while we resist the State usurpers," says Citizen SAUNDERS, "we must not forgot the Democratic watch-word, 'Reform,' nor lose sight of the fact that the legislative majority—unscrupulously Black Republican as it was—would not have dared to so trespass on our rights, if the best interests of the Democracy of the City had been cared for in the Nominating Conventions last Fall."

This is evidently a double-edged paragraph, cutting deep into both sides of our municipal entanglements—a decided and fatal home-thrust, pushed in and twisted round in the wound by a hand that knows exactly where to strike. Put forward at the present time, it becomes important, not alone as an expression of individual sentiment, but as indicating the text from which the future sermons of our political high priests will be fulminated: it is caustic, in fact, applied on the allopathic principle to the sorest spot in the Democratic organization of our City.

Whatever else may be thought of "Citizen SANDERS," as he delights to call himself, his progressive tendencies and independence of all conventional restraints will be the last points questioned; and we know that on many occasions heretofore he has been urged forward to take the ground which men of more timidity were anxious to see occupied—although themselves unwilling to violate the discipline of "safe precedents" for that purpose.

Putting these things together, and coupling them with the facts that Citizen GEORGE is at present in a position which enables him to know the secret sentiments of our most influential City leaders,—we hail the confession quoted as the first dawning of a hope that character and fitness will be hereafter studied in the nominations made for our municipal offices, and that it is in contemplation to dissociate all questions of civic trust from those of political conchology. Whenever this consummation can be reached, the tax-payers, we believe, will have reason to sing nunc dimittis; and if Mr. SANDERS can, in any way, help it forward, or be placed by his friends in a position where he may even seem to do so, we shall all have reason to bless the Executive for the private favor that sent us this infant Hercules to strangle the municipal hydra in whose coils we have been hopelessly enmeshed.

Seriously and candidly speaking on a subject requiring both seriousness and candor, what political issues—save those of mere spoil—are involved in the election of an Alderman or Mayor? or, supposing us to have reached the standard of good character and fitness in our candidates for civic posts, what principles of justice or self-interest should prevent the good men of all parties from uniting cordially in their support?

If such had heretofore been the tests applied, would the incumbent of the first legal office in our City have been the kind of man to excite against our system the damaging rebukes and still more ruinous sarcasms of the European Press—the ridicule and indignation of our own citizens throughout the country, and a "defence" from a paper, once loudest in advocating his election, that the gentlemen's qualifications for the office would have really been better applied to the humbler calling of a "shoe-black?"

We must cut loose in municipal matters from this political servitude, if we desire to have the affairs of our City government conducted with either honesty or decorum. We must change the sources from which our municipal candidates are drawn, before we can hope to get rid of the corruptions which have made our City's name the synonym for incapacity and plunder.

The Stock-Gambling Monster.

The French novelist, BALZAC, invented a monster, midway between the Briarens of antiquity and the Frankenstein of Mrs SHELLEY—a creature, that is, absolutely without conscience, and multifariously armed for mischief. This monster of his was a society composed of thirteen members, sworn to mutual assistance in their individual designs. Some of these interesting persons occupied highly respectable positions in the world—sat in the Chamber of Deputies, talked loudly on the Exchange, dined with Cabinet Ministers, made good matches, and generally kept themselves in the eye of mankind, to the great advantage of their own fortunes and the edification of their fellow-mortals. Others, again, were low, disreputable scamps enough, who never aspired to public familiarity with their colleagues. But all of them, the high and the low alike, were united in one sentiment—the worship of success. Every man of them believed that virtue lived in victory, and that the sufficient vindication of every desire was to be found in its gratification.

So they worked together famously. Whatever one of them wished, the others helped him to obtain. Whatever one of them disliked, the others helped him to crush out. No thought of the moral quality of anything which they undertook, no concern for its probable consequences to others, ever entered the brain or the heart of any member of this estimable and efficient confederacy.

Perhaps the "Society of the Thirteen" was only the dream of a fantastic, coffee-drinking novelist. Perhaps also it was the subtle and picturesque allegory of a terrible satirist.

We incline to the latter view. For our own City affords us a piquant illustration of its meaning and its force.

Wall-street is a thoroughfare well-known to New-York and to the world. The stately tower of Trinity Church, whose gleaming cross salutes from afar the longing gaze of every Gothamite Ulysses returning to his home, overlooks the crowds that throng its sidewalk, from January to December—from morning until night. The foremost citizens of our goodly City are its continual familiars. Commerce and the Law combine to dignify and make it important. Whoever speaks of Wall-street speaks of industry, activity, prosperity—of work and of wealth—of brilliancy, and comfort, and ease, and splendor. In Wall-street churches are built, halls given, colleges founded. Wall-street bridges the Atlantic with steamers, binds together the corners of the world with iron nerves of thought, levels mountains, and performs all manner of useful and profitable miracles.

But there is a monster in Wall-street, of whose proceedings small cognizance is taken by the public, though the public has abundant daily reason to be aware of its existence—a monster like unto the monster of Balzac—a monster many-headed, many-armed, unscrupulous—and this monster is the brotherhood of the Bears of the Stock Exchange. Everybody knows that the Bears exist. Everybody talks about the Bears. Everybody jokes about the Bears. But if everybody knew what it is that the Bears are so busy in doing, we have our doubts whether the Bears would be treated as a joke. For consider but a moment what the Bears are after and what they achieve.

Most of the Bears, like many of the "Thirteen," are highly respectable individuals. They are well-to-do; they are fathers of families, members of churches—in all particulars of private life "honorable" men. Once out of Wall-street they cease to be Bears, and become worthy citizens again. But in Wall-street how do they behave?

A company of enterprising men get together, organize a capital, obtain a charter, and establish a railway. This railway is to unite two sections of country, which cannot fail to profit by the union. It is to develop the resources—to enhance the prosperity—to elevate the character of a particular region. So fair are the promises of usefulness and of consequent financial success which are held out by the directors of this railway to the world, that all sorts of persons are induced to come forward and invest their money in the enterprise. Not plethoric and rapacious capitalists alone, but the careful trustees of the property of widows and orphans—the managers of funds bequeathed to pious or educational uses—hard-working men and women beginning life with frugal industry in the hope of ending it in respectable ease—contribute of their means to the building and equipment of the road. Its stock comes upon the market, and comes there with the fair credit which is due to a substantial property efficiently managed. The unsophisticated citizen whose attention is directed to this Stock regards it as so much legitimate merchandise. He considers himself to be engaged in a perfectly proper and lawful business transaction when he buys it. He expects to obtain from it a fair and satisfactory return.

Not so the Bears. To the Bears this substantial Stock is not an article of commerce, but a provocation to gambling. "Ha!" they cry, "another stock in the market! So many more faro-chips—so many more counters, and now to see what we can make of it!" And thereupon the Bears take counsel together. One of their number has promised to deliver a certain quantity of the new Stock on a certain day. If he permits the market to follow its natural course, his bargain may net him nothing more than a descent commission. But this must not be thought of. Forthwith the monster is set to work. The brother Bears come forward throwing the most superfluous quantities of the doomed Stock upon the world. Prognostications of mischief, particular and universal, are disseminated in every direction by assidnous Bears and their faithful emissaries. The world of buyers is scared out of its senses. The value of the Stock declines—not the real value of it certainly, but the apparent value. Foolish holders (and how many sensible people are not foolish in the face of a panic?) sell out at a sacrifice—all sorts of distress, disturbance, annoyance, are caused to the community—the operations of a useful company are hampered, but the brotherhood triumphs, and the Bears particularly interested come out of their contracts with puffed portfolios and adipose bank accounts.

Do the Bears, the "reputable" Bears we mean, think themselves disgraced by these transactions? Do they hide away their gains from the public eye, and divide them in caverns, after the manner of the foresters discovered by the energetic ALI BABA? Not they? They boast of being Bears; they expatiate upon their ursine profits; they rejoice extremely in the upshot of their schemes. And yet, after all, in what respect are they better than the monstrous "Society of the Thirteen?" In what respect have their operations reflected credit upon them as citizens and as men?

The boldest Bear in town, we trust, would be ashamed to belong to such an association as we have described, if that association were a mystery, and its members were bound by pains and oaths to serve each other's selfish ends without remorse, consideration or scruple. But holding that our Bears have consciences, and are susceptible of moral rebuke, we beg leave to put it to them gravely and seriously, whether they have not even now good reason for being ashamed of themselves. They will say, perhaps, that they behave as every body behaves in modern commerce—that they are no worse than their neighbors. But in the first place this is not quite true, and in the second place if it were true, what then? Is their position the less untenable, the less abominable, because five hundred people instead of five have taken it up?

All commerce is not gambling, though there may be a touch of gambling in all commerce. And the law has discriminated between enterprises of pure chance and enterprises involving an honest exercise of human skill and industry, so far as to discourage the most flagrant of the former by positive statute, while it favors the latter as conducive alike to the welfare of the State and the elevation of individual character. The blowing of bubbles and the fomenting of falsehoods in the Stock Exchange are not enterprises which involve an honest exercise of human skill and industry. They are monstrous enterprises; and those who engage in them, whether as Bears or as Bulls, (and we have fallen now particularly upon the Bears, because they are the successful sinners of the hour,) are monsters—financial monsters inviting reprobation—commercial nuisances clamoring for abatement!

Assessment Bonds for Opening and Grading Streets.

A communication was sent to the Board of Aldermen, on the 29th ultimo, by the Comptroller in relation to the condition of the accounts of the City, consequent upon the manner in which the existing law requires that payments should be made for opening, regulating, grading and paving the streets. A similar document was presented to the Common Council, by the Finance Department, on the 10th of June, 1856, and the annual report of Mr. FLAGG of the same year contains the following statement of expenditure in the year 1855:

Expenditures for "Streets Opening," was	$1,204 236 80
And the receipts	817,481 08
Excess of payments over receipts	$386,754 82
Expenditures for "Streets Paving"	$1,114,580 36
Receipts on same account	781,847 26
Excess of payments over receipts	$332,793 10
These two "Trust Accounts," as shown above, have drawn out of the Treasury, in a single year	$2,378 817 16
And have brought into it only	1,699 329 24
Showing a deficit of	$179,487 92

Since the 1st of January, 1857, these accounts have run as follows:

Streets paving, paid	$104,345 01
Streets paving, received	55,635 03
Excess of expenditures	$ 48,709 98
Sewers, paid	$67,623 08
Sewers, received	54,527 96
Excess of expenditures	$13,094 12
And excess of streets paving	48,709 98
Total excess	$61,804 10
The widening of Walker, and extending Canal street, was confirmed April 29, 1854, amounting to	$549,728 00
There was collected, by Collector of Assessments, up to Sept. 8, 1856, when it was returned to Bureau of Arrears	370,196 32
Leaving uncollected	$179,531 68
The extending of the Bowery was confirmed, amounting to	$550,022 00
Received by Collector of Assessment	380,110 00
Uncollected	$170,112 00
The opening of First-avenue was confirmed, amounting to	$107 500 46
Collected by Collector of Assessments	58,892 97
Uncollected	$48,607 49

The expenses incurred, previous to the year 1852, for street-paving, did not require the large advances which are now made from the Treasury. Payments were then made as assessments were collected from the property-holders, the contractor to have the interest accruing on the sum assessed. The result of this mode of payment was, however, manifestly unjust, the contractors having, in some cases, to wait for years for their money. In the management of large jobs heavy outlays were required to carry them through, and the tendency naturally became to destroy competition, and to concentrate large jobs in the hands of a few individuals, who fixed such a price as would be a full indemnity to them for the delay in payment. In this way the property-holders were subjected to the payment of a high percentage beyond the real cost of the work, with the addition of interest on the assessment thus incurred. Loud and vehement complaints were raised by the host of smaller contractors, on the one hand, and by tax-payers and owners of property on the other. As a remedy for this state of things, application was therefore made to the Legislature, for a special act, authorizing the Common Council to anticipate the revenue derivable from assessments by issuing Assessment Bonds, previous to the collection of those revenues, in the same manner that the revenues arising from taxes are anticipated by the issue of Revenue Bonds.

The theory of placing the City Treasury in the position of banker, and to advance the whole cost of the work as soon as the job had been completed and confirmed by the Common Council, had its first origin in an ordinance passed Oct. 13, 1852; but was the natural reaction from the other extreme of holding contractors, assessors, &c., out of their money, until property holders had done their duty. Under the new system, the excess of expenditure over receipts has been frightfully great, and a remedy for it ought undoubtedly to be applied. It is to be hoped that the Common Council will take speedy cognizance of Mr. FLAGG's suggestions. In a range of five years, previous to 1855, the payments on account of assessments exceeded the receipts over two millions of dollars. If this is permitted to continue, arrearages will gradually swamp the Treasury, and liabilities will be created from which it cannot easily disentangle itself.

Mr. FLAGG desires that a return should be made to the old mode of paying for work done by assessment, only as the money is collected from property-holders, with the addition of legal interest, from the date of confirmation of the assessment to the date of payment into the Treasury. Experience has shown that this would prove an insufficient remedy to the delays of negligent property-owners. The example of Brooklyn and other cities had better be followed, in which an extraordinary rate of interest is adopted. In Brooklyn it is twelve per cent., and the danger of losing so large a sum is found to be all the stimulus that is needed. In no case should the present ordinances be perpetuated; but a wise change should be made which, while it relieves the treasury, also avoids the evils which existed previous to 1852.

MERCILESS ANGELS.—We have heard ladies remark that they disliked female shopkeepers, because they were so uncivil to their customers, and we presume it is for this reason that female counter-jumpers are so rare, even in those establishments which deal chiefly in articles designed for the use of women. Gentle and forgiving as women are in their conduct towards the other sex, they are generally merciless towards each other when they are called upon to pronounce judgment. If Mrs. CUNNINGHAM had been tried by a jury box, composed of her own sex, they would have condemned her without leaving the jury, at least we are forced to such an opinion from the course pursued towards that unfortunate woman since her acquittal. We would not impute to the sex generally the blame of the indignant ladies who have been assembled in front of No. 31 Bond-street since Mrs. CUNNINGHAM's release, and assaulted the unhappy inmates of that ill-fated dwelling by their obscene execrations, but their wrath has been very feminine, although it was so unseemly and boisterous in its manifestation. The Jezebels who have taken the law into their own hands, and made an attempt to punish Mrs. CUNNINGHAM for her supposed crimes, ought to be mercifully dealt with, as they only appeared to act from a natural impulse of their sex; but they should be prevented from repeating their outrages, and one or two policemen should be detailed to prevent the gathering of a crowd in front of the scene of the murder. If Mrs. CUNNINGHAM chooses to continue to reside in the house, she should be protected from the assaults of infuriated Amazons who do not approve of the finding of the Jury.

THE EVENING POST INCLINED TO REGARD THE BURDELL MURDER AS A CAPITAL JOKE.—The Evening Post perpetrates the following elaborate jeu d'esprit, concerning the Burdell murder, and the efforts which it considers proper to be made for the detection of its perpetrators:

REWARD FOR THE APPREHENSION OF THE MURDERER OF DR. BURDELL—PUBLIC SPIRIT AMONG THE PEANUT DEALERS.

Timothy and Hannah Keefe, proprietors of the peanut and orange stand at the Evening Post corner, hereby offer a reward of Five Thousand Peanuts to any person or persons who will furnish them with information which shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL.

The proprietors of the peanut stand on the Evening Post corner are disposed, in the absence of proper efforts in other quarters, to take the lead in such a movement; and they accordingly offer the above reward of five thousand peanuts for such information, to be communicated to them in writing, as shall lead to the development of this mystery, and the detection, conviction and punishment of the parties guilty of this murder. If any doubt shall arise as to the rightful claimant, the peanuts will be paid upon the written award of a majority of the dealers in maple sugar around the Post-Office.

If any parties who may communicate information on this subject desire that the fact of their having done so should be kept secret, their names will not be disclosed, without their consent. All communications in response to this offer should be addressed, marked "Private and Confidential," to

TIMOTHY KEEFE, }
HANNAH KEEFE, } Peanut Dealers.

EVENING POST CORNER, May 13, 1857.

It might be a fair question for consideration how far a public journal performs its duty to the community by thus ridiculing any endeavor that may be made towards the development of so fearful a mystery as surrounds the Bond-street homicide. But the Post is certainly at liberty to treat such a subject according to its own sense of propriety:—and if its readers enjoy the wit and humor of such a burlesque as that we have copied above, we have no wish to deprive them of the luxury. But its perusal must dispose the public to be much more lenient in its judgment of Coroner CONNERY's brutal jests while holding an inquest upon the body of the murdered man, than they were while they supposed that the spirit and temper which such conduct evinced was confined to him alone. The peanut capitalists of the Post have done what seemed impossible,—made Coroner CONNERY's proceedings appear respectable.

WHERE ARE DOCTOR BURDELL'S RELATIVES.—In looking over a file of Buenos Ayres papers, received yesterday, we found an advertisement offering a reward of $20,000 for the discovery of the murderer of "the late DIONISIO CAMPOS." The reward is offered by the relatives of the murdered man. The fact occurs to us, in reading this advertisement, that the relatives of the late Doctor BURDELL, who will inherit considerable property from his estates, have offered no reward for the discovery of his murderer or murderers. Why do they not unite in the effort to discover the perpetrator of the foul deed?"

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE COMMISSION.

Action of Superintendent Tallmadge—His Orders to "Deputy" Matsell Disobeyed—Five Metropolitan Policemen Enrolled and sent to Staten Island to Protect the Old Quarantine

Hon. F. A. TALLMADGE, the newly-appointed Superintendent of Police, under the act establishing a Metropolitan Police, is already busy in the discharge of the duties of his new position. A letter was sent him yesterday from the President of the Commission, requesting him to ascertain and report to the Commissioners the names of the Captains of the several Police Districts, and the names of the Police force. In compliance with this the Superintendent sent an order to "Deputy" MATSELL, "to report forthwith" the knowledge sought by the Commission. Deputy MATSELL took no heed of the order, but he laughed consumedly. The Commissioners asked further for information as to the number and names of the police force on special duty, but the Superintendent has not been able to furnish it, because his Deputy will not give it to him, though ordered to do so by "General order No 2." And thus the matter stands at present between the Superintendent and the Deputy. Mr. MATSELL will go on in the old way, and will not obey any orders of the new Police Commission until the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the law framing it is decided by the Court of last resort. On the other hand, Superintendent TALLMADGE will not attempt to enforce his orders to the old Police, but will await the final decision of the law. He will, however, continue to receive orders from the Commissioners, and to send orders to his Deputy, and report progress.

The Health Officer at Quarantine sent a note to President DRAPER yesterday, asking that some of the Metropolitan Police might be sent down to Quarantine, as threats had been made to burn down his house, and he feared an attempt to do so would be made. President DRAPER immediately dispatched an order to Superintendent TALLMADGE to detail forthwith to the Quarantine a number of men sufficient to protect the property of the estate there located. The Superintendent sent an order to Deputy MATSELL to detail five men to perform the duty desired by President DRAPER. The order was delivered by the Superintendent in person, but, notwithstanding, the Deputy would not obey it, saying he had no men to spare to protect the public peace on Staten Island. The Superintendent was thus compelled to seek for policemen in another quarter. He consulted with the Commissioner, went into the street, and soon there after five men in want of a job were found, and forthwith enrolled as a Metropolitan Police force. This force was immediately sent to Quarantine. The Superintendent is of opinion that these officers will be sufficient to prevent any incendiary attempt upon the house of the Health Officer; and to-day fifty additional men, it is said, will be forwarded to the Island, to prevent any further disorder at either of the Quarantines.

A meeting of the new Commissioners was held at the office of President DRAPER yesterday afternoon. They had under consideration the procurement of capacious rooms for the Commission and the Superintendent and the Deputies. A place in Canal-street, between Broadway and Centre-street, was suggested, as was also one in Franklin-street, near West Broadway, and rooms in Moffatt's Building, corner of Broadway and Worth-street. No decision upon this question was arrived at. The Commissioners will meet again to-day.

The personal relations between Superintendent TALLMADGE and "Deputy" MATSELL are now, as they have been for many years, of the most friendly character. Mr. MATSELL is decided in his intention to resign, in any event, but he will act until the legal settlement of the difference between the new and old Commissioners. Should the new Commissioners gain the day Mr. MATSELL may continue to act until the new system is thoroughly organized, and matters made more easy for his old friend the new Superintendent.

ANTI-SLAVERY MEETING.—The Anti-Slavery meeting advertised at the Shiloh Church, in Prince-street, last evening, was well attended, and was addressed by FREDERICK DOUGLASS, Dr. J. M'C. SMITH, C. L. REMOND, and others, upon the subject of Slavery, the Dred Scott decision, and the Constitution. Mr DOUGLASS spoke but a short time, calling on several persons present to follow him, and make the meeting a kind of love feast. C. L. REMOND took the rostrum, and after speaking a few moments, made some denunciatory remarks upon the Dred Scott matter and the Constitution, when a white person in the audience interrupted the applause by an audible hiss; this so offended Mr. REMOND that he poured out a strain of invective and rebuke upon the offender, that raised a perfect storm of applause and laughter.

The love feast here came to an end, and a "free fight," as DOUGLASS called it, commenced, in which Mr. REMOND was somewhat taken down for getting so excited about the individual who had spoken in his own vernacular. The meeting having now assumed the tone of a highly excited discussion, Mr. DOWNING proposed that a meeting be arranged between Mr. REMOND and Mr. DOUGLASS for the discussion of the constitutional question. Mr. GARNETT, the Professor, proposed his own Church as the place, and Wednesday evening next, at 7½ o'clock P. M. as the time, which was mutually agreed to.

A series of resolutions were then passed, calling upon the friends of the cause to vote at the Fall election for those who have shown themselves in favor of equal franchise; hailing with intense delight the noble vote of forty Members of the Assembly, declaring that "slaves cannot breathe in New-York;" recommending a meeting of the colored citizens to express their opinion upon the Dred Scott decision, and that Mr. DOUGLASS, Mr. GARNETT, and Mr. MYERS, be requested to address said meeting, and declaring that the Legislature have done an act wise, just, and humane, and one in accordance with the Declaration of Independence, in passing the resolutions in favor of equal suffrage. The last two tendered the thanks of the meeting to both branches of the Legislature for this recognition of their manhood and citizenship, and proposing a testimonial to STEPHEN MYERS, of Albany, for his successful labors in securing the passage of said resolutions by the Legislature.

FUNERAL OF JUDGE OAKLEY.—The funeral ceremonies of Judge OAKLEY took place yesterday, at the late residence of the deceased, No 12 Gramercy Park, and at Calvary Church, of which Judge OAKLEY was a member.

Bishop POTTER, assisted by Revs. Messrs. PRATT and MONTGOMERY, officiated. After a prayer and a few remarks by Bishop POTTER to the relatives, the pall bearers took their position on either side of the coffin, and it was borne to the front of the altar in Calvary Church; Bishop POTTER and his associates leading the procession, which was not very large, owing to the constant rain storm prevailing all day.

The following gentlemen served as pall-bearers:

Jas W. Gerard,	John Duer.
Jas. J Roosevelt,	Gulian C. Verplanck,
Henry Hofman,	L. R Stutt,
Daniel Lord,	Moses H Grinnell.

The religious exercises were brief. Dr. HAWKES being absent from the City, his place was supplied by the venerable Bishop of New York. The remains were taken to Trinity Church-yard and deposited in the vault of the Cruger family situated at the rear of the Church, near to many of the distinguished friends of the deceased. Judge OAKLEY was 74 years of age at the time of his death, and leaves a wife and two children—a son and daughter.

Marine Matters.

A meeting of the cabin passengers on board the steamship Alabama, May 12, passed a series of complimentary resolutions to Capt. SCHENCK and the officers of the ship, for doing their duty upon the occasion of an accident (of some kind not described) on board that vessel. They also promise Capt. SCHENCK a silver speaking trumpet suitably inscribed.

☞ The new U. S. Tariff—as arranged by E. D. OGDEN, the entry-clerk in the New York Custom House,—has been published by RICH & LOVELL, No. 64 Nassau street. It is the best edition of the new tariff that has come under our notice. In the classification of articles,—where such nice discrimination is essential,—it is particularly excellent.

THE POLITICS OF KANSAS.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

It is an omen of encouragement to the Free-State men of Kansas that, with the subsidence of party strife, they are not forgotten by their friends in the North. The very controversies respecting their policy, and the disagreements of those journals which have been alike champions of the good cause, should therefore be hailed with satisfaction.

The writer hereof, himself a long resident of Kansas, believing that the actual condition of parties there is not well enough understood here, wishes, through the TIMES, to indicate the opinions he has formed, from a pretty general knowledge of events, and free communication with the leaders of the different parties. In doing this he disclaims, in the outset, any design or authority to speak for any others than himself, much less for the Free State Party; but he still believes his views to be substantially those entertained by that party, whose unity of principle and effort he believes never to have been more perfect than now.

Down to the present time, the parties politically known in Kansas have been but two, namely,

I. The FREE-STATE Party, comprising the great bulk of the population; and

II. The PRO-SLAVERY Party, composed of

1. An insignificant minority of actual residents;

2. The mass of the Federal office-holders;

3. The members of the "Blue Lodges," organized in Missouri and made up of citizens of that State, but acting in Kansas at elections and other critical emergencies; and

4. The ahsm domestic Territorial Government which, however, is indeed but a consequence and creature of the "Blue Lodge" conspiracy already named.

As to the relative strength of these organizations, that of the Free State Party has always been derived from its vast numerical preponderance, and a conviction of right; while the Pro-Slavery Party has succeeded in achieving and retaining a nominal supremacy, by means of the boldest and most unscrupulous frauds, and the unhesitating indorsement of these practices by the National Government.

This brings us down to the present hour; and at this point, the dominant party, seeing clearly in the overwhelming emigration from the Free States, their own inevitable defeat on the issue of "Kansas as a Slave State," have resolved so to modify and transform their programme as to secure at least a material part of the solid fruits of a victory, while acknowledging a defeat. "Circumstances alter cases." While the mottoes, "Kansas a Slave State," and "JAMES BUCHANAN for President," chimed sufficiently well in the South for Democratic purposes in 1856, yet the party, taught by the lessons of their victory, now know that the only hope for Slavery in the national contest of 1860, will be in convincing the North that Democracy and Freedom in Kansas are is complete harmony in 1857-8. But to surrender Kansas entire, is a greater sacrifice than Slavery will quietly make, even for the Democratic Party; hence, the construction of the new programme for that incoming State, which, while it gives her freedom (after a fashion) on her own soil, secures the whole weight of her influence, when admitted, in favor of Slavery as a question of National politics.

This new programme totally ignores the old issue of "Kansas a Free or Slave State," and reaffirms the principle of "Squatter Sovereignty," with a tacit admission that Kansas will be free. It also seeks to disorganize the Free-State Party, and secure from the elements enough of strength for its rival to achieve, with Federal and border aid, the partial triumph it now seeks. To produce these results, the dominant party assumes the question of Slavery to be no longer in dispute, and affirms that there are no such parties as "Free-State" and "Pro-Slavery" now in the field. The only organizations it will recognize are "Abolition" and "National Democratic." If it can thus break down the barrier of Freedom, and substitute therefor the sophistical boundary of fanaticism, it hopes to range strength enough on its own side to answer its end.

The great object, then, to be first secured by the "National Democratic Party" in Kansas, is to destroy the Free-State Party, as at the present organized. Its means for doing this are neither few nor despicable. It gains ground whenever a Free-State man can be brought to any acknowledgment of the "Bogus laws." If it can entangle prominent men, like POMEROY or LANE, in intimate pecuniary relation with STRINGFELLOW and JONES, the progress is encouraging. Nine-tenths of the financial "operations" in Kansas, at present, are based on the validity of the Shawnee Mission Code. Once get the Free-State leaders well committed to these operations, and they are committed to the "laws;" and, if the issue is of "Abolitionism" and "Nullification" on the one side, and "National Democracy" on the other, does not then secure some of these leaders to the latter, it will be strange indeed; and with the leaders, it is, of course, reasonable to expect a fair proportion of the "masses."

But a still more important means than this for the demoralization of the Free-State Party is its division, if possible, on the voting question. If a large fraction can be induced to mingle in the June election, then, indeed, has the entering wedge been well driven. Here will be a general opportunity for smothering the old "issue." Nearly every candidate for delegate to the Constitutional Convention can run on a "Free State" ticket, and a fine opportunity will present for dividing the "people" on the new "issue" of "Abolition" or "National Democracy." And if this card could be successfully played two or three times, previous to the election of the first State Legislature, is it too much to anticipate that the composition of that body might be made sufficiently "Democratic" to secure the election to the United States Senate of two such good Free-State National-Democratic men as General CALHOUN and Mr. Secretary STANTON? Men who would work shoulder to shoulder with DOUGLAS and TOOMBS, and give us another splendid example of a "Free State" throwing its national influence to aid in the growth and strengthening of that institution whose mission it is to strangle Freedom wherever it has the power!

And if in addition to such a result, Mr. Governor WALKER could achieve enough credit with the North, for thus "making Kansas a Free State," to secure for himself an election to the Presidency in 1860, would not the double victory fully justify the high reputation of the Democratic Party for successful management, and prove that its union with Slavery has indeed been a source of political strength?

To this hasty sketch of Democratic policy, as it is now being evolved in Kansas, I have only to add a few words directly touching the true policy of the Free State Party in the Territory. At present it is a unit. Called to vote, to-morrow, on the real issue, it would do so by a common and harmonious impulse. Abandoning that issue, and allowing its attention to be diverted by the skillful dodges of demagogues, who can say what distractions might ensue, or what defeat follow? Is it not clear that its only real safety is in uncompromising adherence to its primitive principle?

But, in adhering to this principle, can it with safety abandon its organization? This organization embraces an inchoate State Government, founded on the Topeka Constitution, around which, as a rallying point, the people love to gather. It is their own work—the offspring at once of necessity, love, and "popular sovereignty;" and it has taken a hold on their affections such as no other ever will. Admitting that a partisan Federal Administration can utterly prevent its recognition by Congress, still, as a column round which all true men can rally in time of doubt or peril, is it not wise in us to preserve it with respect and care, rather than cast it aside as a fiction, and allow ourselves to drift hopelessly in the wake of "National Democracy." We know it to be what we want; to be the choice of the people; to be worthy of recognition by Congress; and is it not best for us to adhere to it till we are enabled to construct another, embodying the same principles and guaranteeing the same rights.

Were it indeed possible for a fair vote to be secured at the June election, the argument for participation would be ten-fold stronger. But we know this to be beyond hope. The voting there is done already; and the electors are the Sheriffs and Probate Judges. In making up the census and registry list, enough has already been done to insure that

1. The mass of Free-State names are omitted.

2. Their places are occupied by names of actual non-residents, claiming citizenship through the very outrages of the past.

3. The distribution of delegates is so made on this false basis as to preclude the possibility of a Free-State majority, notwithstanding our proportion is as nine to one!

In view of these facts, what madness would it be for the people of Kansas to abandon their now impregnable position, and mingle in this election, thus indorsing the frauds on which it is based, without even a remote hope of either success or justice.

If ever we are called upon to indorse the tyranny sought to be imposed upon us, let it be as a choice between two evils, and seeing a certainty, through the ignominious act, of achieving our deliverance from the whole system of cruelty and wrong. With such a prospect in view, it will be time enough for us to debate the question; but no shadow of such a prospect is offered us in June.

In the meantime, will not our friends believe that we are doing the best thing for ourselves and the cause, in thus preserving our status quo, and keeping our line of battle unbroken. J. M. W.

THE CELEBRATION AT JAMESTOWN—EXCURSION TO ST. LOUIS.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 14.

It is estimated that seven thousand persons, including sixteen military companies, yesterday participated in the Jamestown celebration. Ex President TYLER occupied two hours and a half in the delivery of the oration. Governor WISE spoke in response to the multitude. Fireworks and a grand ball terminated the ceremonies. Sixteen steamers, gaily decked with flags, anchored at the Island.

To-day the Committee of the Baltimore and Ohio and Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad Companies formally extended an invitation to the President and his Cabinet officers to join in an excursion to St. Louis on the 1st of June. Several of the latter are inclined to accompany the party.

CHARLESTON, Wednesday, May 13.

The steamship Isabel has arrived from Havana and Key West, 10th inst.

It was thought the ship Ellen E. Baker, ashore off Coryfort Lights, would go to pieces.

The bark Philadelphia, of New York, from New-Orleans bound to Sweden, was taken into Key West, leaking and badly injured.

The price of sugars had further advanced. Muscavado was quoted at 11@16 rials, and was in active demand. Clayed Molasses sold at 11. and Muscavado at 12@12¼ rials.

Great Quantity of Grain Afloat at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Thursday, May 14.

There is afloat at Buffalo, mostly from the upper Lakes, 390,000 bushels of Wheat, 190,000 bushels of Corn, and 6,000 barrels of Flour.

The Crops of the South.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, May 14.

Since the late rains the grain crops in a circle round here within a radius of 100 miles, look quite promising. The same accounts come from Virginia and Louisiana.

Musical.

The Sacred Harmonic Society give a grand performance of Dr. LOEWE's cantata of the Seven Sleepers, this evening, at the City Assembly Rooms. Miss BRAINARD is the principal vocalist; Mr. BARSTOW the conductor.

THE BURDELL MURDER.—REWARD.—In the absence of any definite action on the part of our City authorities, private citizens seem determined to stimulate Police officers and others in effort for the detection of the murderer. A day or two ago, Dr. BRAINARD volunteered to be one of ten to guarantee a reward of $10,000 for such arrest and conviction, and this morning the proprietors of the DAILY TIMES stepped decidedly ahead of the celebrated Doctor, by offering on their own account a reward of $5,000—subject, however, to a withdrawal whenever they think the State authorities have taken proper means to attain the same end.

Our object in offering this reward is to detect the murderer. If the City or State will take effectual steps to accomplish this result, and offer a reward likely to do it, we shall very cheerfully turn the matter over to them. But those who may give the information desired will in any case be sure of their reward,—either from the public authorities or from the TIMES Proprietors.

From the Evening Mirror.

PUBLIC SPIRIT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.—The Proprietors of the NEW-YORK TIMES offer a reward of five thousand dollars to any person or persons who will furnish them information which shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL. They reserve the right of withdrawing this offer whenever the authorities of the City or State shall take proper action calculated to accomplish the same result; and upon so doing they will, if requested by the parties, hand over to the said authorities whatever information may be elicited by this notice. All communication in response to this offer, should be addressed, in sealed envelopes, marked "Private and Confidential," to the "Editor of the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES."

It is a sad state of things when private energy and capital are called upon to make good the incompetency and shortcoming of our official ministers of justice, particularly in a case like this, when the very honor of the City is at stake. And it is well that we have among us citizens of sufficient generosity and public spirit to step forward in such an emergency, determined to follow up and drag from his lurking place the assassin whose pursuit the City authorities seem to have abandoned.

MISS KISSAM FOUND.—Miss KISSAM, the girl who left her home in Jamaica, a few days ago, has been found. She came to New-York, and from here proceeded direct to Boston, by the Norwich route. From there she went to Chelsea, where she was discovered by a gentleman who knew her. She was taken care of, and a dispatch sent immediately to her relations.

Captain CLAYTON, of Alabama, passed through Columbus, Georgia, on Tuesday week, with a company of forty-five men for Kansas, and adds that all are sound and well, and Southerners to the core.

National Quarantine Convention at Philadelphia.

From the Evening Journal of Yesterday.

FIRST DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Quarantine Convention assembled yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. A long paper prepared by Dr. J. W. STARLING, formerly of the Marine Hospital, Staten Island, relating to the subject before the Convention, was presented and read by Mr. FRANKLIN, of New York.

This paper set forth the utility of quarantines, mentioned the most formidable diseases requiring their use, and then reviewed the manner in which typhus fever, Asiatic cholera and yellow fever exhibited themselves, together with remarks as to their course and influence. The document closed with the following words:

"Let the importance of cleansing foul ships, prohibiting the landing of damaged cargoes, or rotten fruits, or rotting clothing, into our city, or in any populous town, be fully appreciated or sustained, and you have secured almost all the good that can be derived from mere quarantines. Beyond these, quarantines are an intolerable burden, annoying to the traveler, frequently distressing to the sick, oppressive to the merchant, and injurious to the trade, beneficial only to attachés, and to seaports where they do not exist. In short, without domestic sanitary measures or aids, quarantines are of but little use, and with them, they are still less."

Dr D F. CONDIE then moved that the paper be referred to the Business Committee. Agreed to.

Mr. FRANKLIN, of New-York, and Mr. DIEHL, of Philadelphia, were added to the Committee on Business.

Mr ASKEW, of Wilmington, offered a series of resolutions, expressing the sentiments of this Convention relative to a system of quarantine laws. They were as follows:

Whereas, great interest has been awakened in the questions pertaining to commercial intercourse among the nations of the earth and the close relations under some circumstances, of the health of communities to the regulations which effect this intercommunication; and, inasmuch as there is great diversity and irregularity in the rigor of enactments which characterize the legislation of different bodies upon this subject; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is expedient that the system of quarantine regulations be revised, and that correct principles as far as scientific research and observation have developed them should be the basis of future enactments, to the end that a uniform code, as far as possible, may be secured in all our ports.

Resolved, That the following propositions be regarded as the sentiment of this Convention:

1. That there are certain diseases which may be introduced into a community by foul vessels and cargoes, and diseased crews and passengers.

2. That these diseases are small pox, and, under certain circumstances, typhus fever, cholera and yellow fever.

3. That when the latter diseases are introduced in this manner, their action is limited to individuals coming within the immediate influence, and can scarcely be expected to become epidemic, unless there exist in the community the circumstances which are calculated to produce such disease, independent of the importation.

4. That the local circumstances alluded to, are collections of decomposing substances, in a season marked by certain meteorological conditions.

5 That efficient sanitary measures, including quarantine, will, in most cases, prevent the introduction of these diseases, and may, at any rate, disarm them of their virulence, and prevent their extension when introduced.

6 That the present quarantine regulations in operation in most of our States are inefficient as a preventative of disease, and are prejudicial to the interests of the community.

The resolutions were referred back to the Committee to be printed.

SECOND DAY—MORNING SESSION.

The Convention was called to order this morning at 10 o'clock. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The President announced the reception of a communication from Dr. THOMPSON, Marine Hospital Physician, at Quarantine Station, New York. It was moved and carried that the document be read.

Before its reading was completed, objections were made that the letter was not properly before the house, and it was therefore referred to the Business Committee.

The letter briefly stated that the writer considered the New-York system of Quarantine as the most perfect that could be desired, and that he viewed all opposition to it as notoing more than the effort of a visionary brain.

The Report of the Committee on Business was then considered, section by section.

The second proposition of the second resolution excited much discussion. It was proposed to amend it so as to read, when speaking of the diseases that might be introduced by foul vessels and cargoes, that "among these diseases the most important are small pox, &c."

The amendment was lost, and the original proposition carried as published.

In the third proposition of the second resolution, the words "can scarcely be expected to," were stricken out, and the word "cannot" inserted.

The fourth proposition of the second resolution excited much discussion. It was objected to in toto by some members, and after attempts had been made to amend it, to lay it upon the table, and to postpone it indefinitely.

The venerable Dr. JACKSON spoke, and declared that he was not in favor of such an indefinite postponement of the subject, and thought that it should be recommitted to the Committee.

Mayor RICH, of Boston, proposed an amendment to the third proposition, by which the objectional features of the fourth would be avoided.

It was finally referred to the Committee on Business for reconsideration.

The fifth proposition was adopted as published.

The sixth proposition was adopted in the words: "That the present quarantine regulations, in operation in most of our States, are inefficient, and often prejudicial to the interests of the community."

Dr CONDIE, of Philadelphia, offered the report of the Committee of Business. It was a highly interesting document. The concluding portion is as follows:

A. Disease may be introduced: 1. By a foul vessel, especially when proper measures are not taken to keep the run and hold free from stagnant and putrid bilge-water; and more particularly when the hold is soaked with the drainage from sugar or molasses, or when coffee, grain or other putrefiable matters are allowed to penetrate and remain beneath the timbers of the ship. 2. By cargoes of rags, cotton, or other porous substances, shipped from ports at which any malignant epidemic or disease of a contagious character prevailed at the time when the vessel was loaded. 3. By the filthy bedding, baggage and clothing of emigrant passengers, particularly when these are crowded together in uncomfortable quarters, when the passengers themselves may be free from any actual disease. 4. By the air that has been confined during the voyage in closely sealed and unventilated holds. 5. By squalid and diseased passengers landed and crowded together in unhealthy neighborhoods, or in small and unventilated dwellings. 6 By passengers and crews, their bedding, clothing and baggage, who are actually laboring under, or infected with any positively contagious disease.

B. I. To prevent, therefore, the introduction of disease from the several causes enumerated, the necessity of providing for the careful inspection of all vessels immediately upon their arrival, and before they are allowed to come up to the wharves of a city, for the landing of their passengers and discharge of their cargoes, is apparent. No vessel should, in fact, be allowed to do so, until her hold is freely and fully ventilated by the opening of the hatches, and the introduction of wind sails, nor until the bilge-water is entirely removed, and the run effectually cleansed and purified.

2. Provisions should be made for the immediate landing of all those portions of the cargo, baggage and clothing of a vessel, that may be judged capable of generating or communicating disease, and for their proper purification at such places and under such regulations as shall preclude all danger of their exerting a morbific influence, either immediately, or upon their subsequent admission into the city.

3. Provisions should also be made for the immediate landing of all such persons from on board of vessels as they arrive, and their due and comfortable accommodation and treatment, until such time as they can be taken charge of, and properly cared for by their friends.

4. In the case of a ship-load of squalid passengers, or those errongly predisposed to disease, their clothing, beds, and other effects, should be at once subjected to a thorough ventilation and purification; and, upon their landing, adequate measures should be adopted to prevent them from crowding together in confined, unhealthy and illy-ventilated dwellings and localities.

5. When a vessel arrives in a particularly foul condition, or on board of which disease has prevailed during the voyage, after her crew and passengers have been removed from on board of her, she should be subjected to a thorough process of cleansing and purification, for which purpose it may be necessary to discharge her cargo at a safe distance from the City, and to allow only such portions of it to be conveyed there as are incapable of creating disease, the residue being subject to ventilation in such a manner as shall prevent it from suffering damage and all unavoidable deterioration.

C. 1. The carrying out of these provisions should be entrusted to a single officer, with such assistants as may be required to facilitate him in the execution of his functions.

2. This officer should be a regular physician, of unquestionable talents and experience, and possessed of great decision and rectitude of character.

3. His compensation should be sufficiently ample to enable him to devote his entire attention and energies, throughout the year, to the duties of his office.

4. While the power of removing him for incompetency, neglect, or other adequate cause, should be vested in some competent tribunal, his appointment should be based solely upon his capacity to fulfill satisfactorily his incumbent duties, and his continuance in office made dependent upon his faithful and skillful discharge of those duties.

5. To this officer should be intrusted the sole and entire decision, under certain general provisions established by law, as to the treatment required in the case of each vessel that shall arrive, and of its cargo, crew, and passengers, and to place it and these in a condition to prevent any danger of the introduction by them of disease, he, at the same time, being held to a strict accountability for the manner in which the discretionary power thus confided to him is executed.

6. As in every community a Board of Health is necessary to watch over its sanitary condition, and to prevent or remove all domestic sources of disease, this body would appear to be the one in which the power of appointing and the general supervision of the official conduct of the Quarantine Physician may, with the greatest propriety, be invested.

We express our conviction, founded upon a thorough examination and experience of this subject, that—

1. Yellow fever is not contagious, per se.

2. That it is only propagated in a foul or infectious atmosphere, analagous to that which gave it birth.

3 That the term "contingent contagion" is a misnomer, inapplicable to yellow fever, that whatever condition relates to yellow fever is essential, whether of an atmospheric or malarious condition, and that without these, yellow fever always ceases with the individual case.

4 That Quarantine measures alone can never protect a community either from the introduction or propagation of disease, however rigid they may be, as they are but a branch of the important department of hygiene.

5. That we believe that efficient sanitary measures, properly enforced, can always protect a community against the origination or extension of any of the above diseases, except small pox.

6. That for this a thorough examination be made of all those arriving entering the country, that they be protected by vaccination, and if not so protected, vaccinated.

7. That we recommend that there should be attached to our Board of Health and Quarantine Establishments—regular stations for minute meteorological observations—and Vaccine Establishments—and that a record of these be published monthly for public benefit.

8. That we advise additional means of ventilation and purification of vessels, and comforts for seamen and passengers.

This report was considered section by section, but, up to the time of the conclusion of our report, the first section only had been amended and adopted, so as to read as follows:

A. Disease may be introduced; 1st, by a foul vessel, especially when proper measures are not taken to keep the hold free from stagnant and putrid bilge water; and more particularly when there exists in the hold droppage and slippings from putrefiable matters which are allowed to penetrate and remain between the timbers of the ship.

HO! FOR THE RUSSIAN EMPIRE—THERE has ever existed in the mind of all an instinctive desire to retain to extreme age the appearances and beauty of youth, and the Storehouse and Garden of Nature have been ransacked to find the all powerful Restorative and Preservative; but all efforts in this regard failed until a few years since, when, by patient investigation, and innumerable experiments upon himself, Prof. WOOD made the discovery of a balsamic preparation which, by nature's own process, would restore the natural secretions to the Hair, when gone, continue its constant flow to hair, when it was not lost, and thus make the old appear young, and preserve to youthful appearance to any age. It was this quality in the HAIR RESTORATIVE which caused Senator Hannegan to say it acts upon the principles of the first and greatest of all toilet-makers—Nature; and Senator Breese that he had admired its wonderful effects; and thousands of others, from the learned Judges on the bench and Divines of the pulpit to the intelligent and accomplished maiden and matron, to bear their united testimony to its wonderful restorative and preserving powers; hence its fame has spread all over this Continent, and also all over Europe. Large quantities have recently been ordered, even to Russia! and some to be sent by His Imperial Majesty the Czar! and that it is all it claims to be, and should be upon the toilet of every lady and gentleman old or young, from the highest to the lowest. There needs no other evidence than its universal popularity, and that it is now sold by every popular Druggist in the city and country. Circulars no one can doubt, can be had at the Depot, No. 312 Broadway.

SOON TO BE PUBLISHED:

THE CHARACTER OF WASHINGTON.

From Irving's "Life of Washington," Vol IV.

In the volumes here concluded, we have endeavored to narrate faithfully the career of Washington from childhood, through his early surveying expeditions in the wilderness, his diplomatic mission to the French posts on the frontier, his campaigns in the French war, his arduous trials as Commander-in-chief throughout the Revolution, the noble simplicity of his life in retirement, until we have shown him elevated to the Presidential chair, by no effort of his own, in a manner against his wishes, by the unanimous vote of a grateful country.

The plan of our work has necessarily carried us widely into the campaigns of the Revolution, even where Washington was not present in person; for his spirit pervaded and directed the whole, and a general knowledge of the whole is necessary to appreciate the sagacity, forecast, enduring fortitude, and comprehensive wisdom with which he conducted it. He, himself, has signified to one who aspired to write his biography, that any memoirs of his life distinct and unconnected with the history of the war, would be unsatisfactory. In treating of the Revolution, we have endeavored to do justice to what we consider the most striking characteristic; the greatness of the object and the scantiness of the means. We have endeavored to keep in view the prevailing poverty of resources, the scandalous neglects, the squalid miseries of all kinds, with which its champions had to contend in their expeditions through trackless wildernesses, or thinly peopled regions; beneath scorching suns or inclement skies; their wintry marches to be traced by bloody footprints on snow and ice; their desolate Wintry encampments rendered still more desolate by nakedness and famine. It was in the patience and fortitude with which these ills were sustained by a half-disciplined yeomanry, voluntary exiles from their homes, destitute of all the "pomp and circumstance" of war to excite them, and animated solely by their patriotism, that we read the noblest and most affecting characteristics of that great struggle for human rights. They do wrong to its moral grandeur, who seek by common-place exaggeration to give a melo-dramatic effect and false glare to its military operations, and to place its greatest triumphs in the conflicts of the field. Lafayette showed a true sense of the nature of the struggle, when Napoleon, accustomed to effect ambitious purposes by hundreds of thousands of troops, and some of thousands of slain, sneered at the scanty armies of the American Revolution and its "boasted battles." "Sire," was the admirable and comprehensive reply, "it was the grandest of causes won by skirmishes of sentinels and outposts."

In regard to the character and conduct of Washington, we have endeavored to place his deeds in the clearest light, and left them to speak for themselves, generally avoiding comment or eulogism. We have quoted his own words and writings largely, to explain his feelings and motives, and give the true key to his policy; for never did men leave a more truthful mirror of his heart and mind, and a more thorough exponent of his conduct then he has left in his copious correspondence. There his character is to be found in all its majestic simplicity, its massive grandeur, and quiet colossal strength. He was no hero of romance; there was nothing of romantic heroism in his nature. As a warrior, he was incapable of fear, but made no merit of defying danger. He fought for a cause, but not for personal renown. Gladly, when he had won the cause, he hung up his sword never again to take it down. Glory, that blatant word, which haunts some military minds like the bray of the trumpet, formed no part of his aspirations. To act justly, was his instinct—to promote the public weal, his constant effort—to deserve the "affection of good men," his ambition. With such qualifications for the pure exercise of sound judgment and comprehensive wisdom, he ascended the Presidential chair.

There for the present we leave him. So far our work is complete, comprehending the whole military life of Washington, and his agency in public affairs, up to the formation of our Constitution. How well we have executed it we leave to the public to determine; hoping to find it, as heretofore, far more easily satisfied with the result of our labors than we are ourselves. Should the measure of health and good spirits, with which a kind Providence has blessed us beyond the usual terms of literary labor, be still continued, we may go on, and in another volume, give the Presidential career and closing life of Washington. In the meantime, having found a resting-place in our task, we stay our hands, lay by our pen, and seek that relaxation and repose which gathering years require.

THE SUBSCRIBER WOULD RESPECTFULLY call the attention of his friends and the public, that after having been in business 25 years, is reluctantly forced to sell out on account of his sight failing, he will sell very low to reduce his stock, until he meets with a purchaser to buy him out; it will be well for the clergy and those that love literature to call and examine his stock, consisting of theological, historical and miscellaneous works; they would save a large per centage.

The coal must be of the best quality of white ash furnace and stove, clean coal, in good order, of 2,240 pounds to the ton, weighed by a person selected by the committee, and delivered in the bins at the several schoolhouses.

The proposals must state the mines from which it is proposed to supply the coal, and the price for furnace size and stove size.

The wood to be of the best quality, and delivered, properly sawed, split and piled, in the school-yards, as may be designated by the proper authority. The pine wood to be best Virginia pine, not less than 3 feet 6 inches in length, and the oak wood not less than 3 feet long, and the sticks not less than 3 inches in diameter.

The proposals must state the price per cord of 128 cubic feet solid measure, for pine and for oak, and also the price per cut for sawing and splitting each load.

The wood will be inspected and measured by the Inspector of Fuel of the Board of Education. Said coal and wood to be delivered at the schools where ordered, as follows: two-thirds of the quantity of wood from the 25th of May to the 20th of July, and the remainder as required by the committee; two-thirds of the quantity of coal from the 20th of July to the 1st of October, 1857, and the remainder as required by the committee. Said contract to be binding until the 1st of May, 1858.

Security for the faithful performance of the contract will be required, and each proposal must be accompanied with the names and signatures of the proposed sureties.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—NEW-YORK, April 2, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an installment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such installments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of the new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the installments from the time the first of the same have been paid on the installments to the holders of the present shares.

All stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July next, and the installment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by the terms, expired on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Information, pertaining to the details of this issue, can be obtained by inquiring at the office of the Company.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

By order of the Board of Directors,
J. N. PERKINS, Treasurer.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day in the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (9th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over 300 certificates of its virtue, all within 30 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of this discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from 5 to 8 years, tea spoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

Board of Aldermen.

ALDERMAN'S PROTEST AGAINST THE ACTS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, Alderman CLANCY, President, in the chair. The first paper offered was the following

PROTEST:

The undersigned, members of the Board of Aldermen of New-York, respectfully present the following protest:

That we individually reaffirm and reiterate the sentiments heretofore announced by this Board relative to the various laws enacted at the recent session of the Legislature, touching the government of this City, and the control of some of its most important branches of enterprise as having been adopted in a spirit evincing a total disregard and with the boldest defiance of the wishes and rights of our people.

We protest particularly against those laws as being forced upon us at a time when this City and other large municipal communities equally interested with us in asserting the evils of despotic interference by the State central powers with purely local concerns are not adequately represented in the Legislature in proportion to our population, and are therefore left at the mercy of an unconstitutional preponderance of representation from the interior parts of the State. And whether those measures are for that reason invalid or not, we solemnly protest against them as constituting an unjust aggression upon us, tending to produce an irreconcilable feud, destructive of all harmony and good brotherhood, and threatening to drive our community to direct its energies and resources to effect a disruption and division of the State.

We protest most especially at this time against the "Act to amend the Charter of the City of New-York," passed April 14, 1857, because we do not believe it meets the approval of the people of this City, or any measurable portion of them, but is as obnoxious to them as it is unacceptable to their Common Council, because it did not originate with them nor with any representative exponent of their will, but comes tainted with the same irresponsible political paternity to which may be traced much of the fanatical, despotic and unconstitutional legislation with which of late years we have been afflicted, and particularly because to permit that the Legislature may with impunity change the entire form and fabric of our local Government, and compel our acceptance of an entirely new Charter, under pretence of amending the old, without our application or consent in any form to be ascertained, would be to establish an alarming and destructive precedent, placing all subordinate communities at the mercy of political factions, divesting all local institutions of every degree of permanency and security, and subjecting them to fluctuations and incongruous experiments as often as the exigencies of party politics may require.

It cannot however, be that the public works and urgent affairs of the City peremptorily demand that the business of the Common Council and ordinary work of legislation should be no longer suspended, but that the laborers and persons employed in the construction of sewers, grading, paving and regulating streets, as petitioned for, should be paid, as well the necessity of enacting measures to reform the systems for cleaning the public streets, and for other public necessities, the undersigned have concluded to proceed with the ordinary legislation under this their most solemn protest.

We therefore distinctly protest that no action of ours, as members of this Board, shall be regarded as accepting in any degree the aforesaid amended Charter, or any part thereof, as a valid enactment, obligatory upon this City or its inhabitants, or as waiving any legal or constitutional objections to the same, and any act, ordinance, or resolution done or passed by this Board, or with our assent, consistent with the provisions of said amended Charter, and not incompatible with said Charter as heretofore existing, shall be considered as taking effect conditionally, and only in the event that said Charter shall be ultimately adjudged binding upon us by the tribunals to whom the same may be referred; and that any act, ordinance, or resolution, which may be adopted or done by this Board, consistently with the provisions both of said amended Charter and of the Charter as previously existing, shall not be considered as made or passed under or in pursuance of said amended Charter, except in the event of its being adjudged binding as aforesaid, but as made and passed under said Charter as previously existing until such adjudication shall be made. We further and specifically protest against the following named acts:

An act to reduce the several acts relating to the District Courts in the City of New-York into one act.

An act for the regulation and government of the Central Park in the City of New-York.

An act to suppress intemperance and to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors.

An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof.

An act to erect a new City Hall and to appoint Commissioners for that purpose.

An act to regulate the use of the ships and wharves of City of New-York between Piers Nos. 2 and 12 East River.

An act relating to the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of New-York.

An act to authorize the Second Avenue Railroad Company to construct a new track through a portion of the City as being a series of measures of purely local application in relation to which the Common Council should first have been consulted—the interests affected thereby not being represented in any other portion of the state, and we being answerable to the people directly for the judicious government of the subjects legislated upon, and responsible for all taxes or other pecuniary assessments or expenses involved in their execution.

JOHN CLANCY, President of Board of Aldermen.
WM. WILSON, Alderman First Ward.
PETER MONEGHAN, Ald. Fourteenth Ward.
E. C. MCCONNELL, Ald. Thirteenth Ward.
THOS. MCSPEDON, Ald. Nineteenth Ward.
WM. COULTER, Ald. Seventeenth Ward.
JAMES R. STEERS, Ald. Eleventh Ward.

M. L. HARRIS, Ald. Third Ward.
BARTHOLOMEW HEALY, Ald. Fourth Ward.
HENRY HOFFMIRE, Ald. Fifth Ward.
S BANTA, Ald. Ninth Ward.
WM. MCCONKEY, Ald. Twentieth Ward.

The protest was adopted by a vote of 14 to 5, and 2,000 copies were ordered to be printed.

In answer to a question from Alderman BLUNT, the President stated that the Board was now proceeding under the new charter.

The report of the Committee with reference to the organization of the bureaux of the Street Department was taken up and referred to a Special Committee.

The Board concurred with the Councilmen ordering one solid gold badge and thirteen silver badges, for the use of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department and his assistants.

The Excise Commissioners sent in a communication asking that apartments be provided for them. It was laid on the table.

The following was presented, but the Democratic members would not hear it read. It was laid on the table:

To the Common Council of the City of New-York:

You are hereby requested by the Board of Police, of the Metropolitan Police District of the State of New-York, to furnish and provide, at the expense of the City of New-York, all necessary accommodations, within the precincts of said Metropolitan District, as are contained within the boundaries of said City; all the station houses required by the Board of Police, for the accommodation of the Police force of said precinct, for the lodging of vagrants and disorderly persons arrested for offences, in accordance with sec 14 of the act entitled an act to establish a Metropolitan Police District and to provide for the government thereof. The Board of Police will require the station houses now used for police purposes, and the existing accommodations therein, and provision for warming and lighting the same, and will need no further provision in respect to the same until a further requisition is made upon your honorable body. By order of the Board,

S. DRAPER, President.

Dated New-York, May 11, 1857.

A communication was received from the City Hall Commissioners, asking the cooperation of the Board, as required by the law.

There was the same opposition to hearing it that there was to that of the Police Commissioners. It was laid on the table, and the Board adjourned to Monday next.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Thursday evening, the President, J. W. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair. After the presentation of a few unimportant petitions, a discussion arose upon a resolution presented by Councilman SICKLES, as to the propriety of the appropriation of $1,500 for the purpose of the presentation of a banner for the Fire Department. The question was whether the matter be referred to the Committee on Arts and Sciences, or to the Fire Department Committee.

Councilman OTTARSON facetiously satirized the Fire Committee. This was the first time that he had observed any effort to remove any matter in which they were interested from their decision. He believed there were no political influences at work, and if a sewer in Fifth-avenue were referred to the Fire Committee, he would cheerfully acquiesce. He had been accustomed "to go it blind," supposing that it was hopeless to expect any independent effort from their jurisdiction that might not seem exactly to fall within their province. He certainly had the highest respect for the members of the Committee.

Councilman BRADY defended the Fire Department Committee.

Councilman MCCAHILL thought this matter of a banner was a "fancy piece of work," and therefore ought more fittingly to be referred to the Committee on Arts and Sciences. On vote, so referred.

The following resolution was offered by the President:

Resolved, That a Committee of five be elected to redistrict the election districts, and to make all necessary arrangements for the conduct and regulations of all elections authorized by section 43 of the Charter of 1857, and report their action to the Board for their approval.

Laid over.

CLEANING STREETS.

A resolution was offered by Councilman CAMPBELL, to inquire into the reasons why the streets have not been cleaned according to contract. It was moved that the matter be referred to the Committee on cleaning streets.

Councilman OTTARSON admitted the dirty state of the streets. The blame rested with the Council. Where was the security, and the bonds? They had been tendered in the person of a nephew of Mr. PETER COOPER. There was no way of reaching the matter now, but through the plea of the immediate danger of pestilence. The blame rested with the Democratic majority of that Board.

Councilman WARNER replied somewhat warmly. There had been no hocus pocus arrangement. It was false that the Mayor and Comptroller desired new contracts.

Councilman OTTARSON said he had made no such statement. He believed the Mayor had no desire to exercise any influence except such as through brooms and hose he could exercise for his individual benefit.

Councilman MCCAHILL said that the language of Councilman OTTARSON was that of a common libeller.

Councilman WARNER said that he hoped the whole matter would be referred to the Standing Committee on cleaning streets, with directions to report at next meeting.

Councilman HEMPHILL thought it was highly necessary to do something immediately.

Councilman JONES said the committee had issued recommendations to every contractor, they had only been able to get two before them. The only proper way would be to sue the sureties, if due action were not taken by the contractors. If they would not do the work and clean the streets, the City Inspector and Corporation Counsel ought to be put upon their track.

Councilman OTTARSON said that the papers never having been sent to that Board, not one shilling could be obtained at law from the securities; that is, according to the opinion of corporation counsel. As to himself, he thought differently. However, let the Board sue the sureties and observe what they will get by it.

Councilman BRADY thought this debate on the merits of the question was altogether out of order. The contractors are to be paid as long as they continue to work, but they might stop work to-morrow and the City has no remedy.

Councilman JONES, one of the Committee, recited the terms of the contract signed by the Mayor and Comptroller, and also the form of agreement in each case. The Committee wished to lay the whole before the Board.

Councilman BOOLE urged the reference to the Standing Committee on Cleaning Streets. It was so referred.

Councilman H. SMITH then moved that, "whereas there are on contracts existing whereby the streets of the City can be cleaned, the awards of contracts lately made never having been confirmed, and, therefore, not binding; and inasmuch as the streets require immediate attention, and there being a change under the present charter of the Department which shall have charge of the aforesaid work; therefore, be it resolved, that the City Inspector be hereby directed to have the streets of the City cleaned forthwith."

Referred to the Committee on Streets.

A preamble and resolution in favor of amending the rules and orders of the Board of Councilmen in accordance with the charter of 1857, was presented by Councilman KETTLEWELL, and on vote was laid over.

NEW ORGANIZATION OF DEPARTMENTS.

The ordinance reorganizing the legislative department of the City Government under the new charter, (read for the first time on the 6th instant,) was called up and adopted.

A resolution was adopted to appropriate $500 for the pay of a clerk to assist the Committee in investigating the books of the Comptroller's Department.

The Report of the Committee on Sewers was taken from the table. It was referred to the Committee on the Whole.

A resolution directing the Street Commissioner to advertise for bids to build sheds around Tompkins Park for the accommodation of persons doing business at the market during the rebuilding, was laid over.

A communication was received from SIMEON DRAPER, Esq., and the Commissioners of Police, requiring that the Metropolitan Districts he provided with proper Station-houses. Referred to the Committee on Police.

A communication from Messrs. ROBERT EMMETT and others, informing the Board that they have taken the oath of office as Commissioners for the Erection of a New City Hall, and requesting the co-operation of the Board, was read, and referred to the Committee on Repairs and Supplies, being the same document as preferred before the Board of Aldermen at the same hour.

The names of the Committee appointed to investigate the Comptroller's accounts, are Councilmen HUNT, JONES, WAUGH, FRANKLIN, VAN TINE.

The Board adjourned until Monday.

Death of Judge Oakley.

At a special meeting of the New-York Law Club, held on Thursday evening, May 14, 1857, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, On the 11th day of May, 1857, Hon. THOS. J OAKLEY, Chief Justice of the Superior Court of the City of New-York, departed this life—therefore, as a slight token of our respect for the deceased when living, and for his memory when dead, it is hereby

Resolved, That we, the members of the New-York Law Club, look upon his death as a sad bereavement, not only to that Bench and Bar which he for so long a time adorned by his great learning, affable manners and unassuming character, but also to this community at large.

Resolved, That we as nepiran'a to, and members of, the profession of the law, in an especial manner, regret the loss of so perfect an example, and of one who was ever willing to look with leniency upon our deficiencies.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathies to the family of the deceased, hoping that the pain and anguish arising from his demise may be lessened in the thought that he has gone before the Judge of Judges universally beloved, to receive the reward of his labors.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and that the same be published in the several newspapers in this City.

No Canal-Boat Race.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 13, 1857.

The published notices of a canal-boat race between the Western Transportation Company and the Old Oswego Line, involving a bet, is entirely without foundation. No such bet has ever been made or contemplated. By inserting this denial you will confer a favor on SMOTHERED HOGS.—A large number of smothered hogs arrive every week on the hog and cattle trains. Cheap meat dealers are always ready on the arrival of the trains to snap them up for the retail market. On Wednesday the "Dead Animal Inspector" from the City Inspector's Office, seized at the loot of Duane-street, 10 very fat smothered hogs, and sent them to Barren Island. During the last month he has seized and placed in charge of the dead animal contractor nearly 100 animals of the same sort.

The grass in the Park is as verdant and luxuriant as one would wish to see it, except in one particular spot near the New City Hall. Here it is as bald as the crown of a monk's head. It is not too late to turf it yet.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT WITH A STONE.—Two young men, named Jerry Eldridge and Henry Whitton, were brought before Justice OSBORNE, at the Lower Police Court, yesterday morning, charged with committing a felonious assault upon Carson Bloomer, clerk in a grocery store at the corner of Washington and Robinson streets. From the statements made by the prosecuting parties, it appears that on Wednesday afternoon the prisoners entered the grocery store aforementioned, called for and drank some liquor, after which they got into an altercation with Bloomer, the clerk, on account of a stream of water from a hose-pipe being forced into the face of one of them. No blows were exchanged, however, and Eldridge and Whitton left the premises. They returned again in the evening, and again drank, when the previous difficulty with the clerk was renewed. After the interchange of epithets and threats, Eldridge ran into the street, and, seizing a paving stone, hurled it violently through the store window. The missile struck Bloomer, the clerk, on the head, knocking him senseless, and injuring him so badly as to cause fears of a fatal termination. The prisoners were detained for further examination.

[ANOTHER PATENT SAFE SWINDLE.—Mr. Helmer, of the town of Columbia, Herkimer County, came to this City a few days since, and while here made the acquaintance, at a down-town hotel, of some "sharpers," who enticed him to Staten Island, where by the means of the patent safe and "the borrow," they defrauded him out of a gold watch and chain worth $150 and $80 in money. His confidence friend presented him with a check for $900 on one of the City Banks, as security for the money lent. Mr. Helmer was deserted by his friends on the Island, but he did not suspect that he had been swindled until informed at the Bank that his check was worthless. The swindlers have thus far evaded arrest.

DECENT ON A HOUSE OF ILL FAME.—Lieutenant Bennett, of the Third Ward Police, made a descent Wednesday afternoon on the house No. 65 Worth-street, and arrested several little girls whom he found there, and the proprietress of the place. One of the little girls whom he arrested was only 12 years of age. She and her associates were sent to Blackwell's Island. The proprietress was dismissed.

A GOOD ARRANGEMENT.—Lieutenant Bennett, of the Third Patrol District, has been detailed by the Mayor to the office of the City Inspector, to assist that officer in the arrest and punishment of parties violating Corporation Ordinances. A squad of men from the Reserve Corps has been placed under Lieutenant Bennett's orders.

LONG ISLAND.

QUEENS COUNTY EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The following gentlemen have been appointed Commissioners of Excise in Queens County: THOMAS D. MONTFORD, Oyster Bay; EBENEZER KELLUM, Hempstead; HENRY J. MABBET, Astoria.

ANOTHER MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE—SUPPOSED MURDER.—There has been another disappearance on Long Island, and supposed murder. The party missing is Mr. HENRY HENDRICKSON, who resided in Huntington street, South Brooklyn. He has lived in South Brooklyn but a short time, having recently moved there from Huntington West Hills, thirty-five miles distant from Brooklyn, on the Long Island Railroad.

Mr. HENDRICKSON left his home a week ago yesterday morning for Huntington West Hills. He arrived at the latter place at 10 o'clock on the same day, and was paid a sum of money, supposed about $1,000, on a mortgage. After receiving the money he bought five cows, and at 4 P. M. proceeded on his return to Brooklyn, driving the cows with him. With the cows there were three calves. He came on to Jericho that evening, and remained there all night. He left Friday morning, with his cows, and is known to have passed through the toll-gate, one and a half miles this side of Jamaica, at about 12 M.

A young lad, some 12 years of age, accompanied him through the toll-gate and was assisting him in driving the cows. The keeper at the toll-gate noticed that, after passing through the gate, they turned on to the Williamsburg road, where they soon disappeared from view. This is the last trace Mr. HENDRICKSON'S friends have been able to obtain of his movements. He did not pass through the toll-gate on the Williamsburg road, and no evidence has been gathered of his retracing his course. The toll-gate which he would have had to have passed through on the Williamsburg road, is some two miles from where the road turns from the Jamaica and Brooklyn road. The Williamsburg road at this section passes through a continuous wood nearly the whole distance, and not a single house on either side. His friends apprehend that he was murdered while passing through this road. In partial confirmation of this belief, the keeper of the toll-gate this side of Jamaica, states that very shortly after Mr. HENDRICKSON passed through, a man came to the gate and asked if a man and boy had passed driving some cows and calves with them. Upon his replying that they had a few minutes before gone through the gate, the man hurried along the same route with Mr. HENDRICKSON. The toll-gate keeper did not notice the man sufficiently to be able to give a description of him. It is supposed that this stranger man followed after Mr. HENDRICKSON, and compassed his murder in some way, being possessed of the fact of his having with him a large sum of money.

A brother of Mr. HENDRICKSON and his son have made a thorough examination along the road passing through the wood referred to, but have been unable to discover any indication of any struggle on the way, or any trace of Mr. HENDRICKSON'S body, or even what is more remarkable, the slightest clue to the whereabouts of the cows or the boy attending Mr. HENDRICKSON.

Mr. HENDRICKSON is a man 45 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches in height, and weighs about 180 pounds. His hair is light-brown, with sparse, light, sandy side whiskers. He wore a black frock coat, black cloth vest, black Cassimere pants, and a black silk hat. He has a wife and five children residing in Brooklyn. Mr. D. W. HENDRICKSON, his brother, doing business at the corner of Bridge and Plymouth streets, Brooklyn, offers a reward of $100 for the recovery of the dead body, and $50 for the cows, or $10 for one of them. The discovery of the cows, he thinks, might afford some clue to the fate of Mr. HENDRICKSON.

CAUTION TO HOUSEKEEPERS.—A well-known piano-forte tuner, who for some time has been connected with a Broadway establishment, on Tuesday last was employed by a gentleman in Brooklyn to tune his piano. He was left alone in the parlors at work upon the instrument, and immediately upon his leaving the house it was discovered that a secretary in the room had been broken open, and $165 abstracted. Thereupon the Police were informed of the robbery, and yesterday the piano tuner was arrested, when he acknowledged the theft, but upon returning the money and paying all expenses, he was permitted to depart.

RECEPTION OF PHŒNIX ENGINE COMPANY NO. 5 OF NEW-HAVEN.—This Company arrived in Brooklyn last evening, where they will remain for several days as the guests of Engine Company No. 12. Engine Companies Nos. 11, 12 and 21 received them at the Dépôt in New-York, and proceeded to Brooklyn, where a torch-light procession was in waiting, consisting of Engine Companies Nos. 1, 4, 7, 9, 11, 12, 19, 21; Hook and Ladder Nos. 3 and 4, of the Western District, and Engine Company No. 7, Bucket No. 1, and Hook and Ladder No. 3, of the Eastern District. There were eight bands of music in the line, and after [illegible] through some of the principal streets, the visiting Company was escorted to their quarters in the Wallabout.

FOUND DEAD.—JOHN COLLINS, a man of intemperate habits, residing on Red Hall [illegible], Brooklyn, was found dead in bed yesterday morning. Coroner REDDING visited the house early yesterday, and took charge of the body, and will hold an inquest to-day. When he entered the house he found a little son of deceased trying to awake him; he said his father was asleep.

The Boy that Was Said to be Beaten to Death at School.

Some excitement at present exists in Newark, N. J., in consequence of the sudden death, by violence, it is said, of a little boy named RICHARD BRANT, residing with his parents on Fairmount-avenue in that City.

The circumstances of the case, as far as our reporter could learn on the spot, are as follows:

The boy, who is about 10 years of age, while attending District School No. 7, some two weeks since, received a severe chastisement at the hands of Mr. TORREY, Principal, for some alleged misconduct. The day following, the boy was taken quite ill, and has since been confined to his bed, gradually getting worse, until Friday last, when death ensued. The statement, as given by the boy previous to his death, would indicate that the means adopted by the teacher in chastising the child was calculated to induce inflammation of the brain. He said that the teacher held his head closely between his knees, and while in that position beat him with the rattan.

Mr. TORREY says in his own defence, that the punishment inflicted was in this case no more severe than the case merited, and, was not in any way harsh or unnatural. He states further that he was informed by the parents of the boy, upon inquiry as to the cause of his absence from school, that BRANT was ill with some bilious complaint, and that he was not a little surprised when informed of the rumors derogatory to his prudence or humanity.

Thus the case at present stands. The School Trustees of Newark are, however, taking the necessary steps toward having the case thoroughly investigated.

THE COURTS.—The Grand Jury of the Hudson County Court came in, on Tuesday night, with forty bills of indictment and were discharged. Twenty-seven persons confined in the jail, against whom no bills were found, were discharged from custody. The Court of Oyer and Terminer was not in session on Wednesday—the cases not being ready for trial.

AN UNFAITHFUL DOMESTIC.—A domestic named MARIA DONOHUE, was obtained in a New-York Intelligence office, on Wednesday, by Mr. H. WESTBROOK, of Jersey City, and, yesterday, she was arraigned before Recorder BEDFORD and Justice RODGERS, charged with stealing three silk dresses and other articles. The clothing was recovered and she was sent to the Work-house for three months.

PRECAUTIONS.—Since the death of GLENNON, who was run over on the New-Jersey Railroad track about two weeks since, the Company has caused a fence to be constructed along the line of the road from Warren to Prospect street, and taken other precautions to prevent a recurrence of such an accident.

☞ The Hudson County Court of Oyer and Terminer commenced the criminal trials yesterday afternoon.

THURSDAY, May 14—P. M.

The California packet announced last evening is an unusually satisfactory arrival. Besides the large delivery of Gold and the confirmation of the previous good news from the Spring working of the mines, the Legislative movement for the payment of the State debt is both timely and encouraging. We copy below the details of the arrangement, entertaining scarcely a doubt that the final action of the Legislature, and the vote of the People, will confirm what has already been done by the Senate. The present remittance to New-York, which is $1,707,000 in bullion on the manifest, will probably count up nearly or quite two millions, including the numerous small deposits of dust making in the Assay Office to-day from passengers, and the usual amount of drafts on the Government Treasury, most of which have yet to be presented.

There is much ease in Money among the Brokers to-day, the employment on stocks being behind the Street supply, while the applications for discounts, outside of Bank, have also fallen off. There was a good deal of activity among the California bankers and the Bullion brokers to-day, in [illegible] and selling gold. [illegible] went into the Assay Office, [illegible] count as Specie in the Banks. The amount paid into the Sub-Treasury to-day [illegible]; the whole receipts of the [illegible]; the disbursements, $258,800; balance this afternoon, $13,887,794. The reduction in the next six or seven weeks will, from present appearances, be to about ten millions of dollars.

The dealings at the Stock Exchange to-day were quite unequal in temper, as well as prices. The relative supply of certificates on the Street to the enormous amount of outstanding and daily maturing contracts, in several of the active Road Stocks, is gradually, but not all present appearances, surely dividing the control of prices, if not throwing it against the operators for a fall. A strong demonstration was made against Cleveland and Toledo at the early Board, 68@67⅛, which was followed up with equally heavy sales in the afternoon, but without effect, the cash price closing 68¾ ₱ cent

VOL. VI.....NO. 1765 NEW-YORK SATURDAY, MAY 16 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Foreign Appointments—New Ministers already Appointed—Places still to be filled.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 14, 1857.

The President intends, about a fortnight hence, to take up the subject of the diplomatic and consular appointments. It is believed that a very general change will be made in those offices. It is the desire of the Administration to select suitable men, and to elevate the standard of all our foreign appointments. As a preliminary step to action on this subject, the President has called for a list of the names of all the members of the foreign diplomatic and consular corps, their places of residence and salaries, and the States from which they were appointed. This examination is preparatory to a new cast of the whole lot, in reference to local, not political claims, as well as personal character and official qualifications.

A glance at the list will show the necessity of a thorough reast of the higher appointments, in view of local equality and sectional and political influences. FRANKLIN PIERCE came into the Presidency with only two Northern and two Southern States against him. There were political claims upon him from States which are not now in the ring.

To begin with the London mission. There is no propriety in giving that to a Pennsylvanian now when the President is from that State, and also a Cabinet member and a first-class minister for China. Mr. DALLAS will no doubt be succeeded next Fall or Winter, by Mr. R. J. WALKER, and probably with Mr. DALLAS' assent, for he would rather give place to Mr. WALKER, as a personal friend, than any one else. Mr. WAKLER's appointment would not be of a local, but cosmopolitan character. But as he would be appointed from Kansas, he would hail from that Territory, or State, as it may be.

Ex-Governor SEYMOUR, who has been four years at St. Petersburg, cannot longer remain, even if disposed, for Connecticut, as a Republican State, has already been adequately noticed by a Cabinet office. This mission has been sought for by two politicians from the smallest, but the most decided Republican, of the Western States. Mr. LAWRENCE applied for it, but the President has no idea of giving it to that or any Republican State.

J. Y. MASON has held the Paris mission four years and a half, and has never been "physically and mentally" fit for it. But the late Administration did not dare to supersede him. Lest some more able man should take his place, the Emperor has, it is said, intimated a wish that Mr. MASON should be continued. As Virginia had not a Cabinet member under the late Administration, there was a propriety in giving her a first-class mission. There is less reason for it now, and probably a mission of smaller grade will be allowed to her. For the French Mission, Mr. BUCHANAN has correctly decided to obtain the services of Senator SLIDELL, but he, though his better half would prefer a residence in Paris, inclines to retain his seat in the Senate.

AUGUSTUS CÆSAR DODGE was appointed to Spain from the State of Iowa, when that State was Democratic. Mr. BUCHANAN has already offered it to Mr. PICKENS, of South Carolina, who hesitates to accept it, inasmuch as he chooses the Sweden mission, because it was once offered to him by JOHN TYLER, and then declined.

PETER D. VROOM, of New-Jersey, has held the Berlin mission four years. He has expressed a wish to return. His successor might be from New-Jersey or from Delaware, so far as the political claims of those States are concerned. But there is a strong pressure from the South for this post. South Carolina must have a first-class mission.

If Mr. PICKENS will not accept the mission to Spain, either he or Gov. AIKEN will have the mission to Berlin. It was intimated to Mr. JAMES B. CLAY, of Kentucky, that he could have it, but it was declined by that gentleman.

Mr. FORSYTH, of Alabama, has held the mission in Mexico less then a year, but he would no doubt be recalled, except for the influence of personal and political connections. When it shall be proposed to make a new treaty with Mexico, he may be superseded by the appointment of some other Georgian.

WM. TROUSDALE, of North Carolina, was appointed four years ago, as Minister at Rio de Janeiro. It is understood that he will be brought under the principle of rotation, and that some one will be found in North Carolina to take his place

DAVID A. STARKWEATHER, of Ohio, one of the poorest appointments of Mr. PIERCE, has filled the Chilian mission four years. He has been recalled, and Ex-Governor BIGLER, of California, appointed in his place. This post would have suited Col. RICHARDSON, of Illinois, who is determined to accept nothing less than a first-class mission. He would have suited this better than any other, for the reason that his appointment would have been considered as an improvement upon that of DAVID STARKWEATHER; and, besides, it must be admitted that he was quite as well fitted for this place as for the Speakership of the House or the Governorship of Illinois, for which posts he was the regular Democratic candidate.

JOHN RANDOLPH CLAY has been Minister in Peru, for ten years, and probably will be allowed to stay there, though there is a strong pressure for his place. He was appointed from Pennsylvania.

These are all of the first-class missions, and they are only ten in number.

Many of the two hundred politicians who are pressing for a full mission, with a salary of from ten thousand dollars, to seventeen thousand five hundred, will be glad to come down to a second-rate mission,—that is, the place of Minister Resident, with a salary of seven thousand five hundred dollars.

There are eighteen Ministers Resident—to wit: at Lisbon, Belgium, the Hague, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Vienna, Berne, Turin, Rome, Naples, Constantinople, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Bogota, Caraccas, Quito, Buenos Ayres, and Bolivia, and a Commissioner to the Sandwich Islands, at the same salary.

These nineteen places are, with few exceptions, to be thrown open to the competition of Mr. BUCHANAN's friends. There are hundreds of applicants already in the field.

The Proposed Canal Across the Isthmus of Darien—Instructions Relative to the New Tariff, &c.

Special Dispatch of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 15.

Letters have been received at the Navy Department respecting Dr. CALDWELL's expedition to the Isthmus of Darien. From them it appears that the prospect for Canalization is very good.

Thirty odd removals are to be made from the Department in the Interior.

A fee simple patent is to be granted to Christian Indians for lands purchased from the Delawares.

Negotiations are still pending for the purchase of Blythe Island, Ga., for a Naval Depôt. N. Y. T.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 15.

The Secretary of the Treasury in anticipation of the operation of the late Tariff act has just issued to the officers of the customs additional general regulations under the revenue and collection laws. As the act of March disturbs but to a slight extent the classification of imports made by the act of 1846, the construction heretofore given by the Treasury Department to that act is applicable except where that law has been modified. The provisions of the 20th section of the act of August, 1842, furnish the rule of construction to be applied to articles not specially designated in the several schedules of the act of 1857.

All other articles not so susceptible of classification will be liable to a duty of fifteen per cent. Merchandize in public store on the 1st of July next, or in bond under the warehousing laws, whether deposited in any warehouse authorized by law, or passing in transitu under bond from one part of the United States to another, will, irrespective of the date of their original importation or bonding, be subject, on withdrawal for consumption, to the rates of duty prescribed by the act of 1857.

As to the admission of sheeps' wool, unmanufactured, of the value of twenty cents a pounds or less, at the port of exportation, the Secretary decides that the value in the foreign market does not include the expenses of packing, commissions or charges incurred in shipment.

The Cabinet to-day considered appointments of appraisers in the principal Custom-Houses, but the result has not transpired.

Desperate Riot at Louisville.

THE MURDERERS OF THE JOYCE FAMILY HANGED BY A MOB.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, May 14.

The four negroes accused of murdering the Joyce family some months since have been acquitted. One of them turned State's evidence, but his testimony was not legally corroborated. There was considerable excitement about the Court-House during the trial.

About dark a mob broke into the cannon-house and got a cannon, which they placed in front of the jail. Several shots were fired by the mob and from the jail. The jailor, fearing the escape of the prisoners, formally surrendered two of them, who were hung by the mob. The third cut his throat with a razor, but the negro who turned State's evidence was unmolested.

A LATER DISPATCH.

The remaining negro implicated in the Joyce murder was hung by the mob last night—making three hanged and one suicide.

Suffering for want of Food in Northern Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., Friday, May 15.

Reliable information has been received here of great destitution existing in Gramot County and other secluded localities in the northern part of this State. Several persons have already died from starvation, and cattle were also dying from want of food. A meeting of our citizens will be held this evening to devise means of relief.

Celebration of the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Settlement of Jamestown, Va.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

JAMESTOWN, Va., Wednesday, May 13, 1857.

I have been at Richmond for several days, awaiting the arrival of the day fixed for the celebration of the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown. This has been the event of the week, and as there are few occasions of equal interest to Virginians, the citizens seemed determined to make the most of it; accordingly the town has been in a bustle for a week with stirring events incident to the preparations for the celebration, and with the arrival of strangers, distinguished and otherwise, which has imparted a lively aspect to this usually quiet place.

On Monday night, the military, consisting of six companies, embarked for the scene of the celebration, with one day's rations; they were followed to the place of embarkation by a throng of citizens, and made an imposing display. The steamer Maryland, which had been sent down from Washington on a special charter for the purpose, took the men down to Jamestown; their object being to encamp on the ground, and have everything in readiness to appear respectably under a review. The weather looked unfavorable, and threatened rain, but fortunately yesterday proved a pleasant day, and to-day the weather is delightful. The steamers Jamestown, Norfolk, Maryland, and Curtis Peck have been employed in bringing passengers to the place. Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk, Petersburg, and other places have contributed hundreds of their citizens, who have poured in by steamboat and railroad to the common centre of attraction. It is estimated that there are about eight thousand persons on the ground, including sixteen military companies, the latter being encamped at Travers, two miles from Jamestown. The reason for selecting a spot so remote from the town is probably the one given by an old negro, of whom I inquired on that point. His answer was: "'Spose there aint room in Jamestown?"

This will appear perfectly rational after I have given you a very brief description of the place.

It is some two hundred years since Capt. JOHN SMITH was chased through a swamp, and was finally captured by the Indians, while up to his knees in mud, somewhere in this neighborhood; and, notwithstanding the long time that the inhabitants hereabout have had to build up the place, a stranger is impressed with the little progress that has been made. The spot where those first settlers laid the foundation of a city that was to rival in magnificence the cities of Europe, from which they had come, is now marked by a thirty-foot tower of bricks, which was once attached to a church of the same material, all which were brought from England. The remainder of the edifice in which the settlers worshipped has long since crumbled to decay. There are also the remains of a brick wall, three feet high, which surrounds the burying ground, where repose the ashes of tho long since departed, and a few scattering tombstones, on which are scarcely traceable the memorials of those who sleep beneath them. This is all of the long-celebrated Jamestown. Over the fields where once bustled the old emigrants now flourish vigorous growths of wheat and rye; there is no monument to the departed; not even a flag-staff, on which to hoist a pennant; and nothing in the shape of banners are seen, except those displayed from the mast heads of the steamers lying near. The land lies very level along the bank of the river as far as the eye can see.

There is an old dock ahreast of the place, on which we were landed by the boats of the steamers, and then were put ashore by a scow. On reaching the banks of the river we found ample arrangements for the transport of passengers to the encampment. These consisted of one carriage of two horses, several mule-teams, and one or two ox-carts. Into these vehicles scrambled men, women (excuse me—ladies—there are no women here) and children. The fare was 9d., and the ride was worth it, although it was a short one. The encampment was covered over with the tents of the military, and around the outskirts were numerous sheds and booths, where big pots hung over the fire, for boiling provisions for the people, and sundry articles were being sold, after the manner of a New England militia training.

Mr. HENRY MYERS, the person so well known as the volunteer from Richmond, to nurse the sick at Norfolk during the yellow fever period, had been several days upon the ground erecting buildings for the accommodation of the multitude; among these was a large shed, where the table was spread, and where the ball was afterwards held.

The appearance of Ex-President TYLER upon the stand was the signal for great enthusiasm, and cheer on cheer arose from the assembled thousands. His oration occupied something over two hours in the delivery.

Governor WISE, with other distinguished personages, occupied a place upon the stand, and at the close of the oration came forward and made a brief speech at the call of the multitude.

In the evening there was a grand ball, and a large display of fireworks, which closed the proceedings.

The military companies are to remain encamped upon the ground for two days longer, when the encampment will be broken up, and the place will be surrendered to its customary quiet, until another anniversary comes round, when there will no doubt be a repetition of the scenes of the last few days, with slight variations.

The first celebration of this event took place about 25 years ago, and this is the second. A difference of opinion exists as to the true day of the landing of Captain SMITH, and discussion on that point runs high, the importance of the exact day being considered akin to that of the true Christmas. Many insist that the 12th and not the 13th is the day, but this proceeding will settle that important point, and the 13th will be the day hereafter provided that there is extant in a quarter of a century hence, patriotic descendants of JOHN SMITH enough to make a respectable show. It is understood there is a Society in Washington for the express purpose of celebrating the annual observance of this event.

I saw no other representative of the New-York Press here except Mr. JAMES BROOKS, of the Express, who took passage in the Jamestown for New-York before the completion of the ceremonies.

I observed a large number of persons busy among the gravestones, transcribing the inscriptions upon them. One that I noticed, a part of which was quite illegible, bore the date—16—¾, the two figures of the hundred only being visible. One of them was a flat-slab laid horizontally upon supports, with an inscription upon the top; by the side of this a tree had sprung up, and its trunk had so enclosed the stone that the inscription was nearly hidden from view.

THE ANNIVERSARIES.

The A. B. C. F. M.

The annual meeting in behalf of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was held yesterday morning in Dr. CHEEVER's Church, Hon. THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN presiding. The annual statement was presented by Rev. Dr. WOOD, one of the Secretaries. The Board announce that unwonted hindrances and perils beset their work. The Mission at Canton is for the present driven from the ground, and by the destruction of hooks and other property has sustained a pecuniary loss of $14,000. The Board also state that if the war in China should become general, the other Missions in that country may be compelled to withdraw. A new spirit of intolerance in the Persian Government has occasioned anxiety, and thrown new obstacles in the way of the Nestorian Mission. Four male and four female missionaries of the Board have died during the year. The state of affairs in India and Turkey is more encouraging. In Turkey, full liberty of religious belief exists, and 3,700 copies of the Bible and New Testament have been sold to Turks. The Turkish authorities, in honorable observance of the Hatti Sherif, stay the carrying out of the death-deserving law of the Koran, and converts from Mahomedanism, known as such, are now living unmolested among their own people. The first Moslem convert is also the first licensed preacher of the Gospel from that faith. The first published book in the language of the Mahomadan Koords has issued from the press—being the Gospel of Matthew, as translated by an Armenian graduate of the Bebek Seminary. Numerous towns and villages of the Koreb-bash—a peculiar sect of Mahomedans in Asia Minor and on the Mesopotamian plain—not only invite, but plead for missionaries to reside among them. In Turkey, 13 missionaries are under appointment of the Board.

The receipts of the Board are $29,000 ahead of last year. Thirteen thousand dollars were asked for the building of the missionary packet Morning Star, and $28,000 were contributed. The handsome surplus remaining is set aside to keep the vessel in repair.

The speakers at yesterday's meeting were representatives from Asia, Africa and the Sandwich Islands. Rev. ALBERT BUSHNELL presented the results of the operations of the year in the Gaboon Mission in West Africa; Rev. E. J. BOARDMAN, President of Oahu College, spoke of the Sandwich Islands; Rev. Dr. RIGGS, old of Constantinople; Rev. BENJAMIN SCHNEIDER spoke for Aintab in Turkey; Rev. T. DWIGHT HUNT appeared for California; and Rev. H. D. GANSE, of this City, spoke for missions generally, and New-York in particular. Dr. RIGG's pressed the necessity for the establishment of mission-stations in Wallachia and Moldavia. Mr. SCHNEIDER gave an entertaining account of the progress of missions in Aintab and its vicinity. The church in Aintab, which has labored under great difficulties, has now a membership of 200; it began with 8. The Sunday school has 150 scholars; the day school 250. There are two theological classes, one of 5, and the other of 3. There are 15 or 20 colporteurs, 6 or 8 of whom are in active service. Mr. GANSE, the last speaker, enlarged upon the want of sympathy for the missionary cause among the churches. He commented with severity upon the coldness which pervades Christians in reference to this matter, and compared the lack of effective results in the foreign field of to-day with the eminent successes which attended the ministries of Paul and Barnabas. The efforts of the churches result comparatively in so little good, that the ill success of the missions is not a matter of wonder. He urged upon Christians the necessity of a greater interest in the spread of the Gospel among the heathen.

American Bible Society.

The American Bible Society held its anniversary Thursday morning at Dr. CHEEVER's church. Hon. THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN presided, and opened the proceedings with a few remarks upon the general results of the operations of the Society during the year. The appearance of affairs is exceedingly encouraging. The report of the Secretaries show the following results:

The receipts of the year from all sources have been $441,805 69; being $49 488 42 more than those of the previous year. The portion for books sold, $238,456 03.

Books printed, 741,018 volumes. Books issued, 172,522; being 104 297 more than the issues of the previous year, and an aggregate, since the formation of the Society, of 12,694,434

Sixty-eight new Auxiliaries have been added, most of them South and West.

Eighty nine Life Directors, and 1,810 Life Members, have been added.

NEW BOOKS.—A new royal octavo Bible, in pica type, has been published, and a new pocket Bible in diamond type. Also, a large New Testament in great primer type, for the aged. Also, at the Society's House, a New Testament in Ojibwa; and a Testament Hawaiian and English, in parallel columns.

AGENTS.—In the Home field, thirty-six have been employed, including the three in Utah, California and Oregon.

In the Foreign field, three have been employed a portion of the time—Rev. Messrs. WHEELER (in Nicaragua) and RICHTER (in Turkey) having died, greatly lamented.

Money granted for publishing the Scriptures in foreign countries, $25,344 09; which, with the expense of publishing the last two books named, make an aggregate for foreign purposes of more than $30,000.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That of all motives to moral action none can compare in wisdom and power with those furnished by the Bible itself.

Resolved, That the Bible, and a Bible-made public sentiment, are indispensable to true liberty both in Church and in State.

Resolved, That the Bible, important to all families, is peculiarly needful to those in our new and sparsely settled States and Territories.

Resolved, That the Society has occasion for devout thanksgiving to God, that while its friends have been engaged the past year in a special systematic supply of our own country with the Bible, they have in the same time furnished more than 830,000 toward publishing the same book in foreign countries.

The speakers were Rev. Dr RIGGS, of Constantinople; Rev. THOMAS SEWALL, of Baltimore; Rev. Dr. WILKES, of Montreal; Rev. DUDLEY A. TYNG, of Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. WINSLOW, of Ceylon, and Rev. W. F. WILLIAMS, of Mosul. The leading speech of the day was that of Mr. TYNG, who offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Bible is God's revelation to the individual mind, and therefore that its universal distribution is the sacred right and duty of man.

Mr. TYNG held that this resolution covers the whole ground of the Bible Society, and proceeded to argue the individuality of man. Man is born alone and dies alone, and fills up the measure of the period between these two extremes by himself alone. So God deals with us individually, and hence the speaker proceeded to argue that the efforts put forth by this Society to reach individuals with the Bible, were efforts in precisely the right direction.

Centennial Ceremonies of the Swedenborgian Church—Address of Professor Bush

The members of the "New Church," properly known as Swedenborgians, assembled last night, in Hope Chapel, Broadway, to hear a discourse from Professor BUSH, on the doctrines, present condition, and prospects of their Church. The building was nearly filled—a much larger number of auditors being in attendance than were present at the Chapel in Eleventh-street during the services of the previous day. After the singing of a hymn and the announcement of meetings for to-day and to-morrow, Professor BUSH commenced his oration. He alluded to the interest of the occasion, the One Hundredth Anniversary of the establishment of the New Church. There was always a disposition in men to celebrate anniversaries of great events. In all history, from the Greek festivals to our own Fourth of July, this characteristic was conspicuous. So it was also in religious matters, and more especially should it be so in their own case. For the establishment of a new Church after the passing away of an old one was like the rising of a new sun upon the earth. It was in devout celebration of such an event that they had met together, to commemorate the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Church of the New Jerusalem, the crown and consummation of all churches.

Christianity, the Professor went on to infer, was corrupt and effete, when SWEDENBORG first turned his attention from scientific to religious subjects, and became the expounder of a New Revelation. To his disciples now, it was a perpetual wonder that his doctrines were not everywhere adopted, and that there was not a general influx of proselytes, from all quarters so overpoweringly convincing were the proofs of his mission. But the establishment of Christianity, they should remember, commenced in the same humble manner. A little band of disciples gathered in an upper room in Jerusalem, and that slender meeting was the incipiency of the Christian religion, and one century ago the last Judgment in the Spiritual World was ushered in by the establishment of the New Church, which was destined to endure forever. When making that statement, he of course, would be liable to be met by the interrogation, "What necessity existed for the destruction of the Old and the establishment of a New Church?" All churches, he would answer, were prone to deterioration and decay. Facilis descensus might be inscribed on them all, when once they began to decline. When Swedenborg appeared, darkness and desolation overwhelmed the Church. It was the era of her profoundest slumber. But Swedenborg raised the cry, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh," and in 1757 he came. Prophecy had foretold that he should come in "the clouds of Heaven," and a coarse, literal, unrealistic interpretation, had imaged him as so coming, but the seer and scribe of the New Church, taught that the Lord's second coming was not synchronical with the end of the world, but that the object of such coming must be in accordance with the moral demands of humanity.—The coming of the Bridegroom in the clouds of Heaven was symbolical of the revelation of the Divine spirit to the darkened mind of man. Were the sun to rise at midnight instead of at the morning hour, and in the West instead of the East, it would not be more astounding than the announcement made by a Swedish savan, that the ages of the Church's existence were ended, and that the second coming of Christ had began.

The speaker proceeded to comment at considerable length on the vital importance to mankind of the revelations of SWEDENBORG, and the doctrines of the New Church. The old church of Protestantism, which the Reformation brought to light, he characterized as one of solifidianism, or salvation by faith alone, to which doctrine the New Church was utterly opposed. The New Church inculcated the religion of charity, while it otherwise developed new phases of the interior life of man. The Old Church read the Apostle's laudation of Christian virtues falsely. It said, "Now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity, and the greatest of these is Faith"—whereas, St. Paul wrote, "Now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity, and the greatest of these is Charity."

The Professor, during his long and eloquent address, enchained the attention of his auditors. The centennial services of the Swedenborgian Church will be continued to day; and sermons will be preached, having special reference to the occasion, at the Eleventh-street Church, morning and evening, to-morrow.

Home Missionary Society—The Executive Committee Indorsed.

A meeting was held Thursday morning, in the Bible House, of the Board of Directors of the American Home Missionary Society. The business on hand was the election of an Executive Committee for the ensuing year. Dr. PETERS, Vice President, was called to preside, and as introductory to the business offered prayer. About twenty members were present.

A resolution was offered to reelect the Executive Committee of the last year, which was unanimously adopted. The following are the names of the Committee: Mr. Abijah Fisher, William Patton, D. D., Charles Butler, Esq., Alfred C. Post, M. D., Edwin F. Hatfield, D. D., Mr. Simeon B Chittenden, Asa D. Smith, D. D., Richard R. Storrs, Jr., D. D., Rev. Joseph P. Thompson. After the election had been held, a motion to adjourn was made and carried. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. STONE, of New-Hampshire, and the members dispersed.

☞ The meeting of the children connected with the Universalist Sabbath Schools of the City, which was to have been held at Dr. CHAPIN's Church, yesterday afternoon, did not take place on account of the storm, but was posponed till Tuesday afternoon next.

The steamship City of Manchester arrived at Liverpool at 3 o'clock morning of Friday the 1st inst.

The United States Mail Steamer Arago arrived at Southampton on the 30th.

The steamer Queen of the South sailed from Southampton Wednesday, 29th ult., for New-York.

The actual news by this arrival is rather limited. From Britain the incidents are the meeting of Parliament, and the election, without opposition, of EVELYN DENISON as Speaker of the House of Commons The deaths of the Duchess of GLOUCESTER, (GEORGE III.'s daughter,) and of JOHN MACGREGOR, late M. P for Glasgow, are noticed.

The Russian Grand Duke CONSTANTINE continued to receive great honor at Paris.

Lady FRANKLIN has resolved to send out another and a final expedition in search of whatever trace may exist of the lost crews of the Erebus and Terror. A screw yacht, the Fox, now lying at Aberdeen, has been purchased, and the command is to be given to Capt. M'CLINTOCK, who has already distinguished himself even among the adventurous band of Arctic navigators.

We read in the Athenæum:

"A scientific exploring expedition, consisting of three or four persons, is about to proceed, under the sanction of the Government, through the western portion of British America. It is intended that the party should proceed from Lake Superior to Lake Winnipeg, and from thence through the country lying between the northern branch of the Saskatchawan and the boundary of the United States. The Government is desirous of making the expedition as scientifically useful as possible, and with this view, the assistance and counsel of the Royal Society have been solicited. The council has appointed a committee to act in the matter, and a report has been drawn up. The expedition is to be commanded by Mr. JOHN PALLISER."

The Paris Pays denies the announcement of the London Globe, that the Newfoundland Legislature refuses to ratify the Fisheries Convention which has been made by France and England. According to article 21, the Convention in question was to be ratified by the Newfoundland Assembly and by the English Parliament, and the Pays says that although some very special objections of a kind quite open to argument have been taken by the committee of the Legislative Council, no vote has yet been given.

The New British Parliament—Election of Speaker.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Thursday, May 30.

From the London Times.

The first session of the fifth Parliament summoned during the reign of Her present Majesty formally commenced this day. The opening of a new Parliament, at all times a great constitutional ceremony, is at the present juncture peculiarly momentous. The Government which so recently brought the country through an arduous war, and, in concert with its allies, restored peace to Europe, having been defeated in the House of Commons on a secondary question of foreign policy, deemed it expedient to counsel the Sovereign to dissolve Parliament, that the opinion of the constituencies might be elicited on the decision pronounced by their representatives. To the appeal thus made to them the constituencies have given an emphatic and unmistakable response, at once completely indorsing the acts of the censured Ministry, and largely recruiting the strength and spirit of their followers. Meanwhile the China question, which had precipitated the dissolution, has assumed a graver and more menacing aspect, demanding on the part of the Executive and the Legislature the exercise of increased energy and firmness. But, not only is the new Parliament ushered into existence apparently on the eve of a war with the Celestial Empire, but most important measures of internal improvement are generally believed to be impending. Besides the many schemes of administrative, legal and social reform to which our renovated Legislature have to address itself, the task of revising its own constitution, in connection with the amendment of the national representation also lies before it; and should the expectations of the country in this respect be fulfilled, the present Parliament is destined to receive the historical appellation of the "last Parliament convoked under the first Reform Bill."

But little pomp and circumstance, however, marked the inaugural sitting of the reconstituted Legislature; and by any but a coldminded and eminently practical people so remarkable an absence of glittering pageantry and splendid forms would be regarded as singularly out of keeping with the strong and anxious national interest which such an occasion could not fail to awaken. Irrespective of the recentness of the late happy event in the Royal household, it is not in accordance with general usage for the Sovereign to attend in person at the first sitting of a new Parliament. The election of a Speaker for the House of Commons, the swearing in of members in both chambers, and a few other preliminaries incidental to the reconstitution of the two assemblies—a process which usually occupies about a week—have to precede the delivery of the Queen's Speech; previous to which, of course, no business of any importance is transacted.

Before 2 o'clock a considerable concourse had collected round the entrance to Westminster-hall, to witness the arrival of the leading personages about to officiate in the ceremony. The interior of the House of Lords at first presented an array of all but empty benches, the dreary vacancy of the gorgeous but somewhat gloomy chamber being also relieved by the presence of some ten or a dozen distinguished ladies seated in a single group on the Opposition side, the three clerks at the table being the solitary occupants of the floor.

At 2 o'clock the Lords Commissioners, who were the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of ARGYLL, the Earl of Harrowby, Lord STANLEY of Alderley, and Earl SPENCER, entered the House in their official costumes, and took their places on the woolsack. Not more than half-a-dozen other Peers were then present, among whom were Lord PANMURE, Earl BEAUCHAMP and Lord REDESDALE; and throughout the entire sitting the whole number in attendance at one time did not exceed 12 or 15.

The Usher of the Black Rod having been directed to summon the Commons to their Lordships' House, in the lapse of a few moments Mr. DENIS LE MARCHANT, (chief clerk,) accompanied by Sir GEORGE GREY, Sir CHARLES WOOD, and a large number of members of the Lower Chamber, was in attendance at the bar.

The Lord Chancellor announced that the Royal commission, graciously authorizing him and his co-commissioners to open Parliament in Her Majesty's name, would then be read; which was done by the clerk at the table accordingly.

The Lord Chancellor then said,—My lords and gentlemen, I have it in command from Her Majesty to let you know that as soon as the members of both Houses shall have been sworn the cause of the calling of this Parliament together will be declared; and, it being necessary that a Speaker of the House of Commons should be first chosen, it is Her Majesty's pleasure that you, gentlemen of the House of Commons, should repair to the place where you are to sit, and there proceed to the appointment of some proper person to be your Speaker, and that you should appear here to-morrow at 2 o'clock, and then present the person whom you shall so choose for Her Majesty's Royal approbation.

The Commons then withdrew to their own chamber in obedience to this mandate.

After the process of swearing in was completed the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, April 30.

The House of Commons, having returned from the House of Lords, proceeded, in conformity with the message from the Crown, signified by the Royal Commissioners, to the election of a Speaker.

Lord H. VANE, after a graceful tribute to the late Speaker, and an enumeration of the moral and intellectual qualities, the accomplished mind, the dignified and commanding exterior, and the courteous demeanor required in so exalted a position, believing, he said, that the member for North Nottinghamshire united these eminent qualifications, moved that Mr. JOHN EVELYN DENISON be chosen to fill the Chair.

The motion was seconded by Mr. THORNELY.

After a short pause, there being no other candidate proposed,

Mr. EVELYN DENISON, who spoke from his usual place on the Ministerial benches, said, Sir, I return my grateful thanks to the noble lord and my honorable friend who have introduced my name to the House, in terms, indeed, far too flattering,—in terms suggested by the partiality of private friendship rather than by any qualities to which I can pretend to lay claim. I offer my respectful acknowledgments to the House for the manner in which they have been pleased to receive the mention of my name. It is calculated to afford me much encouragement and support; but when I think of the business of this House, increasing year by year—when I consider not only the importance of maintaining the rights and privileges of this House, but that the position of the House itself in the framework of the constitution should be carefully and accurately preserved, I might well shrink from the responsibility which must attach to any one who has a considerable share in its management and guidance. [Hear, hear.] I shall be at a disadvantage in being placed in immediate contrast to a right honorable gentleman who filled that chair for many years in a manner which gave universal satisfaction. [Cheers.] I shall have the assistance of that distinguished gentleman, as I have had the benefit of his example; and, under his immediate supervision, the rules and proceedings of Parliament have been digested and arranged by a gentleman who now sits at that table (Mr. ERSKINE MAY) in a manner which cannot fail to give great assistance to all who shall succeed to that chair. [Hear, hear.] If I rightly interpret the wishes of the House it would not become me to intrude myself longer upon them with my doubts and hesitations. I shall content myself, therefore, with expressing my high sense of the distinguished honor which it is proposed to confer upon me, and falling in with the suggestion of my honorable seconder, and curtailing my address within the narrowest limits, I submit myself, with all duty and respect, to the will of this House.

The honorable gentleman was then conducted to

A single glance at the map of the world will explain the selection of the two points through which Europe and America are to be brought into contact. Ireland on the one side of the ocean, and Newfoundland on the other, lie like extremities of the two continents, and diminish considerably the breadth of waters otherwise interposed between them. Across the bed of the ocean, too, in these very parts, is to be found a kind of natural bank or plateau thrown up by the rush of the Gulf Stream, and on this the telegraphic wires are to be deposited. No conditions, in short, could appear more favorable, more opportune, or more public available, and yet it actually happened that the power of bargaining for the use of them was lodged in the hands of a commercial company. The fact is, that a monopoly had been granted of telegraphic communication across the Island of Newfoundland. As long ago as 1852, exclusive privileges of this description were conferred upon an association established for the purposes above mentioned, and the monopoly, after various modifications and transfers, became vested at last in a company enjoying for a term of years the exclusive right of telegraphing from one side of Newfoundland to the other, and indeed of establishing any telegraph in the island at all. Accordingly, the Atlantic Telegraph Company, after conquering the ocean, might have found an invincible barrier at the very point where the difficulties of the enterprise would have been supposed to cease. The Newfoundland Company were in possession of the last few miles of the distance, and were therefore as completely masters of the whole course as a railway company would be which commanded the terminus and the harbor-dues nearest miles of a rival line. The fact would have been of less importance if other parts of the American coast had been accessible at no further cost than that of some additional miles of wire; but it seems to be doubted, in the present state of information on the subject, whether any Transatlantic communication can be established except through some point or other of that territory which the Newfoundland monopoly embraces.

Ultimately, therefore, these privileges, though at first perhaps appearing insignificant, have exerted an influence over the whole arrangements of this most important international enterprise. The Newfoundland Company makes terms with the Atlantic Company, the Atlantic Company makes terms with the British Government, and, if it should really be found that no other point of American territory can be reached by oceanic wires, the communication between two mighty continents of the world will have depended upon the modification or purchase of a small commercial monopoly. At present we believe the conditions arranged provide for the accommodation of the public at reasonable rates. The Atlantic Company acquire the benefit of the exclusive privileges existing in Newfoundland, and make arrangements for the transmission of messages over the whole course of the combined Telegraphs. The British Government is to have the power of fixing the rates to be charged for communications, and to enjoy a preferential right of using the Telegraph, a similar privilege being allowable to the United States Government on the other side. In return for these powers of control, Government first aids the undertaking with ships in the work of laying down the cable, and then provides a pecuniary guarantee. The Company is to receive the sum of £14,000 per annum, constituting a return of four per cent. upon its capital, until the net profits shall amount to 6 per cent, after which £10,000 per annum is to be paid for 25 years. This payment, however, is to cover, as far as it goes, the charges incurred by Government communications; the excess, if any, of such charges over the amount of the guarantee being receivable also.

Under the existing circumstances of the monopoly, perhaps these arrangements were as good as could be made, but the story offers striking evidence of the extent to which the grandest enterprises may be affected by even small infractions of sound commercial principles. Monopolies are just as great mistakes now as in any former age of the world. It may be undoubtedly desirable, and in some instances even imperatively necessary, to encourage undertakings of high public utility, but dubious commercial promise, by the support of a guarantee, but these considerations contain no warrant for the addition of a monopoly to boot. In the present instance, the exclusive right of telegraphing across Newfoundland—a privilege to be regretted, perhaps, with extreme unconcern apart from the ocean extension of the wires—actually governs the Transatlantic communication between the two Continents, and the effects of a monopoly have to be overcome by a State guarantee and Government control. The Government may fix the rate of charge for the public, and therefore for itself, but it must make up the sum of its payments to £14,000 at the end of each year. It may protect the public from extortion, but only at the cost of that kind of interference which must be troublesome to it-self, and which we are not apt to regard as conducive to good management. Finally, if, contrary to present expectation, any telegraphic communication should be found practicable between our own coasts and points of the opposite shore not covered by the monopoly, Government may remain committed to an unnecessary and unproductive guarantee. As things stand, however, there is not much to complain of. Compared with the magnitude of the enterprise and the value of the results, the amounts of the capital and of the guarantee involved are but small: and if, as we trust will be the case, the experiment of next July should prove successful, and the American Continent be brought within a few minutes of our shores upon reasonable terms of communication, there will be no reason to regret the concession of the guarantee. It is in principle rather than effect that the Newfoundland monopoly is so noticeable. It may seem an inconsiderable circumstance, or even wear the aspect of an excellent bargain, if any company or association can be induced to accomplish at their own cost a most desirable work on the sole condition that nobody else shall be permitted to do it over again; but experience has taught us, and the present example shows, that such a surrender of general rights may eventually carry with it unexpected disabilities and serious embarrassment. Enterprise, when beyond the scope of private venture, may be fairly entitled to public aid, but not to aid of such a kind as may strangle for the future all similar enterprise in the same field.

Loss of the New-York Ship Andrew Foster.

From the Liverpool Times, May 2.

We regret to report the foundering by collision of the fine American ship Andrew Foster, Capt. WILLIAMS, (late mate of the United States mail steamship Arctic,) from New-York for this port.

The Andrew Foster sailed from New-York on the 1st of April, and had on board one lady passenger, Miss QUIN, and, with the Captain and crew, the complement numbered 38 persons. The voyage was prosecuted without any particular incident until the vessel arrived in Channel, and when between Tuskar and Smalshead, at midnight on Tuesday last, the 28th ultimo, she was struck on the luff of the bow (being on the starboard tack) by the ship Tusscarora, from Liverpool for Philadelphia, Capt. WILLIAMS, fearing that the injury to his vessel might prove serious, hailed the Tuscarora, and asked her to lay by him for some time; but, instead of doing so, she proceeded on her voyage without taking any notice, and it is presumed she escaped without injury. Immediately after the collision the pumps of the Andrew Foster were manned, and it was found that the water was rushing in in such quantities that there was no hope of saving the vessel, and accordingly the boats were lowered, and those on board abandoned the ship. Shortly after leaving the vessel she sunk in deep water. The boats, after being about three-quarters of an hour on the water, were picked up by the schooner Little Fred, of Plymouth, from Rio Grande for Liverpool, off which vessel they were taken yesterday morning, when about ten miles west of Holyhead, by the steam-tug Sea King, and landed here.

The Andrew Foster has been a regular trader between this port and New-York, and at the time of her foundering she had on board a large cargo of wheat, cotton, bacon, &c. It is stated that the ship and cargo are insured at New York.

The Andrew Foster was an American built vessel, of 1,400 tons register, and 2,600 tons burthen, and belonged to Tapscott's line of American packets from this port. She was advertised to leave Liverpool for New-York on the 16th inst., and has always been a favorable ship in the trade.

We are indebted for the above particulars to Mr. JOHN MOONEY, one of the officers of the Andrew Foster (who landed last evening from the Sea King,) and who states that at the time of the collision the weather was mild, and the atmosphere comparatively clear, which in a great degree accounts for the safety of those on board, as, had the winds been high, the boats could scarcely have stood through a gale. Mr. MOONEY also speaks in high terms of the treatment they received on board the Little Fred, and of the kindness and attention of the captain and officers of that vessel.

The Northern Belle.

LETTER FROM MR. DALLAS TO LORD CLARENDON.

The following dispatch has been received by Lord CLARENDON from Mr. DALLAS, with reference to the loss of the Northern Belle:

The United States Minister at the Court of St. James' has the honor to transmit to the Earl of CLARENDON, &c., 21 silver medals, and a bill of exchange for £210 sterling, and to request that his Lordship will be pleased to cause these testimonials to be delivered to the brave individuals for whom they are intended by the President of the United States, in acknowledgment of the services rendered in saving the lives of the crew of the American ship Northern Belle.

The incidents connected with the fate of this vessel occurred too recently, and too close to the British coast, to bring too universal and deep a sensation, to render their detailed repetition at all necessary on this occasion. It will, however, be recollected by his Lordship, that, after performing her voyage across the Atlantic from New-York, and, while approaching the port of her destination, London, the Northern Belle, of 1,100 tons burden, on the 5th of January last, encountered a gale of unusual violence, and was obliged to anchor off Kingsgate at less than a mile's distance from the shore. She rode heavily, and the sea occasionally broke completely over her. Her main and mizzen masts were cut away. The fury of the storm increased, and raged during the whole of the day, rendering vain every effort at assistance, and onpluffing a steamer larger that attempted it. The ship parted from her anchors at midnight and, a prey to the tempest, drove, amid darkness, hail, sleet and snow, upon the rocks beneath the cliff. Her crew, twenty-four in number, lashed themselves to the rigging of the only remaining mast, struggled through the horrors of the night, and were discovered from the beach at early dawn. Gallant and humane exertions were at once made to rescue them from their desperate condition. One life-boat, manned by ten brave men, pulled through a boiling surf at imminent peril, reached the wreck, and returned to shore with seven of the sufferers. A second life-boat, emulating the daring adventure, brought fourteen others safely to land, and finally, though long thwarted by their determination to perish rather than to leave the Northern Belle, the same means redeemed the Captain and the pilot from impending death.

These are the standing features, as reported to his Government by the Consul of the United States in London, of the series of successful acts of courage and humanity which it is the desire of the President to mark by tokens of American gratitude and thanks. The undersigned has therefore been specially instructed to lay before the Earl of CLARENDON the list, accompanying this letter, of those truly heroic spirits who manned the life-boats, and to beg that his Lordship will cause each individual therein mentioned to be presented with the silver medal inscribed to him, and also, from the amount of the bill of exchange, with the sum stated opposite his name, (augmented according to the number of risks incurred,) in evidence of the high appreciation and acknowledgment of their conduct by the Government and people of the United States. The undersigned avails, &c.,

(Signed) G. M. DALLAS.

Arrival of the Russian Grand Duke Constantine in Paris.

Paris (April 30) Correspondence of the London Times.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE arrived here this afternoon at 5 o'clock, and passed along the Boulevards at 5½. He was received at the railroad station with the ceremonial described in my letter of Tuesday, and from which, I believe, there has been no deviation. Several of the houses along the Boulevards were decorated with flags, in which the Russian colors were mingled. From 3 or 4 o'clock the great thoroughfares leading to the Lyons Railway station were crowded with the curious, who were anxious to catch a sight of a real Russian Prince, particularly of one to whom popular report attributed the sterner features of his family. The Grand Duke sat in an open carriage drawn by four horses, with Prince NAPOLEON on his left. Both were in uniform, the Grand Duke as an Admiral, with a blue riband and star. Prince NAPOLEON wore the dress of a General of Division, and displayed the grand riband and star of the Legion of Honor. The carriage in which they were seated passed along at a walking pace, so that a good view was had of the Duke by the people, who thronged the footways and the balconies of the houses. The day was rather cold, but otherwise fine, and the two Princes were enveloped in cloaks, which were thrown back at the shoulders. There was no cheering on the Boulevards, but the spectators in the streets saluted by taking off their hats as the carriage passed, and the Grand Duke acknowledged the salute by touching his cocked hat with his open hand. Indeed, he ceased hardly for a moment returning the salute. The carriage in which the Princes rode was preceded by a detachment of guides, and officers belonging to the Imperial household rode on both sides. Another carriage followed, with the functionaries who received him at the railroad station; in a third were deposited the ponderous person of Marshal MAGNAN and the more slim forms of his aides-de-camp; and a fourth conveyed the Russian officers of the suite of the Grand Duke. The rear was brought up by a squadron of guides. It was perhaps owing to the coldness of the day that neither the Grand Duke nor the Prince wore an expression of much animation. The Russian Prince is rather a mild-looking young man. He is of fair complexion, with small light whiskers, and a thin, fair moustache. The Prince proceeded to the Tuileries by the Rue Royale at the same slow pace. Prince NAPOLEON received the Duke at the railway station, but did not, as I stated he would not, go to Toulon to meet him.

The Queen of Spain's Speech to the Cortes—Relations with Mexico, etc.

The Debats publishes an analysis of the Royal speech, which will be read by General NARVAEZ, in the Queen's name, on the 1st of May, at the opening of the Spanish Cortes. The speech is drawn up by M. PIDAL.

It will announce the re-establishment of a good understanding between Spain and Rome, and renewal of friendly relations with the Court of Russia. The hope is expressed that the difference with Mexico will be amicably settled, but not unless the honor of Spain is satisfied and the interests of Spaniards in Mexico guaranteed in future, and an indemnity paid to those who have suffered. Should the conditions put not be granted, Spain, despite her sincere wish for peace, will not hesitate to have recourse to coercive measures.

The Queen calls the attention of the Cortes to the internal condition of the country. Peace and order prevail everywhere. A veil of oblivion is to be thrown over the past.

The difficulties caused by the high price of provisions have been happily overcome by a series of well-combined measures. The loan is especially mentioned as having enabled the Government to act without complying with the enormous exactions of Spanish capitalists. The conditions of the loan have been faithfully fulfilled.

The Queen will recommend a series of political and financial reforms; a bill for the reform of the organization of the Senate will be brought forward very early in the session, as also a bill for reforming the regulations of the two Chambers. The Senate, as now constituted, consists exclusively of members appointed by the Queen for life. It is proposed to introduce a new element into this great body, which will give it greater authority and add to its lustre. The Senate would lose nothing if it comprised a certain number of hereditary Senators, selected from the Grandees of Spain and possessors of large territorial fortunes. The fortune would be the dotation of the title, and would descend from generation to generation, with the title, to the eldest sone of the Senatorial families. The existing regulations of the Senate and of the Chamber of Deputies have engendered many abuses, which continually impede the public service and the progress of the Government, and will ultimately throw discredit upon the Parliamentary system.

Finally, the speech from the throne will give some explanations on the bills that will be presented by the Government for the regulation of the finances, with a view to establish the financial system upon the principles of economical science and the wisdom of experience.

The Queen will inform the Cortes that the plans of the Minister of Finance will be submitted to them at the same time as the budget for 1858.

Treaty Between Prussia and Switzerland.

In a letter from Berne we find the following:

"The adhesion of the Prussian Government has not been received. It alone is wanting to enable the Paris Conference to complete the work of conciliation."

I can guarantee to you the correctness of the information I now send you respecting the proposed arrangement with Prussia, as I have it from a person who has read the project.

The document is drawn up in the form of a treaty between Prussia and Switzerland, under the express guarantee of Austria, England, France and Russia, and the object of it is to prevent a disturbance of the peace of Europe.

The 1st Article of the project is very categorical, and is couched in these terms:

His Majesty the King of Prussia renounces for himself and for his successors for ever all calm to the sovereignty which Article 23 of the Treaty of Vienna of 1815 assured to him over the Principality of Neufchatel.

This stipulation is formal, and does not stipulate any reserve or restriction.

The 2d Article qualifies the position of Neufchatel towards Switzerland and towards foreign States. Neufchatel is recognized as a sovereign and independent State; it will continue to enjoy the same rights and guarantees as any other sovereign State of the Swiss Confederation, as was stipulated in the declaration made at Vienna on the 20th of March, 1815.

This article, therefore, confirms the full independence of the Canton of Neufchatel, and its right of constitution.

The 3d article is thus conceived: "The Confederation will pay to the King of Prussia, the sum of 1,000,000 francs."

"Nothing is said about why this sum is paid, and it is worthy of observation that the word indemnity is not mentioned, probably purposely, in the treaty.

The other articles may be summed up as follows: The Confederation will proclaim a general amnesty for all political and military offences, and offences of the press relating to the events of September 3, 1858. This amnesty will comprise all militiamen, as well natives of the cantons as foreigners, who left the country to elude joining the last Federal call to arms. No prosecution can be commenced in the civil or criminal courts against persons for being implicated in the events of September. The Confederation itself will provide for the expenses caused by the recent events, and the State of Neufchatel will only have to pay its proportionate share of the money contingent. No special tax is to be imposed upon any class of individuals for this purpose. The church property which in 1848, was incorporated with the fortune of the State cannot be applied for any other object, and the revenues are to be applied to those particular objects. The funds of charitable institutions arising from private donations, such as those of Baron DE PURY and the Pourtalès Hospital, cannot be employed for other purposes, and shall continue to be employed henceforth according to the intentions of the donors.

Such is the faithful tenor of the project.

THE CHINA WAR.

Seizure of the Steamer Queen by the Chinese—Cooly Revolts—Great Loss of Life—Insurrection of Chinese at Sarawak—Account by Rajah Brooke.

Our advices from Hong-Kong are to March 15.

No occurrence of importance has taken place on the river. The Chinese fired rockets into the Teetotum Fort at long range without effect, and it could not be ascertained what damage their boats suffered from the shot returned by the fort.

Hong Kong remained quiet. The rumors of proximate dangers still continued prevalent.

On the 16th of April the Company's steamer Auckland, at Toong Chung, fell in with four heavily armed Mandarin boats. The Auckland could not go into the bay where they were, but the Eaglet and the boats from the Auckland, went in and destroyed the junks. A battery on the shore, mounting 16 guns, was captured and the guns spiked. The casualties on the British side consisted of one killed and four wounded of the Auckland's men.

M. BOURBILLON, the French Minister, had arrived, and had proceeded in his Imperial Majesty's ship Capricieuse.

The United States steamer San Jacinto left for the Pratas Shoal on the 10th March, to look after an American wheler, the Alice Mondell, that was wrecked on the 7th inst.

On the night of the 6th March the brickery lately belonging to ESHING or ALLUM was burnt by incendiarism. The present owner had a large contract for bread for the army and navy on hand. About 700 barrels of flour were destroyed.

Pekin Gazettes come down to the 11th Feb. They contain reports of some successes of the Imperial troops over the insurgents. There is still no mention made of the state of matters at Canton.

From Shanghae we learn that a band of rebels had burnt Hobow, in a great tea district in the province Kiangse, and 15 chops of Congou were destroyed.

Along the coast all was quiet.

From Canton a good many of the native merchants had lately come down to Hong Kong to settle accounts, and in adjustment had taken over goods to some extent that were stored in their pack-houses.

The Seizure of the Steamer Queen by the Chinese.

From the China Mail of Feb. 26.

Another river steamer, the Queen, has fallen a prey to her Chinese passengers and crew, through the culpable negligence of the owners and captain—the former in not having her properly manned and officered, the latter in not adopting the necessary precautions against such an occurrence. The Queen left this harbor for Macao on Monday at noon, and had arrived by 3 o'clock off the southwest end of Tai yu shan, (Lantao,) when Capt. WYNN, with his engineer, and Mr. WEIR, also an engineer, sat down to dinner, Mr. OSMAND CLEVERLY, a passenger, being likewise in the cabin. The upper deck was deserted except by the steersman, and the arm chest kept there was consequently at the disposal of the Chinese, who did not fail to avail themselves of its contents. What became of the steersman is not known, but the steamer's gangway sun was turned aft, and, with the muskets, was discharged into the cabin. Mr. CLEVERLEY had his thigh bone fractured by a grapeshot; but, though severely wounded, he was not entirely disabled, so that with his revolver he managed to shoot two of his assailants; then, having bound up his leg, he threw a chair overboard, and took to the water, supporting himself upon the chair until picked up by a lorcha close by, in which he was taken to Macao. The Queen had on board about 120 chests of opium, besides other cargo. The steamer has been taken to Chun Chune, and is there at anchor, surrounded by a fleet of fifty-seven mandarin junks; her female passengers are reported to be alive and well. Several respectable Chinese were also passengers in her.

Chinese Revolts and Great Loss of Life.

From the Singapore Straits Times, March 21.

A boat arrived at Singapore yesterday morning, having on board nine of the crew of the Peruvian ship Carmen, which vessel left Swatow with two hundred Chinese Coolies for Callao. During the passage down the China Sea, some time at night, the coolies rose en masse, but were driven below, and the hatches closed. The Chinese secured down below set fire to the ship, which was soon in a mass of flames. The crew took to the boats. At this time some of the coolies had managed to force the hatchways, and were observed passing up the rigging, but the mass shortly afterwards fell over into the sea. The boat in which was the Captain had returned to the vessel to get a sail, but just as it reached the vessel, the latter went down, and the boat must have been taken down with the sinking ship, as nothing was seen of the Captain or the people in the boat, although the mate remained close by for nearly four hours. The greater part of the coolies must have been suffocated by the smoke—the whole perished, except an interpreter.

From the Friend of China, March 15.

On Wednesday, the 11th March, the Guinare, a British ship, 1,100 tons register, Capt. WARNER, left Swatow with cooly passengers from Havana. At 7½ A. M., on the following morning, the coolies in a body attacked the third mate and sentry in the fore part of the ship. The captain, officers and crew immediately rushed out and rescued the third mate and sentry, who were seriously wounded. The coolies fought with fearful desperation, and in some instances were fairly cut to pieces before they were driven below. Finding they could not regain the deck, the coolies broke up the berths, and set the ship on fire main, mizzen, and poop and hatchways, but when the leaders in the incendiarism were shot down, they immediately extinguished the fires. The third mate and sentry were the only two of the crew who were seriously wounded. Twenty-seven coolies were killed and wounded—ten killed, three drowned, and fourteen wounded. Some have since jumped overboard. The Guinare arrived here yesterday.

THE COOLY EMIGRATION.

From the Singapore Free Press.

If Cooly emigration is to be allowed at all, it must be put upon an entirely different footing from what it is at present. It is very evident from all we have heard that in most of these shipments from Chinese ports of the Havannah and countries in South America, many of the coolies are procured by a system of kidnapping, and are sent away against their will. Hence the frequent risings amongst them. Until the whole system is altered no merchant who has the least regard for his own reputation ought to participate in it, directly or indirectly. Any person sending himself to the continuance of such an infamous business ought to be held up to the contempt and detestation of the public.

The Chinese Insurrection at Sarawak, Borneo.

GRAPHIC LETTER FROM SIR JAMES BROOKE.

The London Times has been favored with the following letter from Sir JAMES BROOKE, addressed to a warm personal friend, and describing the events of the late insurrection, and the steps taken to suppress it:

BALIDAH, Sunday, March 15.

I may now relate more circumstantially the events of the last few weeks. Sarawak was as peaceful as it had ever been, and there was no cause to excite dissatisfaction among the Chinese or raise suspicion in our minds of any hostile designs; yet a conspiracy had been formed which had its ramifications in Singapore and in China. A follower of TIEN-TE, the rebel chief, had arrived in Sarawak, and some criminals, who had been banished the country, secretly returned from Singapore. I had been unwell for some days, and on the night of the 18th retired early to bed. My servant was sleeping in a room near mine, and Mr. STEEL and NICHOLETTS occupied a small bungalow just by. Between 12 and 1 o'clock I was awakened by yells and shots, and, seizing my sword and revolver, I opened a window and saw that the house was surrounded. The noise told me it was by Chinese. I opened door by door in the hope of finding means for escape, but in vain. I told PERTY [his native servant] that our deaths were at hand, and, as the last hope, went down to the bathing-room, which was under repair. The door was not fastened. I opened it gently, and, seeing the way clear, ran across the lawn to the creek on the right hand of the house, and took the water close under the bows of the boat which had brought the murderers to their bloody work. I carried my sword and pistol across with me. Glad was I to touch ground on the far side, though not above 30 yards. I struggled through the deep mud, and lay down exhausted and panting in the road. Recovering breath, I got to the nearest house, and, launching a canoe, pulled up to the Datoo Bandars kampoog. All was in confusion. I was too exhausted to do much, and Hercules himself could not have restored courage or order to such a panic-stricken crowd. Here CROCKSHANK joined me bleeding from a severe sword-cut in the arm. He believed his wife to be dead, and we both apprehended that the massacre would be general. Finding all hope of restoring affaire at the Bendars gone, I pulled to the kampongs above, and persuaded the people to secure their women and valuables in prahus, and to cross to the opposite or left bank of the river, so as to prevent the assailants from attacking them by land. My house, ARTHUR'S and MIDDLETON'S were long before this in flames. We got the women and children across the river, and ARTHUR, CROCKSHANK, and myself retired to the same side, to the house of NAKODAH BRYAK. Here CRYMBLE joined us with the intelligence that after an hour's defence our fort or palisade had been taken, and with all our guns, small arms, ammunition, &c. It had been defended by CRYMBLE, with four men and two prisoners; three of the defenders were killed, one or two wounded, and CRYMBLE himself had been grazed by a spear in his side. MIDDLETON, STEELE, RUPPELL and PERTY dropped in one after another. The bright fires went out, and the dull morning broke at length, but only disclosing to us the hopeless state of affairs. We remained quietly at Inkeda Bryaks, doing what we could to animate the natives, and to prepare for such a defence as our means allowed, should we be attacked.

I may here relate the fate and misfortunes of our fellow-sufferers. Poor HARRY NICHOLETTS was murdered on the grass, trying to reach my house. CROCKSHANK and his wife escaped by their bath-room door. She ran first, and he protected her retreat with a spear in his hand, but, in passing the stable, one of these villains rushed from the opposite side and cut her down. Her husband jobbed his spear into the miscreant's back, but with a twist of his body he wrenched it out, and, seizing the shaft, he struggled to get the spear. Suddenly, however, letting go with his right hand, in which he held a short sword, he cut CROCKSHANK across the fleshy part of the arm. Both staggered, both let go the spear, and CROCKSHANK, weak with loss of blood, and believing his wife dead, staggered away and reached me. She, young and beautiful, lay for twelve hours weltering in her blood, conscious and calm in this extremity. One fiend hacked at her head till he cut off the long tresses which protected it; another tore her rings from her fingers; a third—for the sake of our common nature let it be told—gave her water to drink. By this time, the remainder of the Europeans had been assured of protection; but when the Bishop asked the leaders permission to carry her to his house, he was told that she should be left to perish. At length the boon was granted, and she was relieved and tended, and is now, God be praised, recovering. MIDDLETON'S house was attacked at the same time and in the same manner as the others. He escaped with difficulty. His poor little wife hid in a bakery till the burning rafters fell about her, and, from her concealment, saw the assailants kicking about the head of her eldest child. The mother was paralyzed; she wished, she said, to rush out, but could not move. The youngest child was murdered and thrown into the flames, where poor WELLINGTON'S remains were likewise consumed, his head borne off in triumph alone attesting his previous murder. The day broke, as I said, and shortly after I heard that the Chinese had assured the survivors of safety; that they had communicated with the Bishop, and sent for HELNE and RUPPELL. I then, hopeless of doing good, started for the Siole, a small stream which has its outlet far below the town; it was a wild walk; we swam the stream, washed out every track of our footsteps in the mud, and took refuge in a mangrove swamp as dark came on. By 8 o'clock two small boats came to carry us away, and in an hour afterwards I was in ABONG BUYONG'S prahu, manned by 40 men, with six smaller boats in company. Our party consisted of ARTHUR CROCKSHANK, CRYMBLE, MIDDLETON and PANTY, and after the trials and fatigues of the 24 hours, we slept as though misfortune had not overtaken us.

On the morning following I landed at Sabong, and I wish I could explain to you the tender care, the generous sympathy showered upon us. Here we received information that the Chinese, after forcing the Europeans and Datoos into oaths of fealty, had agreed to retire up the river. It was clearly their intention, having, as they thought, disposed of myself and ARTHUR, to take the country into their own hands, to be friendly with the Malays and Dyaks, to patronize the Europeans and to encourage them to trade in order to the supply of their own wants. There were two parties requisite to the success of this notable project. My intention was to proceed to Sakerran, to collect as large a force as I could, and with it to retake the town, or to command a base of operations in its vicinity. I awaited, however, the intelligence, and on Sunday, having heard of the retirement of the Chinese, I was again entering the town, when down they came a second time, before we were in any manner prepared to receive them properly. The consequence was, they gained the town before I could even land, and I again retired with all the Europeans, with the firm intention of proceeding to Sakarran. This was the only evening I felt the depression of spirits attendant on ill fortune, but I did not show it. There we were, outcasts—women and children and helpless fugitives to be provided for—the town in flames, and my people without firearms and ammunition, panic stricken, and fleeing with their families. A force from Sakarran was our only hope, and with a base for operations we might rally the people, rearm and act against the enemy. The next morning I was on my way to Linga, when the steamer hove in sight. I boarded her. SKINNER was most zealous and active. Here was the very base for our operations we wanted. We drove the miscreants out of the town, found the Datoo in a cluster of prahus, and heard that he had recaptured nine sampans, and one of our prahus containing stores of powder, some guns, &c., of which we were in great want. This was the first blow struck at the Chinese. I felt assured that each day would improve our resources and diminish those of our enemies. Their body of men was nearly annihilated, for taking the jungle behind the town or making off by the road, as they had no boats to carry them away, they were cut off by the Dyaks or starved. My next measure was to let the land Dyaks loose upon them, and within a circuit of 30 miles from Sinlawen, Bau and Bula, they were driven into their defences with great loss of life, and all communication between Bau and Sinlawan prevented, excepting by means of large parties of armed men. Night and day they were harassed by alarms; every straggler was cut down. In short, it was a guerilla warfare of the most harassing character, and quite shut the enemy up in their two places of strength, Bau and Sinlawan. Tue want of food was sure to do the rest, and it was a mere question of time how long they could hold out. Simovar and Bank were each covered, the former by the fort of Baliosh, the latter by its landing place, but early in the mouth the Chinese again came forth in five prahus and began ravaging the banks of the river. I was collecting my people and reassuring them after their panic. The Datoo Bandar, on the 5th, was in a single Malay prahu on the look-out at Linde Tarak, when this Chinese party came there. They declined an engagement on the water, but landed and threw up a stockade, which they defended with four guns and manned with about 250 men, armed with muskets and rifles. The Datoo came down himself in a small boat, and by 1 o'clock on the 10th we got off two more large prahus, some 30 Dyak hangkongs as a reserve; other prahus were preparing, and some followed the same evening, but too late. These three prahus ranged themselves in line and dashed at the Chinese stockade, landed sword in hand, and carried it without a check. The Dyaks cut the Chinese to pieces in the jungle, and the half hour before sunset cost our enemies from 100 to 120 men. Again the remnant was distressed in the jungle. Our party returned; last week it ascended the river, no man, woman, or child of our enemies would have escaped death or capture. This defeated party consisted of their picked men, and their two great leaders were killed in the stockade. A panic now seized them. On the night of the 11th I heard that Balidah and Simovar had been abandoned, and, hurrying up the following morning, the intelligence greeted me that Bank was likewise deserted, and had been burned, and that the Chinese were in full retreat towards Samhas. This took us by surprise, but our force got upon their trail on the 13th, and after three days desultory fighting, drove them across the frontier with great slaughter, the enemy, however, making a desperate resistance in defence of the women and children, and the efforts of our people not being able to break them. Had twenty-four hours' delay intervened to allow a concerted attack we should have had them all; but as it is we may be thankful, for a mere remnant of the body of Chinese men has escaped, and the capture of the women and children was not to be desired. Even now, however, this wretched mass, driven to the further side of the Sambas River, must suffer great loss, and may altogether perish in the wild jungle for want of food and from exposure. Thus the punishment has been almost as sudden and far more sharp than the treachery and first success of this miscreant body. A thousand and more have been killed in different places, their flourishing settlements destroyed, and not a roof-tree to cover their dastard heads in the country. The numbers starved in their flight by being lost in the jungle it is difficult to reckon, but it must be considerable, and out of a population of 4,000 or 5,000 certainly not more than 2,000 have escaped, and half this number is composed of women and children. The punishment has been severe. The Chinese will play no further treachery here, and in future we shall prevent their being associated in companies, disavow them, and reduce them to a daily obedience to the laws and a strict surveillance. Sarawak has now passed through the ordeal that Hong Kong is passing through and Singapore has yet to meet. The country is secure; the authority of Government has been vindicated; the principles on which it is based proved to be right by the fidelity and ardor of its native population. Our guns have been removed with a proportion of our muskets, and the principal loss falls on myself, on CROCKSHANK and MIDDLETON. For myself, I may say that I never knew the small value of worldly goods till I lost them. I do not pretend to any sentimental cant over my noble library, my costly plate, or all the decorations and tokens of honor which were once observed upon me and have been lost even more suddenly than they were acquired. Man's happiness consists not in such things, and he destroys the chance of finding it if he persuades himself that it does.

Now, a word more as to the causes of these events. Wherever there is a Chinaman, there is the conceit of supremacy and the desire of dominion. When associated in bodies, as in Sambas formerly, and thence in Sarawak before my arrival, this lust of rule grows stronger. The strongest proceedings of the Dutch have recently thrown many desperate characters into Sarawak, and the miserably feeble Government of Singapore, with its toleration of secret societies, has strengthened the Chinese Kungsi here and given it advisers aware of the state of British affairs and policy. Without doubt advisers the idea of encouraging trade while murdering the officers of Government would never have entered the head of any of the rude Chinese here, and without the means of livelihood from without and the support of the European community, so mad a project could hardly have been undertaken. To upset the Government by the murder of its principal officers and heads, and to establish other Englishmen to carry on the trade, was the suggestion of Chinese of Singapore, well acquainted with the isolated position of Sarawak, and possessed with the idea that the murder of Sarawak officers and the Sarawak Rajah would be a matter of supreme indifference to the British nation, provided that trade was continued and cottons sold. It was a high compliment to my Government that, murdering me with the intention of obtaining power, these stupidly clever Chinese desired as little change as possible. They forgot the native element, and hence their destruction has come. It was a grand superstructure, cleverly devised by men acquainted with English policy and mode of proceeding, but miserably based as regards the feelings and the ferocity of the native population. I think I have told you that one of TIEN TE'S fellowers—i. e. a follower of the rebel and HUE leader in China—has since been ascertained to have arrived in the country. It is probable that he was the great Singapore mover and agent, and to all these causes to encourage the attempt to acquire power and plunder by means of treachery and murder may be added the poverty of the Chinese, owing to the scanty yield of gold during the last eight months. I will only add that to penetrate their designs was impossible, and without a clue to the design and its advisers their attempt was not conceivable. True, some rumors had been afloat three months before, that under guise of a religious procession the Kungsi people were to force the jail, in order to liberate some prisoners belonging to their body; but the scheme did not then embrace my life, as I was in Singapore. CROCKSHANK took precautions, and on my return I made inquiry into the matter, without eliciting any tangible evidence to warrant me in disturbing the peace of the country. To guard against such a conspiracy is impossible; it slumbers till opportunity occurs. We are really not much hurt; our finance will suffer, but will recover, as even now, owing to the speedy and complete destruction of the Kungsi, confidence is not wanting. The loss of the company is trifling. It is fortunate that you will hear of our disaster and its retrieval at the same time; and for myself, I may say that I am in good health and spirits, and ready to rough it with the best of them. Our ladies behaved with great fortitude and resignation. CHARLIE JOHNSON, as usual, has been my right hand, and every Government servant has declared he will follow its fortunes in evil as well as in good fortune. I have written to retrench every superfluous expense, and I have appropriated my pension from the East India Company to pay the pensions I grant to others. Everything else is superfluous. No books, no papers, no wine, no nothings.

The following is an extract from a letter from Singapore, dated March 23:

"The Chinese here and in the Straits generally are in a disaffected state, and, should there be any rumor of misfortune to us in China, it may lead to unpleasant consequences in the meantime, though there can be no doubt of the ultimate result. The punishment of the Chinese in Borneo must have an excellent effect on other populations. The only pity is that the English did not do it instead of the Malays. Sir W. HOSTE's going to Borneo must produce the best results."

The British Expedition against China.

ITS STRENGTH—ISLAND OF FORMOSA TO BE CAPTURED—THE WAR TO BE PROSECUTED WITH GREAT VIGOR.

From the Paris Pays.

It seems that the strength of the expedition will be raised from 15,000 troops to 20,000, and that measures will be taken to maintain the regiments at their full strength. Should the Chinese refuse to conclude an arrangement, it is not thought that the war could terminate in a single campaign. It is said that the English have the intention of commencing with the capture of the island of Formosa, separated from the mainland by the straits of the same name. This island belongs to the province of FOH KIAN, which adjoins that of KOUANG JUNG, the capital of which is Canton. The island of Formosa is 288 English miles long and 100 miles in breadth; it is rich, fertile, and very healthy; its principal town is Taitouan. The island, which is garrisoned by 12,000 Chinese, would form an admirable spot for the establishment of hospitals, depots, &c., and it would admit of being easily fortified. The Court of Pekin attaches great importance to the possession of Formosa, which, during the second half of the Seventeenth Century, was the scene of a violent struggle; it was finally annexed to the Chinese Empire in 1683 by the great conqueror, KHANG HI.

From the London Times.

The events of the next few months will bring with them their own instruction as to the policy which it will now be advisable to pursue; but there can be no doubt as to the imperfections of our last Convention. That it did not fulfill the conditions desirable, in terminating the outrageous absurdity of Europeans—that it did not effectually bring the Chinese to a sense of our right to be treated on at least a footing of equality, or adequately provide for that expansion of commerce which would carry such advantages to both nations at once, is now sufficiently manifest. Its defects, in fact, were glaringly exhibited in the non-execution of one of its own stipulations; for, whereas it was expressly agreed that we should no longer stand excluded from the city of Canton, the Cantonese were allowed to plead their own truculence and ferocity, in defiance of the very injunction which had been devised to control them. For the future we want exemption from insult and security for trade—nothing more. Any territorial cession will only be demanded in aid of these purposes. We desire such establishments as will enable us to conduct in a proper fashion an enormous trade at the distance of many thousand miles from home. We desire that in these transactions we may be no longer exposed to offence from a barbarous city populace, encouraged to degrade us as evidence of its own superiority; and we expect such a settlement of affairs as will relieve us hereafter from any recurrence of embar to 34s., but closed at 33s. 6d.; Yellow and Whites have been more steady, and may be quoted at 36s. and 37s. 6d.

RAGS.—The reported clearances from the United States for this port are 44,000 boxes, of which some 40,000 have been received; of this number 25,000 are estimated to have passed into consumers' hands, thus leaving stock in first hands about 20,000 boxes. The stock in London, including loose and bales, is estimated at 3,500 packages. Owing to small receipts of irregular American Meats, as well as the diminished supply of Barrel Pork, Bacon has less competition than usual from competing stocks; still the home demand is restricted, and foreign orders are in the same condition. We report the trade inactive, but firm in price for all descriptions, except Cumberland, which is not in demand.

BEEF.—We quote—Long Middles, Ribbed, 54s.@58s.; Boneless, 57s.@58s.; Short, Ribbed, 57s.@58s.; Boneless, 56s.; Cumberland, 52s. 6d.@56s.; Hams, in salt, 54s.@55s.

BEEF AND BARREL PORK.—Last year the stock of Beef was 12,400 tcs., and of Pork 20,000 bbls.—now both materially are less than 3,000 pkgs in first hands—hence the little doing in them. New Beef, if good to choice, would bring 125s @155s., and the value of New Prime Mess Pork is 92s. 6d.@95s.

LARD.—Remains unsatisfactory, the market being nominally 66s.@68s. Large arrivals are expected upon a change of wind.

TALLOW.—Owing to light stock, has been in good demand, and the advance of last week is sustained. The sales include Butcher's Association, at 55s. 6d.@57s. In London the market is not active, and the price for the month has declined to 56s.; but advanced to 55s. 9d. for May.

JAMES HEWITT & CO.

The Troubles at Quarantine.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The citizens of Richmond County have for years been urging upon the public and the State the impracticability of maintaining an effectual Quarantine upon the site of the present institution, and the impropriety and cruelty of tha attempt. They have been answered in a spirit which I will not characterize;—"Long ago, when tha Quarantina was established in its present position, its site was in the midst of a farming district. Those who sold the ground for it thaught they had made a good bargain; those on the Island who got contracts for supplying the institution with milk and vegetables, were glad to have the market it furnished. The ferry people were glad to have the increased business to which it led. If any objections were made by tha people of the Island at that time, they were overborne by these interests and by tha convenience to merchants which the site afforded. Since then circumstances have changed. Staten Island, from being a purely rural and agricultural, has taken a purely suburban, manufacturing and commercial character, and a populous town has grown up in the vicinity of the Quarantine, by reason of that same convenience which led to the institutions being placed upon its present site. But those who have bought property on the Island and who have settled upon it, have done so with a knowledge of the danger and inconvenience to which the Quarantine would subject them. They have, therefore, no right to object to it. Tha time to oppose it was before it was established. As the opposition was then overborne, it has no right to a further hearing."

Now let us consider under what circumstances the citizens of Westfield find tha desolating nuisance about to be reestablished among them. The Grand Jury of their County have presented the present Quarantine as a nuisance. It has for years been difficult for the more sober and conservative inhabitants to restrain the community from lawlessly destroying the hospitals. Under these circumstances tha Legislature appoints a Commission to remove the Quarantine to a suitable and safe position. Before this Commission is appointed, and during the time the subject is under consideration, a liquor-dealer of New-York, who owns property at Seguine's point, is known to have gone to Albany and is believed to have been in intimate association with one or more of those who were immediately afterwards appointed Commissioners. The Commissioners were instructed to endeavor to obtain Sandy Hook of the State of New-Jersey. They proceeded, therefore, to the Capital of that State while the Legislature was in session. In what manner they managed is not known; but it is known they only succeeded in exasperating the Government and people of New-Jersey, and in being sent home with a kick. Then follows a short interval of silence and mysterious inaction on the part of the Commissioners, and the next thing we of Westfield hear about the matter, is an obscure paragraph in tha TIMES that the next day the Commissioners, with Governor KING and a select party of friends, will make a steamboat excursion to Ward's Point, Seguine's Point and other localities suggested as suitable for the Quarantine. This was tha first hint that any one had been so foolish as to think of Seguine'e Point as a suitable place for such a purpose. Knowing it to be in every way unsuitable, no attention was paid to the suggestion. But the steamboat did appear at the Point the next day, and Governor KING and the Commissioners landed. Then it was whispered that the liquor-dealer had sold his property, and that the only suitable place which tha Commissioners had considered was Coney Island, and that Governor KING, who owns property at Jamaica a number of miles to leeward of Coney Island, thought there were strong objections to that site. It was also ascertained that two of the Commissioners ware Long Islanders. Still, relying on the utter impracticability of establishing a Quarantine at Seguine's, we merely smiled at the apparent reasons which had induced the Commissioners to come so far ont of their way to look at it. Our surprise was great then when a few days after we saw it stated that Mr. ——, some body we never heard of before, bnt since reported also to be a Long Islander, had sold tha land hitherto supposed to belong to tha liquor-dealer on Seguine's Point, to the State for a Quarantine ground. As soon as this was ascertained to be true, we used the most energetic legal proceedings to resist what we universally considered, and what I have no douht you, Mr. Editor, and every other man who has studied the matter, have considered to be a measure knavish, corrupt and purely mercenary in its inception, weak, careless and indolent, if not worse, on the part of the Commissioners, and cruel, murderous and oppressive in its certain results, on the part of the State.

Large, talented, and most earnest and indefatigable deputations of our best citizens were immediately sent to Albany to remonstrate. Public meetings, in which all our best and most conservative citizens took part, were held; the unsuitableness of the proposed site for the purpose; the practicability of procuring much more suitable sites elsewhere were demonstrated and published to the world, and it was finally resolved in a public assemblage, better representing the medical, legal and educated talent, and the wealth, character and conservatism, as well as the simple, democratic common-sense "bone and sinew" of Richmond County than any which, perhaps, ever before met together, that we would resist and prevent tha re-establishment of the hateful Lazaretto at Seguine's Point with every legal means, and at the last, in extremity, knowing it to be a purely and atrociously indefensible act of government oppression for the benefit of a few individuals at the hazard of all we held dear but our honor, we resolved that we would resist it with all the powers which our Maker had given us.

The Commissioners scorned to make an explanation, tha Governor was silent, the press in general, and our fellow citizens generally, out of the county, gave less attention to the matter than they did to the birth of the ninth infant of England.

A proposition and offer to provide either of two more suitable positions on the island was made to the Commission; it was ascertained that a lease of Coney Island for Quarantine purposes could have been obtained at almost nominal rent; a proposition and offer was made and published by a person in every way competent, to immediately construct, at a moderate compensation, a suitable site for a Yellow Fever Hospital on the West Bank, a low water sand island, several miles from the nearest inhabited land, within a cable's length of the two principal channel entrances to New-York harbor, with anchorage ground all around it equally good with tbat now proposed to be used by the pest-ships. Paying not the slighest respect or attention to all, whether in the shape of petition, proposition, remonstrance or warning, the Commissioners took possession of the ground at Seguine's Point, and advertised for proposals of builders.

When their Surveyor came upon the ground he was warned that he would remain at his peril. The same night while he was sleeping in the buildings, they were fired by some person or persons unknown. Who did the deed and with what motive, whether in pursuance of a plan of deliberate secret conspiracy, or in the sudden determination of men maddened with apprehension and indignation. I know no more than you, Mr. Editor, but I do not agree in any case with you, that they are to be considered only as ordinary, sneaking burglars and villains. It was an unjustifiable act, bnt it was far more venial than tha proceedings which have led to it on tha part of the majority of the Quarantine Commissioners. Where grass fails, men will take to stones.

And now I would ask, in all grievous sincerity, of those wha for years have been telling us that the only proper time to object to tha Quarantine at its present site, was before it had been fixed there, what would they have us do? I do not believe there is one resident within ten miles of Seguine's Point, who will not give freely of his time, money and talent to make objection to the establishment of the Quarantine at that point effective. Let us know what means will answer the purpose that we have left untried, and when all legal persuasion and remonstrance fails, I ask any man with a wife, mother, children and home to protect against pestilence and death, what he would finally be driven to?

O.

FROM BOSTON.

A Moral Flutter—The Musical Festival—Judge Loring—F. P. Blair, Jr.—A Great Railroad Lawsuit.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Tuesday, May 14, 1857.

We have been ventilating our virtue for a fortnight in preparation for the religious anniversaries. Unfortunate Miss HERON—that she should have alighted among us at the time our muslin was all starched for the annual rustle at the close of May! Our indignant modesty shrank from the theatre all the first week of her engagement. Poor weak thing, it abut itself up in the parlor away from the seductions of Camille, and warbled for consolation the music of Don Giovanni and La Traviata.

In short, we have had a moral spasm, or "conniption," brief but violent, about the fancied immorality of Camille. Everybody writhed with it,—the whole press included, except the Post and the Traveller. The pangs, however, have somewhat abated since last Thursday, and this morning the Courier also ventured to suggest that it perhaps was not the worst piece ever played before moral Boston.

The effect of the discussion has certainly been immoral, if the subject of it was not, for one periodical-dealer sent orders by yesterday's steamer for fifty copies of the novel of DUMAS fils, which will be read by young eyes, I fear, at the seashore and the Springs this Summer.

Our great musical festival begins a week from to-day, in the Music Hall, introduced by an oration by ROBERT C. WINTHROP, who, we are informed by an evening paper, possesses preeminent qualifications for such a performance, having always had a great taste for church music. We have no douht that Mr. WINTHROP will make very pretty remarks, hnt we douht if his possible membership of the Singing Committee of his church in reality makes his qualifications preeminent. Many New-York musicians will be present, to swell the orchestra of 100 performers, who will accompany a chorus of nearly 700 voices. This is pretty well for a provincial town. The chorus at the great festival in the Crystal Palace at Sydenham in June, in which all musical London is interested, will not be more than twice so numerous. Three oratorios are to be given on three successive days—HAYON'S Creation, MENDELSSOHN'S Elijah, and HANDEL'S Messiah—besides two miscellaneous concerts.

Our interminable Legislature has at last fixed a day for adjournment, the 23d. It is probable that among its closing acts will he numbered another address to the Governor for the removal of ENWARN G. LORING, the United States Commissioner in the Burns case, from his office of Judge of Probate for Suffolk County, and it is rumored that Governor GARDNER will this time be ready to accede to their request. The Senate have already voted the address, and it lies before the House for action.

FRANCIS P. BLAIR, of St. Louis, was here at the beginning of the week, and was warmly received by personal and political friends. He says that if half the sympatby and money which are expended on Kansas would be spent on Missouri, it would become a Free State within two years.

Quite an important case is being tried in Salem, which attracts much attention on account of the ability of the counsel engaged in it, for RUFUS CHOATE and HENRY F. DURANT, who have just been counsel for MRS. DALTON in the divorce case, appear with OTIS P. LORD, of Salem, for the plaintiff, and BENJ. F. BUTLER, of Lowell, and Col. JOHN H. GEORGE, of Concord, N. H., appear for the defendant. The plaintiff, Rev. GEORGE B. JEWETT, a brother of JOHN P. JEWETT the publisher, came with his carriage into collision with a freight train on the Concord Railroad, in Nashua, N. H., where he resided, on April 15, 1855. Tha carriage was smashed into splinters, Mr. JEWETT's son was killed, his wife's hand was torn off, and he himself was so injured that he has been incapable of mental or intellectual exertion since. Two amputations bad to be performed on his leg, his right arm was so injured as to be useless, his spine crooked in two places, and one of the vertebræ near his neck displaced so as to impede respiration. He laye his damages at $40,000, and from present appearances he is likely to gain a verdict for every cent of that amount, for it seems that there was no brakeman on the train and that the engine did not whistle.

Rev. H. W. Beecher's Letter on the Theatre.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Mr. BEECHER'S letter to Mr. BOURCICAULT states Dr. BELLOWS' argument in relation to the theatre so unfairly, that without any allusion to the remainder of his article, I am constrained to call your attention to the passage in question. He says, Dr. BELLOWS' argument seems to us to be just this: Amusements are necessary to moral health; therefore, theatres ought to be countenanced by Christians. There is a middle term left out which no ingenuity can supply, and without which the argument cannot be saved from ridicule. What can be more unjust? Dr. BELLOWS expressly and repeatedly states the "middle term," and his argument forms a perfect syllogism, viz.:

MAJOR—Amusements are necessary to moral health.

MINOR—The theatre is the "most amusing of amusements."

CONCLUSION—Therefore, theatres ought to be countenanced by Christians.

Is there anything very "ridiculous" about that?

Yours, INDAGATOR.

Interesting to Gas-Consumers.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your paper of Saturday last is a statement regarding a trial for damages against the Gas Company in Paterson, for not supplying a consumer with gas, where a former bill was not paid.

With Juries of gas-consumers, there is no difficulty in gaining such a verdict, bnt no douht the Court, on the appeal of the Gas Company, will reverse the judgment, as they certainly cannot compel the Company to furnish gas to any applicant without reference to the character of the applicant.

It is a gross arror of the statement that the Company turned on tha gas before the bill was paid. The former bill was paid before the gas was turned upon the premises, and the judgment of these juries of gas consumers will have to be tried by disinterested parties.

JOHN CARTWRIGHT,
Superintendent Paterson Gas-Light Company.

Another verdict of $40 damages has been granted against the Paterson Gas Light Company for refusing to furnish gas. A new company that will be a little more accommodating is to be formed.—Newark Adv.

HORRIBLE DISCLOSURES.—The Charlotte (N. C.) Democrat of the 12th inst., says: We learn that great excitement has prevailed in the neighboring village of Concord during the past week, caused by the discovery that several children, who died recently, had been disinterred and their bodies removed. A quack doctor, known by the name of NUGENT, applied to a man to assist him in taking up a child that had been buried a few days before. The man made the request known, and intimated that two little girls, daughters of a very respectable gentleman residing in the vicinity, had been removed from their graves by this man NUGENT, for the purpose of extracting medicinal properties from their flesh and bones. To ascertain the truth of the rumor, the father had the graves reopened, and found the coffins and bodies missing. Of course, this created a deep sensation, and we are informed that it was determined to inflict summary punishment upon NUGENT; but on visiting his house he was found very sick and in a dying condition. One report says that he took poison after learning that his operations were known to the public; and another, that he died from a disease contracted from frequent handling of decomposed bodies. NUGENT died on Wednesday last. He made a statement before death, to the effect that he had exhumed about sixteen dead bodies in Concord and elsewhere, and after using them (for making medicine) he burned the flesh, coffins, and everything, to prevent detection. His ash-pile was examined, and teeth and bones found therein. His theory appears to have been that a medicine could he made by boiling the liver of a human being that would cure liver complaint; and so with regard to other diseases.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 16 1857.

THE BURDELL MURDER.

Five Thousand Dollars Reward for the Discovery of the Murderer!

The PROPRIETORS of the NEW-YORK TIMES hereby offer a reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS to any person or persons who will furnish them information which shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL.

The Proprietors of the TIMES are prompted to this course by a profound conviction that the regular authorities of the City and State cannot be relied on for such action as the interests of the people demand at their hands, and that the PUBLIC PRESS will in this instance, as in many others, be found the truest representative and most faithful guardian of the Public welfare. The action thus far taken by the officers of the law has signally revealed their utter incompetency and inability to prosecute such an inquiry as it should be carried on. The parties indicted for the crime have been acquitted by a Jury, and all further effort to trace it to its author seem to have been abandoned. The Mayor of the City alleges that he has no power to offer a reward for the discovery of the murderer. The Police and other municipal authorities seem to be too much engrossed in disgraceful struggles for power and patronage, to be able to give the requisite degree of attention to the protection of the lives of our citizens; and the Governor of the State has thus far given no indication of a purpose to exercise the power with which he is clothed to promote the ends of justice in this particular instance.

Under these circumstances, unless some action is taken by our citizens, this most horrible and atrocious crime is likely to pass unpunished;—our City must bear the reproach of permitting the most horrible atrocities to be perpetrated with entire impunity; the hundreds and thousands of abandoned ruffians who abound in all large cities are to learn, that any citizen may be assassinated in the most open manner, in his own room, surrounded by the inmates of his own house, in a street every foot of which is occupied by dwellings, at an hour when the utmost silence prevails, and when any unusual noise would be the most likely to attract attention;—and that in spite of all these circumstances the assassin may continue to mingle with the mass of the community, and escape all suspicion of his atrocious guilt. It is the duty of all good citizens, who set a proper value upon the security of life and of property, and who feel any interest in the execution of justice and the prevention of crime, as well as any concern for the honor and reputation of this City, to do everything in their power to prevent such results.

The Proprietors of the TIMES are disposed, in the absence of proper efforts in other quarters, to take the lead in such a movement; and they accordingly offer the above reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS for such information, to be communicated to them in writing, as shall lead to the development of this mystery, and the detection, conviction, and punishment of the parties guilty of this murder. If any doubt shall arise as to the rightful claimant, the money will be paid upon his written award of a majority of the Justices of the Supreme Court for the First Judicial District.

The Proprietors of the TIMES reserve the right of withdrawing this offer whenever the authorities of the City or State shall take proper action calculated to accomplish the same result; and upon so doing they will, if requested by the parties, hand over to the said authorities whatever information may be elicited by this notice.

If any parties who may communicate information on this subject desire that the fact of their having done so should be kept secret, their names will not be disclosed, without their consent. All communications in response to this offer should be addressed, in sealed envelopes, marked "Private and Confidential," to the EDITOR OF THE NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES."

Although only two days have elapsed since the above notice was issued, we have already received a large number of communications on the subject,—many of them making very useful suggestions in regard to the best mode of following up the inquiry, and several containing statements of facts which are very likely to afford a clue to the detection of this most atrocious crime. We desire it to be especially noted that any information concerning the whereabouts of Dr. BURDELL on the evening of his murder,—any money transactions he may have had with any parties on that day,—any differences, in regard to business, or other affairs, which may have arisen between himself and any other persons, and generally anything relating to his engagements, occupations and associates on that night, will tend to develop the mystery, and thus promote the objects of this inquiry.

It is very evident that the parties who have contributed so largely, from the very day the crime was committed, to mislead the public judgment and direct attention from the guilty parties, are exceedingly active in their efforts to neutralize the effect which THE TIMES' offer of a reward of $5,000 is calculated to produce. A large portion of the City Press are entirely silent in regard to it, while more accessible and less scrupulous journals like the Evening Post, Day Book, and Herald, endeavor by all the means in their power to ridicule and throw discredit upon it, in order to create the impression that the offer is insincere, and that the reward will not be paid. That these movements on the part of these sheets are not voluntary, nor prompted merely by the business jealousy which influences much of their conduct, is shown by the fact that the identical article, ridiculing our offer by proposing a reward of five thousand peanuts for the detection of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL, which appeared on Thursday afternoon as an editorial in the Evening Post, is published conspicuously as an advertisement in the Tribune of yesterday morning. No one would have incurred the expense of thus paying for attempts to discredit our offer unless they had some direct interest in concealing the murder and counteracting all efforts for its detection. The articles in the Herald are still more ingenious, and show still more clearly the handiwork of the parties who have succeeded thus far in defeating every effort that has been made to dispel the mystery that surrounds this crime.

Meantime we desire it to be distinctly understood that our offer of a Reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS for such information as shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer, as given above, is made in good faith, and in all possible sincerity—and, if desired, the money will be deposited in the Shoe and Leather Bank, on Broadway, to await the result.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the arrival of the Asia at this port yesterday, we receive one week's later news from Europe. The new British Parliament met on the 30th of April; and, on that day, the House of Commons proceeded to elect its Speaker. MR. JOHN EVELYN DENISON, member for North Nottinghamshire, the Government candidate, was proposed, and there being no other candidate, he was unanimously elected. The proceedings and speeches on the occasion, which are invested with some interest, will be found in another part of this morning's paper. The death of the Duchess of GLOUCESTER is announced. She was the last surviving child of GEORGE III.

The Liverpool papers report the foundering of the American ship Andrew Foster, from New-York. The accident was caused by a collision in the Channel. No lives were lost. MR. DALLAS, our Minister to England, has written to Lord CLARENDON, transmitting 21 silver medals and £270 sterling, as testimonials from the President of the United States to the brave men who saved the lives of the crew of the American ship Northern Belle.

Our advices from the Continent of Europe are interesting. The Spanish Cortes were opened on Friday, May 1, and the royal speech was read by NARVAEZ. The speech congratulates the Cortes upon a reconciliation with the Holy See, and hopes that diplomatic relations with Mexico will be speedily resumed. It speaks of tranquillity prevailing throughout the country, and of a reform of the Senate.

The dispute between Prussia and Switzerland is at length all but adjusted. The arrangement is drawn up in the form of a treaty between the two States, and though the adhesion of Prussia is still wanted, there is little doubt but that it will be given. When this takes place the reconciliation will be complete. The King of Prussia, by this new treaty, renounces all sovereignty over Neufchatel, which will hereafter be recognized as an independent State. The Confederation will pay to the King of Prussia one million of francs, and will grant an amnesty for all offences relating to the events of September last.

The rumor has been again revived that the King of Denmark will be forced to settle the difficulties of his reign by abdicating.

The details of the China news, of which we have already received a brief telegraphic summary, are deeply interesting. The steamship Queen, under Portuguese colors, on her trip from Hong Kong to Macao, was seized by Chinese passengers on board and carried off. Several Europeans were killed and wounded. Numerous instances of insurrection by Coolie immigrants on board ship are reported, and in these cases the loss of life had been frightful. We publish, elsewhere, a graphic account from the pen of Rajah BROOKE, of the Chinese outbreak at Sarawak, in the Island of Borneo. It is said to have been instigated by one of YEH's emissaries. Sir JAMES only escaped by swimming a river, but he returned speedily with aid, and 2,000 Chinese are reported to have fallen victims to the vengeance of the infuriated people.

From the extracts which we give from English papers, it will be seen that the war against China will be prosecuted on a gigantic scale. The Paris Foys says that the first step taken will be the capture of the Island of Formosa, and that the invading force will not draw back until it has reached the Capitol itself and dictated a new treaty. The London Times says substantially the same thing. The Post, organ of Lord PALMERSTON, again reverts to the stand taken by the United States, and seems much concerned at our avoiding the snare of this alliance against the Celestial Kingdom.

The four negroes accused of murdering the JOYCE family, near Louisville, some months since, have been tried and acquitted—the evidence of the one who turned State's evidence not having been legally corroborated. Subsequently a mob attacked the jail in which they had been confined for safety, and the jailer surrendered two of them, who were immediately hung. A third cut his throat, while the one who turned State's evidence was unmolested.

In the National Quarantine Convention, yesterday, the resolutions in relation to yellow fever, offered on Thursday by the Business Committee, encountered great opposition from the Southern delegates, and were stricken out. On the final adoption of the resolutions, as amended, only two voted in the negative. The New-Orleans delegates were divided. The Convention wound up with an entertainment at the Lazaretto, having resolved to adjourn sine die. The title of the Convention was changed to the National Sanitary and Quarantine Convention. The next meeting will be held in April next, at Baltimore.

We learn by the Ohio papers that the Legislature of that State, at their late session, established an Institution, at Columbus, for the education and training of idiotic and imbecile youths. Dr. R. J. PATTERSON, of Columbus has been appointed Superintendent, to whom all communications should be addressed.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued additional general regulations under the revenue and collection laws, to the officers of the Customs, in anticipation of the operation of the new tariff act. The new points of instruction, which are few, will be found noticed under the Washington head.

Great distress exists in some portions of Northern Michigan for want of food. Several persons are known to have died from starvation, and the cattle, even, are dying for want of provender. A public meeting was held at Detroit last evening, to devise means of relief.

The Committee on Supplies of the Board of Education, last evening, opened the proposals for supplying the Public Schools with wood and coal for the ensuing year. The contract for coal was awarded to THOMAS O'NEIL, at $5 62½ per ton—to be delivered in the bins of the school houses ready for use. The contract for wood was awarded to J. L. BARNARD & CO., No. 194 Front-street, at $7 50 a cord, delivered at the several school houses.

Why do we Meddle with Slavery?

Our Southern brethren are sadly plagued and puzzled by the interest which the North takes in Slavery. They say, and we believe them, that they cannot imagine why we should concern ourselves about an Institution for the existence of which we are not responsible, and the effects of which they suppose to be confined to the people who maintain it.

The great States of the North are not peopled exclusively by quidnuncs and agitators. Public affairs do not constitute the controlling interest of life in commonwealths like New-York and Massachusetts. So far is this from being the case that the vast majority of the citizens of these commonwealths look upon politics as a trade to be pursued by those who have no other calling to occupy their time, and upon politicians as a somewhat disreputable class of people. Excessive industry breeds among our people almost the same phenomena which excessive indolence engenders among the peasantry of Lower Canada or the shepherds of the Abruzzi. Here, for instance, in the wealthiest and most populous City of the Union, we find so little time to attend to public affairs that we suffer all sorts of knaves and idiots to clamber into civic places, and to revel in the sweets of municipal patronage.

Nevertheless, we do give ourselves great and increasing concern about the existence of Slavery in States over whose internal economy we have no right and no wish to exercise any control whatever. Nevertheless, we do feel, and the feeling is growing deeper in the Northern heart with every passing year, that our character, our prosperity, and our destiny are most seriously involved in the question of the perpetuation or extinction of Slavery in those States.

We admit that our Southern friends are not to be blamed for expressing some surprise at this fact. We admit that they may well cry out upon us for our seeming impertinence until we have cleared our anxieties and our sympathies from every appearance of vagrancy and intrusion.

The Slaveholding States of the Union are independent sovereignties. They are allied with us indeed by the closest ties—by the bonds of present interest and intercourse—by the subtler links of hereditary instinct and historical sentiment. But they are independent sovereignties still, and their independence of us must be respected in the spirit as well as in the letter, if their alliance with us is to be made durable and fortunate. The dictates of sound statesmanship upon this point are at one with the inspirations of loyalty, honor and good faith.

But these States which exact of us a full measure of respect for their independence must remember that the object of those who framed the Constitution of this country was to create not a confederation simply, but a Union. With the growth of our national dominion this object of the fathers has become more and more truly the ideal of the people. Especially in the Northern States has the notion of a great, free and united America wrought itself into the popular heart. The citizen of Ohio, or of Massachusetts, of Pennsylvania or Wisconsin, though he may feel himself very strongly attached to the State of his residence, is still more strongly attached to the nation of which that State is but one member after all, be her specific importance what it may.

And whatever impedes the advance or interferes with the prosperity of the Nation, of the United States as a grand consolidated empire, will excite the attention and invite upon itself the indignation of the Northern States just in proportion to the weight of the obstacle and to the distinctness with which the people are made to perceive it.

Here, then, is an aspect of the Northern hostility to Slavery which it becomes the South to consider very carefully. Upon this view of the question it would be disgraceful for the South to expend idle expletives by denunciation. It is no impertinent and unwarrantable spirit which animates the North to such a consideration of Slavery.

The Northern people are beginning to see that acquiescence in the pretensions of the Slave Party—that compromises with the institution of Slavery in the distribution of an unsettled national territory—that all the old-fashioned system, in short, of palaver, procrastination and concession in dealing with such national issues as are presented by the question of the extension or restriction of Slavery, cannot be any longer maintained with safety to the Union. For they are beginning to see that there is in the intrinsic quality of Slavery an influence fatal to the establishment of that cordial, mutual understanding between the South and the North without which the Union cannot possibly or profitably exist. They are beginning to see that the Southern people and the people of the North are yearly growing apart, instead of yearly growing together—and this they do not like to see—and believing that the cause of this odious severance is to be found in an institution which the soundest political economists and the noblest moralists of the age unite in condemning as alike cruel and foolish, they will oppose to the clamor and the amazement of the South one steady and unvarying cry, "Between Slavery and the Union we choose, and you shall choose the Union."

Everything in the appearance of Southern society proclaims that the South is subjected to the operation of influences utterly unlike those which are yearly moulding the different sections of the Free States into a more and more homogeneous and united whole. The material interests of the Great West and of the Eastern States are by no means identical. Abundant opportunities exist for rivalry between Iowa and New-York, between Illinois and Pennsylvania. But no fierce political issues rear, between ourselves and our kinsmen towards the setting sun, barriers more insurmountable than the ridges of the Alleghany. Diverse and sometimes conflicting as are our interests, similarity of institutions, of culture, and of moral feeling, overcomes all the attractions of repulsion, and we are continually drawing together with the South. On the contrary no material ties can safely and securely bind us, while the characters of the two sections are undergoing such regularly marked and progressive changes. The barbaric institution of Slavery will become more and more odious to the Northern people because it will become more and more plain to the Northern people that the States which cling to Slavery thrust back the American idea, and reject the influences of the Union.

One cannot take up a Southern paper without perceiving that the whole atmosphere of thought and feeling at the South is tinged with the fierceness, the insecurities, and the extravagances inseparable from the existence of Slavery.

Two days ago, for instance, the slaveholding city of Baltimore was made the theatre of an act of barbarism which recalls in all its features the spasmodic outrages of the Reign of Terror, or the chronic savagery of feudalism. Four negroes were thrown into jail on a charge of murder. Only one witness could be brought forward against them, and he was a slave. The despotic laws of Slavery of course annihilates the slave as a witness in annihilating him as a man, and the accused were formally acquitted.

Thereupon, says the Telegraph:

"About dark a crowd broke into the cannon house, and seizing upon one of the cannon, placed it in front of the jail. A number of shots were fired from the jail, and returned by the mob, who also attacked the jail with bricks and other missiles. The jailor, fearing the escape of all his prisoners, formally surrendered two of the accused negroes to the mob, who immediately hung them up. The third prisoner cut his throat with a razor, and thus escaped the fury of the mob. The negro who turned State's evidence was not molested by the mob."

From beginning to end what can be imagined more utterly un-American, un-Republican, uncivilized, than this transaction?

Now Louisville is not a hamlet. It is a large and considerable city. The resources of its authorities ought to be fully equal to all the emergencies of municipal life. It may be regarded as in all respects a model city of the South. And can it be a matter of wonder at the South that the great Free States should protest and continue to protest with all their strength against the systematic reinforcement and expansion of the influences which have made it possible for such scenes to be enacted in such a place?

QUARANTINE INCENDIARIES.—The success of the Princes' Bay incendiaries has inspired the people at the opposite end of Staten Island with an ambition to emulate their bad example, and there seems to be a pretty fair chance of some extensive conflagrations at the Quarantine at Tompkinsville. If the temporary Quarantine buildings at Seguine's Point may be burned down with impunity, why should the Hospitals and physicians' houses at the old Quarantine be permitted to cumber the ground? It seems that there is actual danger of a torch being applied to the solution of this question. Doctor THOMPSON has called upon the Commissioners of Police to protect his premises at the Quarantine from the threatened attacks of incendiaries; and, we must confess, that since the incendiarism at Seguine's Point, and the subsequent conduct of the Staten Islanders in shielding the villains who committed that outrage, from detection and arrest, we are prepared to hear of any act of violence at the old Quarantine grounds.

The Princes' Bay rioters have a shadow of right on their side, inasmuch as the Quarantine has been planted among them contrary to their wishes, and in spite of their vehement protests; but the residents of the other end of the Island, in the neighborhood of the Quarantine, are voluntary occupants of the land. They made their purchases of lots, erected their buildings, and moved into them of their own accord, knowing the perils they encountered in settling in such close proximity to the Hospital grounds. If they did not choose to run the risk of such an exposure, why did they go there? If they do not like living so near a pest house, why did they not build their villas and cottages in a safer location? The Quarantine has been in its present location the past fifty years, and every house within a dangerous distance of it has been built within that time, and the greater part of them within a very few years. For the occupants of these houses to complain of the dangerous proximity of the hospital grounds is, in the highest degree, unjust. Whatever complaints the Princes' Bay people may be justified in making, at the Quarantine being thrust upon them, there are none that can be justified in the people at the other end of the Island. If they should imitate the incendiary example of the lawless ruffians at Wolfe's farm, they must not expect the same degree of sympathy to be extended to them that has shielded the former from arrest.

Jansenists vs. Jesuits—The Doctrine of Papal Infallibility.

The new dogma of the "Immaculate Conception," is recalled to mind by the protest of the three Dutch Bishops, which came with the most recent trans-atlantic news, and will be found in another part of this morning's TIMES; and as it is evidently destined to play an important part in the religious controversy and contests of the future, we propose now to offer a few words of explanation concerning it.

The three signers of this protest are not Roman Catholic Bishops. They are Jansenist bishops, and we believe the only remaining ones of that ilk. In 1638 died JANSENIUS, Bishop of Ypres, leaving a work in MSS. upon the doctrine of St. Augustine, as to grace, predestination, free-will, &c.; when afterwards published, it was found, by theologians at Rome, to contain five erroneous propositions, which were condemned there. Two questions arose among clerics—whether JANSENIUS held the condemned doctrine himself, and whether or not, as a question of fact, it was really contained in his book. A party, already disaffected, subsequently styled "Jansenists," while writing in condemnation of the five propositions, maintained that they were not to be found in the work of JANSENIUS, and refused therefore to publish the bulls of condemnation. The Jesuits became champions of the opposite view; maintaining that Rome had the right to decide the question of fact, and that all must conform to its judgment that the book contained the condemned propositions. The contest was warm and long, as history assures us. Finally, after sundry alternations of success, the Jansenists, to whom LOUIS XIV. became bitterly hostile, were obliged to succumb. Sundry Bishops, however, held out, among them his grace of Utrecht, who alone with a handful of suffragans, including the Bishops of Haarlem and Deventer, continue the schism to this day. He continues to ordain and consecrate as necessary to keep up the succession in the Jansenist sees. Whenever a new Bishop is so consecrated, as the Jansenists claim to belong to the church, a letter of communion announcing the event, is dispatched to the Pope as head. Rome cannot question the validity of orders conferred by the Jansenist prelates, but denies their jurisdiction.

They have, it appears, availed themselves of the present, as a favorable opportunity to protest in turn. The new dogma is the occasion for doing so. It is a cardinal doctrine of the Catholic, as all are aware, that infallibility necessarily resides, and has always resided, in the Church; but there is an old difference of opinion as to where precisely, in the Church, that quality or prerogative is lodged. Some maintain that it vested only in general councils; others that the See of Rome also may appropriate it. The public opinion of the Church, or rather the general judgment of her bishops, upon doctrine, i. e., revelation, when legitimately pronounced, is held to be infallible. Now, what is the legitimate mode or channel, through which that judgment passes to mankind in general? Here doctors, of Catholic theology we mean, differ, and for a long time agreed to differ. The views entertained pro and con, that is, for and against Rome, were not until recently regarded as of faith, but as opinions, theological opinions, and not obligatory on the conscience.

It was generally held that the Pope had the right to pronounce judgment on controversies of faith, that is, to make doctrinal definitions; but, at the same time, it was warmly disputed whether his solemn judgment, given even ex cathedra, wherein a doctrine was proposed to the Church generally as necessary to be believed, under anathema, might not possibly be erroneous. All but ultra-montanes were disposed to question this fullness of authority, and to confine to councils exclusively the power to define and proclaim new doctrine or developments of revelation. The Jesuits have ever been leading champions of extreme papal prerogative, and it is supposed have long awaited, with confidence, the suitable occasion to bring a controversy so important to a conclusion favorable to Rome. It seems singular, that the time when PIUS IX. was in exile at Gaeta, should have been seized upon to place ultramontanism at its culminating point, the pinnacle of all its hopes; but in point of fact at no other period in hundreds of years, was the Pope spiritually so free as then, or better able to place reliance upon the general dispositions of the Catholic nations towards his authority.

The declaration of the Immaculate Conception then was but as chien d'Alcibiade—it was the definition, necessarily or as a consequence implied in and from that act, although the assenting opinion of the vast majority had been obtained in writing, so that the spirit of the Catholic Episcopate was clearly in favor of the newly promulgated dogma. The French Bishop referred to in the Dutch pastoral, expresses the idea exactly and in a few words:—Holy Father! thou hast not only decided the Immaculate Conception—thou hast decided thine own infallibility." The acknowledgment of such amplitude of power in the Papacy will greatly contribute to the practical unity and working power of the Roman Catholic body, but may in the end prove but a source of weakness and loss. There are already symptoms of dissent in France and elsewhere; and within the next quarter of a century the sons of LOYOLA may have reason to regret that their coup d'église was so great a success.

Coney Island and the Quarantine Commissioners.

"We hear that renewed proposals have been made to the Quarantine Commissioners in regard to the location of the Quarantine at Coney Island. Our authority for this statement is one of the owners, and it is made with the concurrence of joint owners on the water-front, and to an extent covering all the land and water necessary to the public health and for commercial purposes."

If the information conveyed in this extract, which we take from the Express of last evening, be accurate, the Commissioners of Quarantine will now have an opportunity at once to vindicate their own character which has been somewhat compromised by their unsatisfactory selection of Seguine's Point, and to allay the irritation of the citizens of Richmond County. The only valid excuse for the purchase of Seguine's Point will disappear at once in the offer of Coney Island, and as we observe that the Commissioners have displayed a commendable alertness and diligence in making their preparations for the erection of the necessary buildings in a bad place, we do not doubt that they will manifest an equal readiness to secure a good place for the necessary buildings, when it is fortunately put into their power to do so. We have condemned in no measured terms the conduct of the fire-bearing Islanders of Prince's Bay—but condemnation of popular arson is not to be construed into approbation of official carelessness or incapacity, and we hope the Commissioners will lose no time in availing themselves of such an admirable and in every way suitable location for the disagreeable but indispensable Institution confided to their charge, as has now been offered to them. If ever a business lay in a nutshell, this question of the Quarantine is that business, and it must be disposed of immediately.

THE DISTRICT-ATTORNEY AND THE BURDELL TRIAL.—The TIMES was the only paper in the City that, during the Coroner's investigation upon the Burdell murder declined to express a positive opinion as to the guilt or innocence of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM; and it has been the only press which has refrained from making a victim of District-Attorney HALL because he did not succeed in doing that which everybody avowed no body could do—"convict." It is true these columns commented, with some asperity, upon his blood-thirsty opening speech, for which, afterwards, in his summing up, he apologized to the Jury, and made ample amends by subsequent conduct and arguments of a temperate nature. No doubt, with his usual good nature, he is contented to be a victim until, under the stimulus of the TIMES' reward, a fresh one is found for popular vengeance.

But our neighbors of the Tribune and Herald may well ask themselves whether they themselves did not materially contribute toward the bloodthirsty zeal which, since the acquittal, they have so amiably criticised.

On the day succeeding the Coroner's verdict, the virtuous Herald thus descanted:

"We have had a house unroofed before our eyes. We have seen a woman and her daughters absolutely becoming brigands of society. The mother was at the same time the mistress of two men, each of whom had another mistress; all the women occupying semi-respectable positions—half-way between heaven and earth. The resident mistress visits in the Fifth-Avenue, gives a soirée dansante without a cent in her pocket, is a strict member of the church, and has a clergyman's son as cavalier servante to her daughters, in order to give an odor of sanctity to her establishment. These parties visit each other's sleeping apartments, live on the Mormon principle generally, and have a nice time of it, until one fine morning the person who finds the funds to carry on the revelry is found with his carotid artery severed and three wounds piercing the heart. A direct personal benefit is to accrue to the parties who have been sheltered in his house, and the public voice accuses them of 'the deep damnation of his taking off.'"

During the Coroner's investigation the Tribune thus wrote:

"It is already plain enough, from the testimony, that the house in which the murder was committed, though highly respectable as to exterior appearances, and situated in a highly respectable neighborhood, and, for aught that met the public eye, occupied by highly respectable people, yet, in point of fact, when its interior privacy comes to be exposed to the public view, turns out to have been by no means entitled to any such reputation."

With much more in the same way.

If the District-Attorney chose to follow such blind guides, he must not complain if he fell into a ditch. And very likely had Judge DAVIES allowed all the evidence to be given which the prosecution offered, in pursuance of their Sebastopolic opening, our two contemporaries would have been, at the end, as savage as they were in the beginning.

THE LAST OF A LARGE FAMILY.—Among the items of miscellaneous intelligence brought by the Asia yesterday, we notice a brief mention of the death of the Duchess of GLOUCESTER, a venerable lady, whose removal from this world is probably of not the least importance to any of its inhabitants; yet her death awakens a train of most interesting historical reminiscences in the mind of an American. She was the last surviving member of a family of thirteen children, whose father was the acknowledged sovereign and ruler of this country at the time of her birth. She was born on the 25th April, 1776, but little more than two months before the Declaration of American Independence, and, doubtless, the loyal subjects of her father in this City made merry when they heard of her being added to the royal family. She was the fourth daughter of GEORGE the Third, and was remarkable for her personal beauty and amiable character; at the mature age of forty she was married to her cousin, the Duke of Gloucester, who died in 1834, and she leaves no issue. Out of that large family of thirteen children there are but five grand-children now alive—Queen VICTORIA, the King of Hanover, and the three children of the Duke of Cambridge; and only two have passed away, the Princess CHARLOTTE, and the infant son of WILLIAM IV. The London Times makes the singular mistake of saying that only one grand-child of GEORGE the Third, the Princess CHARLOTTE, has died.

With this royal lady passes away the last remnant of that family who by birth had once a right to claim the loyal obedience and support of the people of this country. The distance reminds us both of how young we are as a nation, and how long it is since we severed our connection with the mother country.

To do our cousins on the other side justice, it must be confessed that they are very decorous in their grief at the loss of the last child of that respectable old monarch GEORGE III. The English papers bestow but little space on the announcement of her death; and, in fact, it would not look well if they did otherwise, while they are paying THACKERAY so much money, and crowding to his lectures, to hear him expose the foibles and ridicule her father and brothers. The loyalty of an Englishman does not extend beyond the royal vault; no sooner does one of their monarchs die than they take ample revenge for the forced respect shown him when alive by abusing him when he is dead. LEIGH HUNT, who was sent to prison for calling the Prince Regent "a fat Adonis," is still living in London, and living too, on a pension granted him by the Queen, while THACKERAY is delighting all England by saying of this same Prince: "This GEORGE was but a bow and a grin; he was all outside, a tailor's work, fine cocked hat, nutty-brown wig, coat, large black stock, under-waistcoats, more under-waistcoats, and then nothing—a royal mummy!"

BOOKS FOR THE BLIND.—In a late report of the Perkins' Institution for the Blind, at South Boston, we read that MILTON'S poetical works have been prepared in the raised characters, used at that and similar institutions, and that the money with which this was done was mostly collected in Kentucky, by a young man, himself blind, who went about seeking subscriptions for that purpose. This is a highly valuable addition to the library of the blind, the enlargement of which is so desirable, both as a means of instruction and entertainment to those who are shut out from the ordinary means of communication with the world. The Bible and several other works have been printed entire, but want of funds has generally caused much abridgement in the books issued, thus greatly impairing their usefulness. It seems a little strange that while so many of our literary and benevolent institutions receive rich endowments, in some cases for purposes not of practical use, this printing for the blind should depend upon occasional contributions, no fund existing by which a single volume can be published in the course of the year. Will not those who are able remedy this omission? We believe that if attention is drawn to the subject its claims will be acknowledged and cordially responded to by those who have it in their power to place in the hands of the blind books such as they need, and such as their more fortunate brethren have in abundance.

GRATITUDE OF THE SOUTH.—Our Southern neighbors are doing a good deal towards wiping out the reproach that has been so often cast in their teeth, of ingratitude to those who have served them. They are making atonements for their neglect of the Northern statesmen who have so faithfully served them, by heaping favors on the head of President PIERCE. In addition to the service of plate from the city of Savannah, the offer of a home in Virginia and in Maryland, it seems that the people of Mississippi have made a more liberal demonstration in behalf of the ex-President than has been done by any other State. The Vicksburg Whig has stated that $96,000 had been subscribed in that city in one day towards purchasing a plantation for Mr. PIERCE, the price of which was $100,000. Of course, there will be no difficulty in procuring the small sum of $4,000 to complete the purchase. It is not mentioned whether the plantation is well stocked with negroes, but we presume it must be, for it would be like giving a man a carriage without a horse, to give a plantation without the necessary means of working it. It may or may not be regarded as a compliment by the ex President, that so many Southern States appear to be anxious to have him as a citizen, while his native State has manifested no anxiety at all for his return.

SELLING POTATOES BY THE WEIGHT.—When potatoes were selling at twenty-five to thirty cents a bushel, a few pounds more or less in a measure, did not much matter to either buyer or seller. But potatoes are now among the luxuries of the table, and their high cost makes it a matter of no small importance to the majority of purchasers that they receive full measure for their money. It is very easy to commit frauds in measuring such bulky articles, and to protect the poor in purchasing the necessaries of life, a law was passed by the last Legislature, requiring that certain agricultural products which have always been sold by the measure, should hereafter be sold by weight; among other articles, potatoes must weigh, by law, sixty pounds to the bushel, unless a special bargain is made to the contrary. But, the law is not enforced; the hucksters have no more respect for Albany legislation than the oystermen of Princes Bay or Mayor WOOD. The old method of the small measure is still in vogue among dealers in this homely vegetable; and purchasers should try the experiment, occasionally, of seeing that they get full weight in buying their potatoes. In England they are sold by the weight altogether, and the same practice should be adopted here.

Miss Kissam's Return.

We mentioned yesterday that Miss KISSAM whose disappearance from a ladies' seminary at Jamaica, L. I., was noticed on Wednesday, had been found in Chelsea, near Boston. We [illegible] on Monday morning, when she went out as already stated to procure something to relieve [illegible], she did procure some laudanum, and under its influence wandered about for some time in a state of unconsciousness. She walked to East New York, came across the river in a ferry-boat, and went directly across the town to Pier No. 18 North River, where she handed her purse to the clerk of the Newton steamboat office, and told him she wanted a ticket to Boston. The clerk gave her the ticket and handed back change for the $10 gold piece which he found in her purse. He then told the conductor that something was amiss with her, and requested him to watch her. She sat up in the cabin and slept nearly all night, and on reaching Boston walked away, and, upon recovering her senses, found herself wandering in the streets of Chelsea, and the conductor of the train in which she had gone happened to be passing at the time and saw her there.

The clerk in the steamboat office here seeing the advertisement in the TIMES on Wednesday, immediately identified the missing lady as the one to whom he had sold the ticket, and apprised the family of the fact. The conductor who went on with her went to Chelsea, taking a police officer with him, visited fifteen or twenty houses in the street where he had seen her, and at last found her and brought her back to New-York, and restored her to her family.

One of the Boston papers states that "the case came to the knowledge of the police through a reward offered for her recovery; but which no officer would claim." This is not correct. Mr R H LEAVENS, the steamboat clerk, and Mr. PHILIP EATON, the conductor, were the parties who brought the matter to the knowledge of the Boston Police, and it is to them that the lady's recovery is mainly due. The police officer who found her in Chelsea, moreover, did claim the reward, and received a share of it.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.—The following officers have been ordered to join the sloop-of-war Plymouth, which will shortly sail for ordinance practice:

Commander, JOHN A. DAHLGREN; Lieutenants, CADWALLADER RINGGOLD JONES, SAMUEL EDWARDS, WM. A. WEBB, OSCAR C. BADGER, and JAMES E. JOHNSTON; Purser, WM. E. BOGG; Carpenter, THOMAS G. FERRALL; Gunner, WM. B. L. BRAYTON.

Commander EDWARD G. TILTON has been detached from the command of the sloop of war Saratoga, and Commander FREDERICK CHATARD has been ordered to her in his stead.

Lieut. WM. D. S. AUSTIN, United States Navy, has resigned his commission.

Harmonic Society.

There seems to be a growing taste for choral music in our midst, if we may judge from the recent activity of the Harmonic Society, and of that young and powerful Association, the Mendelssohn Union. During the past Winter the two Societies have given numerous entertainments, all of which have commanded large audiences, and been received with marked favor. A love for the massive effects that choral music can alone produce, lies at the very foundation of and almost constitutes correct taste. When the masses can sing or comprehend singing, they will know all that is necessary for the clear perception of every kind of music, for from this point springs all that is good. German ultraists are losing sight of this fact, and doing much to undermine the human basis of art, by dragging it down to a level of mere mechanical knowledge and executive ability. But every one with a heart feels that the expression of the human voice is the expression which we need most in every sort of music. The great instrumental players of the world are those who can best imitate its tones—who can sing on their instruments—and the best music is that which we can understand almost as readily as we can a simple ballad. A composition that demands twenty hearings before you can perceive its meaning, is—anything you like to call it, but certainly not music. You may get used to it, and even fancy it, like those unhappy creatures whom LISZT has dragooned into admiration of RICHARD WAGNER. But in the end nature will have its way, and men will come back to the old stand-point—the vocal basis of all musical art.

It is with extreme pleasure, therefore, that we notice the continued prosperity of our choral societies looking on them, as we do, as the chief instruments of progress and taste. These remarks are called forth by a very creditable performance given last night by the members of the New York Harmonic Society, at the City Assembly Rooms. The same programme has been given on former occasions, but the attendance was large and appreciative. The first part consisted of a Te Deum and Jubilate, by Mr. BRISTOW—a work of considerable merit, especially the Te Deum, in which Mr. BRISTOW has produced some fine harmonies. The second part of the programme was devoted to Dr. LOEWE'S cantata of the "Seven Sleepers," a work which seems to be popular, and which certainly has been written for the purpose of being so. The principal solo part was sustained by Miss BRAINERD, who sang sweetly, but tamely. An orchestra—too small to be efficient—assisted in an industrious manner. If the score from which they played is Dr. LOEWE'S, we recommend that Mr. BRISTOW rewrite it; if it is Mr. BRISTOW'S, we advise an appeal to somebody else—Dr. LOEWE, for instance. There is nothing intrinsically beautiful in mere noise.

The tenor singer was evidently laboring under a severe cold, and must therefore be excused for singing dreadfully out of tune. The other members of the Society were sufficient for their several rôles. The chorus was generally efficient. Altogether the performance was a credit able one to the members, and will benefit their Society.

Dramatic.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Two new pieces were produced here on Monday night with success. The first is called "Nature and Art," and is simply a localized version of Mr. CHARLES READE'S dramatic sketch, entitled "Art." It would have been decent, we submit, to have mentioned this fact in connection with the name of the adaptor, Mr. H. C. CONWAY. The plot of the piece is as old as the hills, and has been used by French and English dramatists in a number of ways. It is the familiar story of a young man who falls in love with an actress; of an actress who, at the solicitation of parents, tries to disgust her lover by assuming a coarseness which is not her nature; of a violent revulsion; of a parental alarm, and of a general reconcilement. The dialogue of the play is mostly the property of Mr. READE, and is therefore good, although at times too polished and delicate for the glaring atmosphere of the stage.

Mr. CONWAY has performed his task with ability, and has succeeded with very little labor (for very little was needed) in constructing a two-act drama of a thoroughly enjoyable character. Miss KEENE plays the heroine (sketched in the original as the famous Mrs. Oldfield) with unusual versatility and grace. She is very ably supported by Mr. BURNETT and Mr. LINGHAM, both of whom are actors of increasing abilities. By the aid of these artists, and excellent stage appointments, "Nature and Art" is rendered the most agreeable, as it is decidedly the best written piece of the season.

The second piece on the programme is a kind of burlesque called "Variety," similar to, if not identical with the piece brought out by Miss KEENE at the Metropolitan Theatre under the same name. It is intended merely as a vehicle for some excellent pictures, and is perhaps sufficient for the purpose. The tableaux are beautiful,—especially those in the Keller vein. Unfortunately there are some speaking characters, and it is not our privilege to praise what they say. We are aware that nothing is more difficult than to write good burlesque dialogue, but the effort to write anything so bad as this must indeed be prodigious. The music, and the scenery, and the costumes, carry the piece through, and for these we are willing to forget what we consider the most cruel case of literary distress we have ever wept over.

Author's Benefit.

Mr. CHARLES GAYLER, a gentleman who has done a great deal for the amusement of the public, takes a Complimentary Benefit to night at the Broadway Theatre, where his piece, the "Son of the Night," will be repeated. In addition to this attractive melodrama, Mr. BLAKE has volunteered his services for the occasion, and will play his great character in the "Last Man"—one of the most remarkable impersonations of the age.

CONCERT.—Mme. DE WILHORST takes her first complimentary benefit to-night at Niblo's Saloon. The programme is unusually attractive.

The National Quarantine Convention at Philadelphia.

This body, on Thursday afternoon, was occupied in the adoption, section by section, of the report of their Business Committee, which we have already published.

THIRD DAY.

The Convention was called to order at the usual hour to day, Dr. JAWELL in the Chair. The minutes of yesterday were then read. This operation consumed considerable time, as the report of the Business Committee, which was under discussion yesterday, had been so altered and amended as to mix things up a good deal. Several corrections were made by Mr. HASWELL, of New York; Dr. CONNIE, of Philadelphia; Dr. KEMP, of Baltimore, and others. The minutes were then adopted.

The further report of the Business Committee, received yesterday, and to be found above, was then postponed for the present.

A letter from Mr. A. N. BELL, of Brooklyn, N. Y., containing suggestions on the subject of Quarantine, was received and read. The letter states that in the writer's opinion, well persons should have immediate freedom; warehouses to be prepared for infected goods, with provisions for ventilation, &c.; anchorage ground at a safe distance from warehouses and crowded neighborhoods; also a marine hospital at a safe distance from warehouses and from crowded neighborhoods. The receipt of the letter was noted on the minutes. Another letter of somewhat similar character, was also received from Mr. D. E. W. LULEE, of New York.

The report of the Business Committee, as follows, was then taken up:

The Committee on Business respectfully present the following additional report:

They recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That no member of this Convention shall speak more than twice on the same subject, nor longer than ten minutes at each time.

They propose, as a substitute for the fourth proposition, previously reported, and which had been again referred to them, the following:

4. That the circumstances alluded to consist, in vitiated states of the atmosphere, from local causes, during seasons marked by peculiar meteorological conditions.

With the view of procuring a uniformity in quarantine regulations throughout the several parts of the United States, the assembling of another and probably several Conventions similar to the present one, will be required.

To provide for the assembling of such a Convention in 1858, it is suggested that the President, Vice President, and Secretary of this Convention, with a Committee of one member from each State represented in this Convention, be continued after our final adjournment, as Commissioners for the purpose of taking the necessary steps for the call of a Convention next year: Provided, however, that their functions shall cease immediately upon the assembling and organization of the Convention of 1858.

It is suggested also to change the name of the Convention from Quarantine to Sanitary.

The first of these resolutions being before the Convention, Mr. JOHN H. DIEHL, of this City, opposed its passage. Dr. CONDIA spoke in its favor. Dr. JONES, of New Orleans, and Dr. WIGHTMAN, of Boston, also made some remarks, after which the resolution was lost.

The substitute for the 4th proposition was amended, and passed in the following shape:

4. That the circumstances alluded to consist in vitiated states of the atmosphere, from local causes in connection with peculiar meteorological conditions.

The next proposition was passed with a transposition of a word or two, as above.

The next proposition was amended and passed as above.

On the proposition to call the Convention "Sanitary" instead of "Quarantine" quite an amusing debate arose.

Mr. COATES holding in his hand the printed report of which the word "Sanitary" was spelt "Sanatary," asked that the word be spelt with an i. He had heard of Sanitary and Sanitory, but never of Sanatory, and as the word came from Sanitas, he thought that the proper way of spelling it.

Dr. CONDIA jumped up before Dr. COATES was through and attempted to speak, but was promptly put down by the latter. When Dr. COATES had finished, Dr. CONNIE explained that it was a typographical error.

After remarks and amendments from several other gentlemen, the resolution, on motion of Dr. CONNIE, was amended so as to make the name of the Convention "Quarantine and Sanitary," which it will be in future.

The further report of the Business Committee was then taken up. The first, second, third, fourth and fifth propositions were debated by Mr. JOHN H DIEHL and others—Mr. DIEHL moving to strike them out. Dr. JONES, of New-Orleans, and others, attempted to amend them, but they were finally postponed indefinitely.

The sixth proposition, which read very awkwardly in the report, was verbally amended and passed. The seventh and eighth propositions were also slightly amended and passed.

The preambles to the different portions of the report were then adopted.

The Chair announced the following gentlemen as the Committee, to be continued after the adjournment of the Convention, to take the necessary steps to call a Convention next year: Messrs. Wight man of Mass; Biddle of Penn.; Snow of R. I.; Haswell of N. Y.; Thompson of Del.; Kemp of Md.; Dougherty of N. J.; Selden of Va.; and Lindsay of La.

The Convention then took a recess of five minutes, in order to allow the delegations to choose a representative to give in their votes in the final adoption of the entire report of the Business Committee.

On reassembling the delegations were called, as follows:

Voting Aye.—Massachusetts—Boston Board of Health, Boston Port Physician, Boston Marine Hospital, Rhode Island—Providence Board of Health, Providence Medical Association, New-York—Board of Health, New-Jersey—Newark Board of Health, Camden Medical Society, Pennsylvania—Philadelphia Board of Health, Philadelphia College of Physicians, Philadelphia County Medical Society, Delaware—Wilmington Board of Health, Medical Association of Wilmington, Maryland—Baltimore Board of Health, Baltimore Medical and Surgical Society, Baltimore Pathological society, Baltimore Board of Trade.

Voting No.—Virginia—Norfolk Board of Health, Norfolk City Councils.

Tie Vote.—Louisiana—New-Orleans Common Council, New-Orleans Board of Health.

There having been 18 votes in favor of the final adoption of the report, 2 against it, and 2 tie votes, it was accordingly declared adopted.

Dr. JONES, of New-Orleans, offered resolutions stating that the Convention recommend, in addition to the usual Quarantine regulations and establishments, the removal of all persons of limited means from each of infection and the prevention of the ingress of immigrants into ports laboring under pestilential diseases; also, the publication of authorized reports of epidemics, and that Boards of Health and other public bodies be not only obliged to declare the existence, of yellow fever and cholera in their epidemic forms but also to meet special cases which occur in localities under their control. The resolutions were adopted.

A Committee was appointed to prepare the minutes of the body, with such of the communications which had been read in as they might think proper, for publication. Resolutions of thanks to the officers and to the Business Committee were then adopted, and the body adjourned to meet at the call of the President.

Dr. SNOW, of Providence, offered the following:

Resolved, That we recommend the adoption of a complete, accurate and uniform system of registration of births and deaths in all our cities, as a necessary accompaniment of efficient sanitary measures.

The resolution was adopted.

Dr. CONNIE then announced that the time had arrived at which the body had been invited to visit the Quarantine.

Councilman HASWELL, of New-York, moved that a vote of thanks be tendered to President JEWELL. Agreed to unanimously. Other members moved that similar compliments be tendered to the various public officers and bodies of Philadelphia, for their attentions, and to the Secretaries and Business Committee of the Convention. Agreed to.

The meeting then adjourned, the members preparing themselves for the visit to the Quarantine.

[TELEGRAPHIC.]

The Delegates to the Convention partook of a handsome entertainment at the Lazaretto this afternoon, Mayor RICE, of Boston, presiding. Alderman FRANKLIN, of New-York; Dr. BARTON, of New-Orleans; Dr. SELDEN, of Norfolk; Alderman WHITMAN and Mayor RICE, of Boston, made speeches in response to toasts.

Protest of the Dutch Catholic Bishops against the Decrine of the Immaculate Conception.

PASTORAL INSTRUCTIONS OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF UTRECHT AND THE BISHOPS OF HARLEM AND DEVENTER, ON THE SUBJECT OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION.

When we heard of the great preparations that were being made for deliberating on the point of the conception at Rome, in December, 1854, we found, and with good reason, that these preparations would all be found eventually to have been little more than an outward form; but we nevertheless hoped that the prayers of many good men, so earnestly solicited by the Holy Father, for the light of the Holy Spirit, would be so heard as to succeed in turning the counsels of Ahitophel into foolishness. The unsearchable judgments of Divine Providence have otherwise ordered. Pius, alas! the weak Pius, having once thrown himself into the arms of the Jesuits, has now again lent his name and his influence to accomplish a deed deeply grieving all good men, and causing new scandal in the church.

The encyclical letter of the 8th of December, 1854, threatens the wrath of Almighty God, &c., to all who should dare to speak against, or even not to accept, the decision therein announced respecting the conception of the Virgin.

How great soever may be our respect for his Holiness as head of the Church and the centre of Catholic unity, we should dread still more the displeasure of the Almighty if we accepted such decision.

St. Paul did not threaten the people of Berea with the displeasure of Almighty God when they searched the Scriptures to see if the things which were brought before them "were so;" and St. Luke even confers upon them special honor—"These were more noble than those of Thessalonica," because they did so search. If the doctrine of the immaculate conception can be so thoroughly proved to be a doctrine of the Catholic Church as in such apostolic letter it is declared to be, there need no fear arise from such search; yea, rather ought an appeal to go forth inviting such a search, that it may be patent to the whole world that we are indebted to the care and zeal of PIUS IX. for this discovery.

Inasmuch as we have no conviction that Pius has spoken an infallible word when he declared the immaculate conception of the Blessed Virgin to be a revealed truth of the Catholic faith, we feel it to be our duty to examine the grounds upon which such declaration rests.

These grounds are said by him to be five:—

1. Holy Scripture.
2. Sacred tradition.
3. The continuous feeling of the church.
4. The wonderful unanimity of Catholic pastors and of the faithful.
5. The illustrious acts and constitutions of his predecessors in the papal chair.

After combating the above grounds, they say, in reference to the fourth, "Where is this wonderful unanimity to be found? Naturally in the answers given by the bishops to the encyclical letter addressed to them from Gaeta in 1849. The analysis justifies no such unanimity. The whole dogma of the Immaculate Conception being thus entirely new, there need be no wonder that the mode of announcing it was entirely new. Never formerly were such utterances heard from a Pope's lips; formerly it was the congregated fathers who, after previous deliberations, &c., judged and determined. But it was on this occasion one church council, although, for the eye of the world, such a coloring was attempted to be given to it. The bishops were merely mute attestators of what was proposed by Pope PIUS IX., and with too great reason may the words of the prophet be applied to them, 'Blind watchmen! they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs; they cannot bark.'"—Isaiah, lvi., 10.

Oh! how did those teachers in Israel belie their character! and how was their character trampled on by the first in rank amongst them! An open continuity and spot of shame is thus thrown on the Episcopal character and office, those functionaries having nullified their very position and work as judges of the faith.

When the successor of St. Peter gave utterance to the lie that the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception had been revealed by God, was there no Paul to withstand and gainsay him to the face? On the contrary, they winked in the lowest cajolery when one of the French Bishops looked his Holiness in the face and said: "Holy Father, thou hast not only decided the Immaculate Conception; thou hast decided thine own infallibility."

Under the fifth head of the pastoral instruction reference is made to GREGORY the Great, INNOCENT III., and INNOCENT V., CLEMENT VI., &c., to show that for fourteen centuries a doctrine was held in entire contradiction to that promulgated by PIUS IX., and it is then said:

We leave it to every unprejudiced person to decide whether we have good ground for the strictures we have made, and whether we have proved or not that the apostolic letter issued by PIUS IX., on the 8th of December, 1854, is simply a tissue (samenweefsel) of untruths, wherein the name of Scripture and sacred traditions are shamefully misapplied to exalt into a matter of faith a mere matter of feeling or subjective impression, not even based on the lowest grade of probability.

In conclusion, we solemnly declare before the whole world that the maxim "Quod semper, quod ubique, quod ad omnibus," reaches neither in teachin nor in acceptance to this dogma of the Immaculate Conception, and we say to all Catholics, "Remove not the ancient landmark which thy fathers have set." (Proverbs xxii. 28.) "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." (Gal. i., 8.) "Remember how thou hast received and heard; and hold fast." (Rev iii., 3.)

Church Matters.

This week's Observer takes the Home Missionary Society in task for its action in refusing fellowship to slaveholding Churches. It says:

The American Home Missionary Society was founded as a national institution, and it is false to the object for which it was designed, when it adopts a measure which virtually excludes from its field that large portion of the country where Slavery prevails. And besides, on the very principles of the Committee, how shall a weak church be inspirited to the exercise of that discipline which is considered as needful, if a spiritual guide and teacher is denied them?

This week's Churchman has a word for Domestic Missions, comparing them with foreign:

Our Domestic Missions have certainly a great claim upon us—a greater claim, we have always contended, than Foreign Missions can possibly have, however anxious one may be to carry out the divine injunction, to "go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Many parts of our own land present as perfect specimens of heathendom, perhaps, as are to be found in any other parts of the world; and in our very cities, where one might reasonably hope that civilization had done something to humanize, at least, the worst classes of the people, there is, as we have often taken occasion to show, a very grievous want.

A communication in the Presbyterian shows that the Foreign Missionary newspaper is a failure:

Add to all this, that our Church papers do not pay their own expenses, but draw from the resources of our several Boards thousands of dollars annually; and not only so, but that in many Sabbath Schools and congregations the subscriptions to the Foreign Missionary are paid out of the missionary collections, another and an indefinite drain upon our ecclesiastical treasury; and that the circulation of this paper fell off, during the last year of which we have a report, 2,500 copies, while both the Record and the Visitor had increased theirs; and the policy of dropping the Missionary becomes, if possible, still more evident.

AN EXTRAORDINARY HAIL STORM.—The Mobile Tribune gives an account of a singular hail storm at Eastport, on the Warrior River, Ala., on the 7th inst. The morning was clear and pleasant, but at 10 o'clock thunder was heard in the distance; heavy clouds were seen immediately after, followed by a cold northwest wind, and heavy drops of rain for about ten minutes. Then came hail, of which the Tribune says:

"For twenty minutes hail stones, measuring from one to two and a half inches in diameter, fell thick and fast. The heavens were full of descending aerolites. The river was lashed into fury—on its surface spray and foam were alone visible: while on either side limbs and leaves were falling from the trees; the ground was white and literally covered with enormous sized hail stones, which were rebounding from the earth and dancing about in wild confusion. After the storm passed over, the sun again burst forth in all its glory; but the warmth of its rays failed to take the keen chill from the atmosphere during the remainder of the day.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

A RARE CHANCE FOR A SPECULATION.—4,000 ACRES OF LAND FOR SALE FOR CASH AND DRY-GOODS.—These are splendid grazing and farming lands, situated in Laporte County, Ida. Laporte County is the best in the State, and Laporte, the county seat, has a population of about 8,000. These lands are only about 13 miles south of Don Prairie, where land is now worth from $75 to $150 per acre. At the price which these lands will now be sold, the purchaser cannot fail to realize a fortune on the advance which must inevitably take place. Two important lines of railroad run through these lands. Address C. R M., care of S. B. CRITTENDEN & CO., Park-place, New-York.

$30,000.—THE ADVERTISER HAS GOOD productive real estate, well situated, which will rapidly increase in value, amounting to $50,000; the property is first class, and in perfect order, which he would dispose of at its cash value for good stocks or bonds, or may profitable wholesale business. Parties retiring and wishing to invest their means safely, this is worthy of notice; or would purchase the interest of a partner retiring, and continue the business if mutually agreeable; best of reference can be given; none but principals treated with. Address, giving full particulars, BARTON, Box No. 3,551 Post-Office.

FOR SALE—THE FOUNDRY ESTABLISHment in Peekskill, formerly occupied by Taylor & Flagler. A safe and profitable business will be disposed of with the property. For particulars, apply on the premises, or at No. 310 Water-st., New-York.

THE NEW POLICE COMMISSIONERS—NO MORE POLICEMEN SENT TO STATEN ISLAND.—The new Police Commissioners hold private meetings daily at President DRAPER'S office, corner of Pine and William streets. At their meeting yesterday they considered further the procurement of a permanent and suitable office, but came to no definite conclusion. They had under consideration, also, a new code of rules and regulations, and some other subjects of less importance, but did not, so far as ascertained, make any additional appointments. Superintendent TALLMADGE did not send any more policemen to Staten Island, but he will do so, we understand, should circumstances require. It was rumored about the City Hall, yesterday morning, that several of the Police Captains had complied with an order from the New Superintendent to deliver their Station-houses over to the jurisdiction of the new Commissioners. Up to a late hour yesterday no such order had been issued, and it is understood that not any of the Captains will comply with any such order, but will act as at present until the Police difficulty is legally and finally settled.

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE BILL.—The Young Men's Democratic Union Club of this City, had a very interesting meeting last evening, at their Hall in Broome-street. After the transaction of the regular business, WM. J. ROSS, Esq., moved that a Committee be appointed by the Chair to draft resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the Club, in relation to the Acts lately passed by our State Legislature, particularly designating the Metropolitan Police Bill.

Mr. ROSS sustained his motion forcibly and zealously, and it was unanimously adopted. The President, SPENCER W. CONE, thereupon appointed Messrs. ROSS, CARR, and HARRISON, a Committee to report at a special meeting of the Club, to be held at the same place on Monday evening next, and the Club, amid much enthusiasm, adjourned to meet again as appointed.

THE NEW QUARANTINE BUILDINGS.—The bids for building the new edifices for the use of the quarantine at Seguine's Point were all in on Wednesday, and yesterday they were opened at the office of the Commissioners. There was a large number of proposals, and parties interested in the decision were present in strong force. The contract for building a high board fence around the premises, an area of about six acres, was awarded to JAMES ANKATELL. That for the erection of three wooden hospital buildings, 25 by 75 feet, of one-story, was awarded to DONSON & LEWIE. Bids for the work of building a Pier in the form of an L, 150 feet long, with a 75 feet front, will be received up to 12 o'clock Monday. The four buoys, to mark the limits of the quarantine anchorage, have been purchased, and will be placed in position in a few days.

SALE OF THE LATE REV. DR. SCHROEDER'S LIBRARY.—The library of Rev. Dr. SCHROEDER, recently deceased, was sold, on Tuesday, at auction by Messrs. BANGS BROTHERS. The Library being an extensive one, and containing a large number of very choice and learned works, there was a numerous attendance at the sale and bidding spirited. Walton's London Polyglott Bible, with an appendix and lexicon the latter of which is given in nine languages, sold for the largest price, it being sold for $132. One of the same editions was not long since sold at auction in London for $350. The Babylonian Talmud, in 12 volumes folio, printed in Venice in 1520, sold for $2 50 a volume. A manuscript copy of the Koran in the Arabic language was knocked down for $2 25. Buxtorf Thesaurus Ecclesiasticus, in two volumes, was sold at $7 a volume. Bomberg's Rabbinical Bible, an old work, in four volumes, printed in Venice, from the library of of the Earl of OXFORD, brought $3 a volume only. Combined with a lot of Chinese books was one in a language which Professor BUSH, who was present, was unable to indicate. The entire lot sold at 38 cents each. Altogether, the proceeds of the sale came up to expectation. Among the principal bidders were Dr. COGGSWELL, of the Astor Library, Dr. CRUSE, of the Union Theological Library, and the second-hand book-seller at the corner of Fulton and Nassau streets.

A HUMANE HACK-DRIVER FINDS APPRECIATION AND REWARD.—JOHN G. STARR, who served as an officer in the Nicaraguan army under Col. LOCKRIDGE, and was wounded in the last attack on Castillo, died from the effects of his wounds on the 27th ult., at Savannah, Ga., his former place of residence. Capt. STARR arrived in New-York on the Tennessee, on her last trip. Like a large number of his former companions in arms in Gen. WALKER's service, who came on with him, he landed in this City without money, without decent clothes, and without relatives or friends upon whom he could call. Added to this, he was suffering much from the wounds he had received. A hack-driver, Mr. J. A. VANDYKE, residing at No. 9 North Moore-street, seeing his destitute and disabled condition, took him to his own house, and after several days secured him a passage in a steamer to Savannah, Ga., where his parents resided. Capt. STARR lived but a few days after his arrival among his friends. Mr. VANDYKE yesterday received from the friends of the deceased a silver pitcher and salver, valued at $150. On the pitcher was the following inscription:

"To J. A. VANDYKE, from the relatives of the late JOHN G. STARR, of Savannah, Ga., an officer of the Nicaraguan army, in grateful memory of his kindness to him on arriving sick and wounded at New-York, April 16, 1857."

In addition to the above, a douceur of $150 in money was sent to Mr. VANDYKE.

THE TROUBLE AT THE BROADWAY ARCADE.—The present proprietors, or present managers, of the Broadway Arcade, are in trouble with each other, out of which grew, not long ago, a charge of assault and battery, and yesterday the matter was further involved by a charge of false pretences preferred against one of the parties. The affair will be investigated before Justice OSBORNE.

DEDICATION OF A NEW BETHEL SHIP.—The new Bethel ship, John Wesley, moored at the pier between Rector and Albany streets, North River, was dedicated to the divine service at 3 o'clock P. M., on Tuesday. The announcement that Bishop SIMPSON would preach the dedication sermon called together a large audience, which filled the little chapel to overflowing. The text was taken from the 12th chapter of Daniel, 4th verse: "And many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

A collection amounting to $2,700 was taken up.

The enterprise was started twelve years ago, and was the beginning of the mission to Scandinavian seamen in the port of New-York. There are now thirty missionaries preaching in the Scandinavian tongue in this country, who are the fruits of this mission, and five in Europe. The new vessel cost $40,000, and is beautifully fitted up. $4,000 only are required to free the concern from debt, and an earnest appeal is made for present aid. Rev. O. J. ————, on Board, and Rev. D. TERRY, No. 199 Mulberry-street, receive subscriptions.

☞ Yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, a belated passenger running after one of the Fulton Ferry-boats just as it was leaving the wharf on the Brooklyn side, miscalculating the distance, jumped into the river, instead of landing on the deck of the boat. A ladder was immediately lowered by the hands on the dock, and the unfortunate individual, after a little floundering about, mounted it and stood on dry land again, a wetter and a wiser man.

☞ ARREST OF A FUGITIVE.—A telegraphic dispatch was received at the Office of the Chief of Police, on Thursday evening, stating that a man named JAMES HEALY, had absconded from Boston, taking with him a considerable amount of jewelry, belonging to the firm of BALL, JONES & SPIEGEL, of that city, in whose employ he had served as porter. The dispatch gave a description of the fugitive, and added, that it was believed he had fled to New-York, in order to take passage to California. Officers BOWYER and FARLEY, of the Reserve Corps, were detailed to hunt him up, and in less than an hour afterwards they brought him captive to the City Hall, having found him in a lodging-house in Grand-street. A very valuable gold watch and some other articles of jewelry, amounting, in value, to several hundred dollars, were found with him. But a little while before he had given the watch to a friend to get it pawned. HEALY was yesterday taken before Justice OSBORNE. He will be sent back to Boston today, in charge of an officer from that city.

STEALING FROM HIS EMPLOYERS.—A young man named HENRY SIMON was examined yesterday, at the Lower Police Court, by Justice CONNOLLY, and committed for trial on a charge of stealing from TIFFANY, YOUNG & CO., Broadway jewelers, a considerable quantity of jewelry. SIMON was in the employ of TIFFANY, YOUNG & CO. about a year, but left a few weeks since because an application from him for increased pay was not complied with. He went to Boston, where he acted in a manner that led to his arrest by Deputy Chief HAM, of that city. On searching him a suspicious amount of jewelry was found in his possession, and in his pockets were found a number of the cards of the firm whose employ he had just left. SIMON was detained, and a telegraphic dispatch sent to this City, whereupon Officer BOWYER repaired to Boston and brought SIMON back in custody. Mr. BOWYER repaired to SIMON's lodgings in Houston-street, in this City, and he there found a great many small articles of jewelry, some pieces of which had been melted and defaced to prevent identity. SIMON does not deny his guilt. His honesty had not been for a moment doubted by his employers.

DIED OF HIS INJURIES.—An inquest was held yesterday, by Coroner GAMBLE, at No. 141 Worth-street, upon the body of RICHARD FITZGERALD, a laboring man, who came to his death from injuries received on Tuesday by falling from one of the upper stories of the building No. 5 Spruce street. Deceased was a native of Ireland and 26 years of age.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BARING BURGLARY.—A German, named George Smith, aged 25 years, was brought before Justice WOOD, at the Essex Market Police Court yesterday morning, and committed on a charge of burglary. It appears that about 9 o'clock Thursday evening, Smith went to the jewelry store of Lewis Winterhaner, No. 115 Division-street, and fastening the door on the outside with a rope, so as to delay pursuit by those within, thrust his hand in through the show-window, and grabbed a gold watch and locket, valued at $50, with which he made rapidly away. The act was seen by a young man named Samuel Doe, who gave chase, crying "stop thief," as he ran. Officer Lafarge, of the Tenth Police District, soon joined in the chase, and after a long run, succeeded in overhauling Smith. The watch and locket was afterwards found in an alley-way in Hester-street, where the thief had thrown them in his flight.

ARREST OF A FEMALE ON A CHARGE OF ROBBERY.—Ida Cohen, keeper of a cigar store in the Bowery, was committed to prison yesterday by Justice WOOD, on a charge of robbing John Holt of a gold watch and chain, valued at $150. Holt alleges that Ida enticed him into a room in the rear of her cigar store, and there contrived to steal the property. The accused denies the theft.

THROWING GARBAGE IN THE STREET.—A brisk war is raging against parties guilty of violating the Corporation ordinance relative to throwing garbage, &c., in the streets. Three such were fined yesterday by Justice WOOD. They were arrested by the Tenth Ward Police.

DEAD INFANTS.—A dead infant was found yesterday morning in a cigar box at the foot of Twenty-first-street, East River.

The body of an infant was found Thursday night in a sink at the rear of No. 80 Oliver-street, by some night scavengers.

PARTIAL DEAFNESS AND DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR.—Dr. HARTLEY, Principal and Proprietor of the Philadelphia Ear Institution, is now in New-York, and generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the Ear, without charge until cured, thereby proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled by paying self-styled nurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of still more serious evils, by permitting the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskilful hands. Dr. H. may here state that he has no connection whatever with any person advertising to cure deafness. Neither has he given permission for the publication of a certificate, purporting to emanate from him, and cannot, therefore, be responsible for any alarming consequences resulting from re-baffled and desperation. The loss of money may not be material to some persons, but the deprivation of one of the most important of the senses ought to be regarded and treated with more than ordinary solicitude. Deafness, noise in the head, and all disagreeable discharges from the ear speedily and permanently removed, without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed where malformation does not exist. Thirteen years' close and almost undivided attention to this branch of special practice has enabled him to reduce his treatment to such a degree of success as to find the most confirmed and obstinate cases yield by a steady attention to the means prescribed. The destruction by fire of the Institution of which Dr. HARTLEY was the head having temporarily released him from his duties in Philadelphia, he will receive calls during each morning at No. 141 Ninth-street, third door east of Broadway.

LONG ISLAND.

THE LOST MR. HENDRICKSON.—Mysterious disappearances have been frequent from the day on which Moses looked out upon the promised land and was seen no more, down to the last remarkable case of Mr. HENRY HENDRICKSON, published in the TIMES of yesterday. Perhaps more frequent within the past few weeks than for a long time before. And yet the interest in this, the last known when we write, is as deep as when the first case of recent date startled the public ear. "She left her home, to return again at dark, and was never seen again," may be read a thousand times, and the same sad thoughts arise after each repetition.

An instinctive horror of such a fate—no friend to know how, when or where we died, and a strong desire to know what is not known—sets us to wondering what the circumstances were. We theorize and speculate, only to theorize and speculate again. Our theories and speculations produce no knowledge of facts in the case, and the mystery remains as impenetrable as before. The disappearance of Mr. HENDRICKSON is such a case. He resided in Brooklyn; left his home more than a week ago for Huntington, West Hills, some thirty-five miles distant, on Long Island, where he arrived the same day that he left home; he there received payment of a debt, amounting to about $1,000; while there he purchased five cows and three calves; driving his purchase before him, he commenced his journey home; remained at Jericho all the night of the 8th of May; left Jericho on the following morning with his stock, and passed the toll gate after leaving Jamaica at about 12 o'clock, with a boy who was assisting him to drive his cows and calves; they all proceeded on the Williamsburg road, and since that time neither calves nor cows, boy nor man have been seen or heard from, although his friends and relatives in Brooklyn have been doing their utmost to find trace of him. Such a disappearance is strange, beyond measure. The idea that he could have taken his purchase to some distant place to sell again, is not entertained by those who are familiar with him. They utterly repudiate the idea that he would have remained, voluntarily, so long from the knowledge of his family, and entertain the impression that he has been murdered, while on that wood-lined road to Williamsburg. The statement of the toll-keeper to the effect that soon after Mr. HENDRICKSON passed his gate, a man followed him, who stopped and inquired whether such a person and traveled that way, strengthens their impression that he has met with violence. If so, where is the boy? Whose boy was he? Has he been murdered too? Had the boy no home, where his absence would create alarm? This very remarkable case has been known generally for several days, and yet we have not heard that any one has lost a boy, who could with probability be supposed to have been with Mr. HENDRICKSON when last seen. And yet if the boy were alive, and anything unusual had occurred that he had knowledge of, he would surely have spoken of it to some one. Then the five cows and three calves. Where are they? Even if slaughtered, their spotted skins and absent horns might, ere this, have afforded some clue. Then, again, what did Mr. HENDRICKSON probably intend to do with the cows and calves? Was he likely to have purchased them to take home? His friends should know. Altogether, setting aside the idea that he purchased them to sell again in some distant market, his is the most remarkable of all the mysterious disappearances that have recently been known.

Perhaps the following may aid in solving the mystery:

"One Hundred Dollars Reward offered for the body of HENRY HENDRICKSON, supposed to have been murdered on the Williamsburg Road; when last seen it was East from the first toll-gate from the Jamaica Road, May 8, 1857, about 1 o'clock P. M., driving five cows with three calves. A boy was seen with him; if he will come forward and state all he knows, he will be suitably rewarded.

Also, $50 reward will be paid for the five cows missing at the same time, two without horns with calves, one spotted, the other red; one with horns, white stripe on the back, color brown, with a calf; the other two without calves, one black and the other red, with some white spots.

If these cows have been purchased by any person or persons, if they will give such information that will lead to the identity of the person or persons selling the same, a suitable reward will be paid for the same by the subscriber. A. W. HENDRICKSON,
Corner of Bridge and Plymouth streets.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—May 15.

Before Judge Birdseye.

SUIT TO RECOVER POSSESSION OF A CHILD.

Dwight H. Olmstead vs. Maria Olmstead and Caroline L. Randall.—Plaintiff in 1855 married respondent, Maria, who is a daughter of the other respondent in this action. About a year after their marriage, and while the parties to this suit were boarding together, the mother and wife abandoned the husband, and took up lodgings elsewhere. The fruit of this marriage was one child, now about 14 months old. The present action is brought by the father to recover possession of the child. From the testimony, it appears that one cause of contention was the fact that the husband's expenses were larger than his salary, and another that the wife being possessed of some property put it in possession of her mother before the marriage ceremony was performed. One witness swore that the mother had told her frequently that she desired a separation and intended to have it; and spoke in derogatory terms of the husband; also that he did not respect her, but that another gentlemen did—he loved Maria and she intended to have it fixed so that they could be married.

Medical testimony was introduced to show that to remove the child from a mother's care at the present time would endanger its life. Dr. Rowland testified that he had been practicing obstetrics for thirty three years. In all cases he advised children to be nursed past the second Summer; it would be better to nurse them for two years; his own were nursed two and a half years.

The papers in the case were all submitted to the Court. Decision reserved.

FRIDAY, May 15—P. M.

The steamship Asia arrived at this port early this morning, from Liverpool Saturday, May 2. The Money and general market accounts are one week later. The former continued to show an active demand at very full rates of interest in London and in the Continental cities. The English Funds are slightly lower, while the French Bourse is reported depressed; the 3 ₰ cent. Rente 68.70, and Credit Mobilier shares 1,280 francs. The high price for Money also continues to affect unfavorably the Cotton trade at Liverpool and Manchester, and the raw material is a sixteenth of a penny lower on the finer, and an eighth of a penny on the lower grades, with sales of 45,440 bales, mostly to the trade. On the other hand, the Grain market is rapidly recovering from the late depression, and an advance of 4d. the bushel on Wheat, 1s. the bbl. on Flour, and 2s.@2s. 6d. the quarter on Corn, was established on the previous week's sales at Liverpool; the same feeling obtaining in London. Indian Corn had been done as high as 37s. for White, and 34s. 3d.@35s. for Yellow and mixed parcels. Extra brands of Flour were in reqnest in both markets. In American Stocks, the business was light. Mr. SATTERTHWAITE remarks:

"The market for American Securities in London has been dull and inactive during the past week, and where sales have been effected they have been done at a slight decline. In the present condition of the money market buyers are scarce, and to effect sales a reduction in price has to be submitted to. We note a few purchases of Illinois Shares in small amounts at our former quotations."

The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 25th of April gives the following results, when compared with the previous week:

Public deposits	£5,311,615	Decrease £460,241
Other deposits	9,450,494	Decrease 1,212,916
Rest	3,263,516	Increase 9,829
Government securities	11,333,126	Unchanged.
Other securities	17,729,004	Decrease 675,557
Notes unemployed	3,519,830	Decrease 129,390

The amount of notes in circulation is £19,788,655, being an increase of £53,910, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £9,555,255, showing a decrease of £50,514, when compared with the preceding return.

The latest report of the London Money Market is the following from the Times of Saturday morning, May 2. The day before was a holiday on the Stock Exchange, on account of the shutting of transfers at the Bank of England:

"The demand for money in the discount market and at the Bank continues without the slightest abatement. The requirements to-day are supposed to have been partly in preparation for the heavy liabilities to be met on Monday, the 4th, and partly to pay for a considerable portion of the silver to be taken by the Pera to India and China, which, although below the amounts shipped by the previous mails, will still be about £540,000. Generally, however, the feeling in the city to-day seemed rather less unfavorable. The arrival of the Magdalena from Mexico and the West Indies, with £530,000, exercised a satisfactory influence, and the letters from Paris, notwithstanding a further fall on the Bourse, were in a rather more confident tone. From Vienna the accounts describe almost a panic with regard to the shares of new undertakings with which the market has been flooded, but there does not at present seem to be any apprehension of irretrievable mischief in that quarter. During the coming week the movements in the various European money markets will depend in a considerable degree on the reports of the progress of the silk worm in Italy, Spain and France, and also on the question whether the late severe weather has been found to have inflicted damage on the grain or other crops."

The English Board of Trade returns for the month of March, and for the first three months of 1857, show an Export trade as follows, by comparison with the corresponding period of the previous two years:

	For the month.	For three months.
1855	£4,311,395	£15,848,511
1856	9,448,570	28,149,103
1857	10,456,548	28,827,493

Our own Stock and Money markets were very quiet to day. The business done at the Board of Brokers was moderate at both sessions, and prices, with the exception of two or three of the Railroads, much the same as yesterday. On the first call of the list as much as 110 ₰ cent. was paid for Illinois Central Stock, but after the deliveries of the day were provided for the bids declined to 139@138; the lowest registered sale, 139 Cleveland and Pittsburg shares advanced to 48¼ ₰ cent. from 44 day before yesterday, and that price bid for 500 shares at the close. Illinois Central Bonds rose to par again. California Sevens to 57 ₰ cent. Other State Stocks dull. No change in Money rates or the general ease of supply noticed yesterday. The Bremen packet ste

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH TERRITORY, Thursday, March 5, 1857.

I embrace an opportunity of sending a communication to the States by trusty private hands, to give you such description as I am able of the present state of affairs in "Zion," premising, however, that it is utterly impossible to convey to the distant reader anything like an adequate idea of our precarious and suffering condition here, in consequence of the failure of our Government to afford us the simplest protection of law. You have long been aware, I suppose, that letters sent from here by mail are subjected to careful scrutiny by Mormon agents after they are sealed and deposited in the Post-Office. The object of this proceeding is to prevent the departure from the Territory of any communications with the outward world by which the true condition of affairs in Mormondom may become known; and to accomplish this end there is no crime which BRIGHAM YOUNG and his chosen instruments would hesitate to commit. Even the passing traveler, who is [illegible] bearing such letters, is pretty sure of [illegible] waylaid and robbed of his documents and valuables; and consequently there are few leaving this place who are bold enough to attempt the concealment of Anti-Mormon letters about their persons or baggage. You can readily conceive then, what a Godsend to us is so safe an opportunity as that I now embrace, of sending you a few lines.

Surely, our friends at the East are misinformed in relation to the condition of the vast multitude of their fellow-citizens dwelling upon these distant plains,—or else the stories of our wrongs which have occasionally reached you, must have been received as impossible dreams. On no other hypothesis can we account for your supineness. When we who have experienced the horrible reality of Mormon despotism, take a retrospect of the lawlessness and crime which have run riot here for a number of years, without the least attempt by the Federal Government to correct or check it, we can scarcely avoid the conclusion that you have deliberately determined to leave us unaided or unsuccored, to work out our own salvation. If it be so, for Heaven's sake let us know that,—and, Herculean as is the task, we will, at least attempt to throw off the yoke of oppression. If we succeed, we have our reward; and if we fail, we can be in no worse condition than that to which we have so long submitted with such patience as we could muster to our aid.

As early as 1851 the calendar of Mormon crime and oppression opened here, since when we have witnessed and endured a constant succession of outrages against religion, decency, property and life, until we have become as weary in the recital of them as we have been disgusted and pained; still the public in the States have never heard a hundredth part of the long, black list. It is well known that Judges BRANDEBERRY and BROCKUS, and the Secretary of State, HARRIS, were driven from the Territory years ago, and that nearly every other Federal officer sent out here has been compelled to resign and flee the country within two years after reaching it. So, too, quiet unoffending private citizens have been robbed and driven from their homes at Salt Lake, time and again, by large bodies of armed men, who set everything like law at defiance while claiming to be its officers, and who, in the enforcement of their indiscriminate exactions of black mail, never hesitated to sacrifice even human life. I refer, for example, to the marauding expedition to Forts Bridger and Gruvenor, and the murder of WM. WALKER in August, 1853. In that exploit of brigandism, disguised under the forms of law, thousands of dollars in money and property were collected as booty to enrich the coffers of the Mormon Church, and reward the unscrupulous cut-throats who played leading parts in the bloody drama.

The utter inadequacy of the civil law to reach such cases as these, and to punish such crimes when perpetrated by procurement or connivance of the heads of the Mormon Church, was most forcibly exemplified in the trial of the murderers of the lamented Captain GUNNISON and his command. There can be no shadow of doubt that their massacre was incited and abetted by BRIGHAM YOUNG and his crew, who, through the agency of Mormon juries, found no difficulty in securing the murderers the immunity from punishment which they had guaranteed in advance of the crime. For a more detailed account of this affair I refer to Judge DRUMMOND, who has been driven from among us, and who, I trust, is now in safety in the States. In the brief space of this letter I can refer to but few of the additional outrages and crimes perpetrated by the Mormons, encouraged and emboldened by the complete success and impunity with which they have usurped all power, and centralized the civil law, and by the apathy and indifference with which their conduct has been viewed by the General Government. Prominent among the most recent of these occurrences stands the breaking up and dispersion of the U. S. Court by a body of armed men, creatures of BRIGHAM YOUNG and the Priesthood, and commonly known here as the "Danites." I proceed with a statement of the facts:

The U. S. District Court for Utah commenced its session on Monday, the 9th of February, Judge STILES, a seceding Mormon, occupying the bench. The U. S. District-Attorney is HOSEA STOUT, an appointee, of course, of the Government at Washington, and a noted member of the Danite Band. Upon the opening of the Court he rose and stated that no Grand Jury would be impanneled, as there were no cases to be presented worthy of its notice! Thus, by one stroke of masterly policy, administered by an officer of the law and in the name of its majesty, were covered up a long catalogue of heinous offences, including murders, robberies and arsons, which had been committed since the last preceding term of the Court. A Petit Jury was then summoned and sworn, but every imaginable impediment that could be thrown in their way to obstruct the current of justice when running counter to the edicts of the Priesthood, were availed of. All the members of the bar are Mormons, except Mr. DAVID H. BURR, United States Surveyor-General, and Dr. HURT, an officer of the United States Indian Department. These gentlemen were admitted by Chief Justice KINNEY about a year ago in order to attend to some controversies connected with their official positions, and to an important case that was then tried, and which involved a large amount of property belonging to a citizen who was not a Mormon. They have not practiced, however, since then, until the present term of the Court, when they agreed to do so at the earnest solicitation of Mr. T. S. WILLIAMS, who had some very interesting cases to prosecute.

It is contended by the Mormons that the United States Court has no cognizance of any but United States cases, and that all offences committed in the Territory, and all Territorial suits, must be tried before the Territorial Courts and by the Territorial laws. Starting upon this pretext, while the Court was in progress on the 12th ult. the Mormon members of the Bar and others of the Danite band inveigled Judge STILES into a private room, locked the door, barred the windows, and then with revolvers at his head and knives within an inch of his throat, forced him to promise to uphold them in whatever they did, and to "sustain the laws of Utah!" Thus overpowered, threatened and intimidated, Judge STILES yielded, dismissed the Jury and adjourned the Court, directing the Crier to pronounce it adjourned sine die. The Crier accordingly announced the Court adjourned sine die, but also stated that it would meet the next day for the purpose of transacting any Territorial business that might be brought before it. The Judge, at the bidding of the Danites, notified the U. S. Marshal, Mr. DODSON, that after that day his presence would not be required in the Court,—that as Territorial business was to be transacted, the Territorial Marshal would, with such bailiffs and officers as he might appoint to assist him, be considered the officers of the Court, and that an account of the expenses of the Court would be kept by the Territorial Marshal, and rendered to the United States Marshal for payment. The Mormons feared that the United States Marshal—who is a "Gentile"—would interfere with the execution of their plans, and therefore adopted this method of getting rid of him, and substituting the Mormon Territorial Marshal in his place. Judge STILES, on being asked by a Gentile, directly after the adjournment of the Court, whether it was possible that he could imagine his proceedings and decisions correct and just, frankly acknowledged that he knew they were neither, and added: "You understand my position with this people. I cannot do otherwise!"

Judge STILES reopened the Court the next day, the 13th of February, in pursuance of the notice given, and proceeded to business. The Territorial Marshal, ALEXANDER MCKAY, occupied the proper station of the United States Marshal, thus giving the Court an entirely Mormon aspect, with Mr. BURR as the only Gentile within the Bar. The journal of the preceding day was then read. Finding that it recorded the Court as adjourned "until to-morrow," Mr. BURR asked if the record was correct. Judge STILES replied that the crier had misunderstood his order, and that instead of adjourning the Court sine die, he should have adjourned it until the next morning,—that he had adjourned the Court "sine die" only as related to United States business, and that it was still in session on Territorial business. He also remarked that as the Legislature was a creature of the same power as that which created the Court, they were co-ordinate; and that in all the cases to be tried before him he should be governed by the laws of the Territory in preference to all others, and that he would have recourse to other laws only when the enactments of the Territorial Legislature could not be made to apply to the case. Mr. BURR then asked him if he understood him to say that he would be guided by the laws of the Territory in preference to the laws of the United States. Before any reply could be made, an attorney named FERGUSON, jumped up and commenced a most foul and abusive attack upon Mr. BURR, exhausting the stock of even Mormon billingsgate in his malignant tirade. He then turned to the Judge, and told him that if he dared to decide against their laws he could sit on that Bench no longer, and that the court-room would be cleared d—d quick!" The District-Attorney followed in a violent harangue, in which he accused Mr. BURR of trying to set aside the Mormon laws, and said that the Mormons had submitted to Gentile interference long enough, that they were now going to have their own way, and had good authority for what they did, as well as safe backers. The room was filled at the time with armed ruffians, who constituted the "backers" alluded to. As soon as Mr. BURR and Mr. T. S. WILLIAMS got up to reply, the Territorial Marshal ordered them peremptorily to stop; and immediately the whole audience sprang to their feet, and the Danite murderers, who filled the Court, threw off their coats, brandished their knives and revolvers, and created so great confusion that the Judge was obliged to adjourn the Court at once.

The next morning, which was Saturday, the Court opened amid intense excitement. The whole Mormon popnlace were armed, and had been inflamed to such a degree by the incendiary speeches of FERGUSON, STOUT and others that the least pretence would have been availed of to massacre every Gentile in the place. The names of Messrs. BURR and WILLIAMS were stricken from the list of attorneys, and the Court immediately adjourned sine die. Thus closed the last term of the United States Court that can ever be held in this Territory until the Government establishes its supremacy by a vigorous exertion of physical force. What a disgraceful spectacle is here presented to the world! A Judge, bearing the sacred ermine, laid upon his shoulders by the Government of the United States, in well-founded fear for his life is compelled to yield to the will of a frenzied and blood thirsty rabble; a United States Court is dissolved and dispersed by a mob of armed desperadoes; an immense territory is left defenceless, lawless, and subject to the caprices of a cruel and vindictive tyrant; and American citizens, in the very heart of their own country, are left as entirely unprotected as though in the power of savage tribes, and in hourly danger of being massacred.

There can be no doubt that FERGUSON, STOUT, and their Danite hullies, were prompted to the conduct thus related by BRIGHAM YOUNG—for when Judge STILES went to the latter as Governor, and asked him if he would sustain him in the execution of his duties and the enforcement of the laws, he replied that he would not interfere, and would "hold the boys back no longer," but was going to let them have their own way, for the Court had given him too much trouble already. Sullen threats of bloody vengeance against the United States Surveyor General and the Indian Agents (Messrs. BURR and HURT) are heard all over the city. In one of the Ward meetings last night it was proposed by the notorious FERGUSON to seize the former and ride him on a rail, until he should be permanently maimed in a painful and humiliating manner. The fiendish proposition was acceded to with a prolonged and universal "Amen!" But this letter is already so long that I must defer other interesting facts for another chapter.

UTAH.

STATE ARSENALS.—No steps have yet been taken to select a site for the new arsenal in this City, in place of the old one to be sold on or before the 10th day of June next, pursuant to an act passed at the late session of the Legislature; nor has it been decided thus far whether or not the ground on which the present arsenal stands, at Sixty-third street, shall be purchased for the purposes of the Central Park. The Commissioners of the Land Office will be in town in a few days, when these and similar topics are likely to receive attention. The decision respecting the purchase of this property must be made speedily, as the privilege only stands to the first day of June.

Meantime, in view of the operation of the new act, the city of Buffalo has donated to the State a site for an arsenal at that point, valued at $50,000. It is believed that Brooklyn and Albany will also follow suit in granting land for this purpose.

☞ The General Synod of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America will meet on the 20th inst. in the Jane-street Associate Reformed Church in this City. The Basis of Union submitted by the Associate Synod last year, and sent down in overture to the various Presbyteries will be considered. Other matters of interest too are expected to come before the Synod.

HIGHLY INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

Governorship of Utah—Arrival of Judge Drummond—Brigham Young's Reported Flight—Illness of Senator Butler, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, May 17.

Much interest is excited here by the arrival of Hon. W. W. DRUMMOND, late Judge of Utah Territory, who is now a guest of Brown's Hotel. The Judge, who is the "observed of all observers," is, in his personal appearance, very different from what the community have generally conceived. In height he is not quite six feet tall. He is well built, possessing evidently a good constitution, with a iron will and a fixed determination of purpose. I find that he is a Scotch-Irish genealogy; reared and educated in the State of Virginia. He removed to Illinois 19 years since, and is now in his 37th year.

To-day it seems to be well understood that Judge DRUMMOND will be tendered the office of Governor of Utah, in case Major MCCULLOCH declines, and I have it from the Judge himself that he will accept upon condition that Gen. HARNEY is sent into that country with a force sufficient to enable the officers to enforce the laws. In case Gen. HARNEY and Judge DRUMMOND go to Utah backed by the Government, the Mormons will yield or be compelled to find refuge in another country. They are both cautious but bold men

The best informed here in regard to Utah affairs do not credit the story of BRIGHAM YOUNG's flight from Great Salt Lake. The rumor probably was started by YOUNG himself for the purpose of allaying anticipated excitement here in regard to recent transactions in Mormondom, and so to prevent the departure of an expedition against him until it shall be too late to attempt it this year.

A letter from a Federal officer at Salt Lake City, dated March 5, states that ARAPEEN, the Pan-Utah Indian Chief, had been in, and stated that BRIGHAM YOUNG was urging him to accompany him in an expedition which he was about to make somewhere to the North. Nobody seemed to know the object of the expedition, although ARAPEEN indicated that YOUNG's intentions were hostile to the Gentile whites, and expressed his unwillingness to join it.

It was generally known in Salt Lake that several of their leaders, including YOUNG, contemplated a trip somewhere during the month of April, taking with them some three hundred men. One rumor was that they intended to take possession of Bitter Root Valley, in Washington Territory. Another rumor, and the more probable one is, that they were going into Indian country, to endeavor to excite the natives to join them in resisting anticipated attacks from United States troops. The vague report that YOUNG had fled the Territory probably grew out of these facts.

It is understood here that TURNER NELSON has declined the appointment of Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Utah. He has been telegraphed to notify the Department immediately if this is the fact, as it is desired to fill the place as early as possible.

I cannot learn that the Administration has definitely determined to send a force to Utah this season. Certainly no troops have yet been ordered to that service, and unless they can start by from the 1st to the 10th of June, when the grass on the plains is fresh it will be impossible for a large body of cavalry to move at all before another year. I fear there is an unfortunate disposition here to temporize with this troublesome question, and postpone the inevitable issue.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Sunday, May 17.

The Navy Department is confident of the practicability of the Darien Ship Canal.

Dr. GALE has resigned his office as Examiner in the Patent Office, he having been denounced for an alleged connection in the School for Blacks. Four other examiners are to be removed for political cause.

Gen. CASE has now been closeted at his house for two days on Central American affairs—New-Granada and Nicaragua occupying his attention. Mr. SOULE, when here, had a long interview with Gen. CASE and the President in regard to the policy of our Government towards Nicaragua and British interference. Mr. SOULE is said to have embarked deeply in the affairs of Nicaragua, and it is well known that Mr. SLATTER, of New-Orleans, a very wealthy man, who is with Mr. SOULE, has advanced large sums of money for the cause of WALKER. There is no foundation whatever for the rumor brought by the Prometheus from Havana, that Gen. WALKER had evacuated Rivas, and was on board a British ship-of-war, at San Juan del Sur. The rumor is said to have emanated from Governor General CONCHA, and is believed here to be only "a weak invention of the enemy."

Gov. FLOYD, the Secretary of War, has been invited to visit West Point next June, and attend the examination of the cadets at the Military Academy, and has accepted the invitation.

The steam Revenue cutter bids fair to give Secretary CONE much trouble.

It is believed in some quarters that there is no truth in the report of the flight of BRIGHAM YOUNG.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Saturday, May 16.

Official dispatches recently received warrant the belief that BRIGHAM YOUNG has fled from Utah, as it is known he was in treaty with the Indians for safe conduct through their country. Ex-Justice DRUMMOND has arrived here for consultation on the affairs of the Territory.

Passed Assistant Surgeon HORNER, of the Navy, has resigned his office.

Dispatches received here state that the health of Senator BUTLER, of South Carolina, is very precarious, and that his death is daily expected.

The Secretary of War to-day examined the bids made for materials and construction of the Washington Aqueduct. The awards will be announced probably on Tuesday.

WALTER N. HALDERMAN has been appointed Surveyor at Louisville, vice ENGLISH, removed.

EDWARD S. HOUGH has been reappointed Collector at Alexandria, Va.

Senator WILSON is here en route for Kansas.

Dr. EZRA PARMENTER has been appointed Special Inspector of Drugs and Medicines at Boston, vice JOSEPH H. SMITH, removed.

The salaries of the Superintendents of the Wagon Roads are fixed at $3,000 per annum; those of the Disbursing Agents and Engineers at $2,000, and those of the Physicians at $1,500.

Important from Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, Thursday, May 14.

Advices from the City of Mexico of the 1st May state that Colonel CRABB's California filibuster party had been attacked at Cubores by the Mexican troops, and forced to surrender at discretion. The prisoners, sixty in number, including Colonel CRABB, were all to be shot.

News from Nassau, N. P.

CHARLESTON, Saturday, May 16.

The British schooner Eveline has arrived here with Nassau dates to the 10th inst. She brought, as a passenger, Sir ALEXANDER BANNERMAN, the newly-appointed Governor of Newfoundland.

The brig Alma, from New York, arrived there on the 29th ult., and the American ship Turolinta, from New-York for New-Orleans, put into there on the 6th inst. in distress.

The Famine in Northern Michigan.

DETROIT, Saturday, May 16.

At a meeting held last evening in the City Hall here, to devise means for the relief of the destitute people in Raphum Midland, Alcona and Gratiot Counties, and parts of [illegible], at which his wife and three children had died of starvation. He gave a gloomy account of the suffering in that region, and said people were dying for the want of the most common food. The meeting decided to raise $5,000 in this city to purchase provisions with, $1,000 of which was subscribed in the Hall.

Lake and River Navigation.

BUFFALO, Saturday, May 16.

We have fine weather to-day, with a light wind from the West. The steamer Western World arrived here last night from Detroit. The steamer Plymouth Rock is advertised to leave here at 3 o'clock this afternoon for Detroit, although there is a good deal of ice in the Lake yet.

CINCINNATI, Saturday, May 16.

The water in the channel of the river at this point is falling. It now measures 11 feet. Weather mild.

Tannery Burned at Oswego.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Saturday, May 16.

The tannery in this place, owned by Messrs. HOWE & LINCOLN, at Newark Valley, N. Y., was burned to the ground to day. From two to three thousand sides of leather were in the lofts, none of which were saved. The green stock in the yards was all saved. The total loss is estimated at $40 000. The stock was mostly owned by parties in New York and Boston. Messrs. HOWE & LINCOLN are insured for $15,000, and will rebuild the tannery.

From Bermuda.

BOSTON, Sunday, May 17.

The brig Quadruple, at this port, brings Hamilton, Bermuda, advices of May 5th, two or three days later, but there is no news of interest.

Arrived at Hamilton, May 4, bark Spartan, COOK, from a whaling cruise; brig Penguin, INGHAM, New-York, (and was to sail 9th on her return.)

Sailed 5th—Brigs Hope and Devonshire for Baltimore.

Personal.

A letter from Providence, in the Boston Bee says: "There has been a series of very heavy failures within the last few days. They were those of WILLIAM HUNTLEY SIGOURNEY & Co., dry goods dealers on Broadway, New-York; SIGOURNEY & CLAYTON, Baltimore; and SIGOURNEY & HENRY, of this city—liabilities $280,000. It is rumored that they will go into bankruptcy, not being able to pay their liabilities. Mr. SIGOURNEY has left his business in the hands of others—hence the failure. It is said that Mr. S. made an attempt to commit suicide on learning the proceedings of his partners, but was rescued from the water (where he had thrown himself in the North River, New-York) by one of the harbor police, and taken insensible to the residence of his mother-in-law, Mrs. FILLMORE, on Fifth-avenue, New-York.

The discovery has been made in Stoneham, Mass., that Mr. AMOS HOWARD, who has recently failed and left that town, was guilty of forging paper to the amount of $3,000. He left town ten days since, and it is ascertained that he owed about $30,000, and left only $10,000 assets. Mr. HOWARD was a member of the Orthodox Church, and Treasurer of the Society to which he belonged. In that capacity he swindled the Church. The pastor of the church is a victim to the extent of $200; the deacon of the church, $900; a brother-in law, $1,600. He leaves an amiable wife and several children.

Still another mysterious disappearance is noted. The Albany Journal says: "MICHAEL PARANTAN, of Cohoes, informs us that his daughter left home on the 19th of April, since which time he has heard nothing of her. She was 16 years of age, five feet four inches high, light complexion, light hair and prepossessing in appearance. He has some misgivings that the young woman found dead near Newburg was his daughter, and says that she resembled very closely the description given of that unfortunate girl."

N. F. BRYANT, of Barre, Me., has brought a suit against the Boston and Maine Railroad for $3,000, due to him for services as lobby member of the Legislature. He has retained E. R. HOAR as his counsel; Messrs. CHOATE, MINOT and JUDD are for the Railroad. The case will come on soon before one of the Boston Courts.

One of our elderly citizens (says the Boston Transcript) asked, at a music store, yesterday, if they sold "family" tickets for OLE BULL's Farewell Concert on Saturday evening. "Yes," was the reply "Then I will take forty five secured seats for our folks," said the music loving old gentleman.

Dr. HOWARD, at the Anniversary Dinner of the Chicago "Boston Union," gave the following very "personal" toast: "DANIEL DANA, D. D., the only surviving representative of the old type of Massachusetts Clergymen; a patriot, a scholar and a Christian!"

Among the assets which HAZARD, the latest defaulter in Boston, turned over to his employers, was $7,000 worth of lottery tickets, which drew prizes to the extent of $1,200 only. It is now stated that HAZARD's defalcations amounted to $31,000, and that the securities retained over by him amount to $45,000.

The Queen's birthday falls on Sunday next, but Monday, the 25th, is the day fixed for its celebration in Canada, and probably elsewhere.

Obituary.

An eccentric character, DANIEL D. PRIOR, an old man of 60, who has been known for years in New-Haven, was found dead in his bed last week. His ostensible occupation was that of clock repairing. He lived a hermit-like existence, subsisting at times upon the charity of his neighbors. He possessed a peculiar taste in the adornment of his little mansion, which consisted of a room fifteen by twenty feet, and an attic. The walls of his room were covered by the cheap prints of the day, and his cupboard and a portion of the ceiling were covered, and a commencement made in the attic. Over the entrance door was strung several wires, and a stick adjusted perpendicularly, so that every time the door opened or closed, it swept the wires, producing music, doubtless sweet to his ear. In the attic were two clock-like machines, with pendulums, which struck vibrating wires at either end.

Mr. PONCELET, the Belgian Consul at Chicago, was drowned last week in a slough some twenty miles from the City, which, with his servant, he was attempting to cross in a buggy. He was a native of Belgium, and held the office of Consul of that Government. He was also the agent of a Company of heavy capitalists in Belgium, and invested some $500,000 in real estate and buildings in Chicago and vicinity, and intended to have invested some $600,000 more in a short time.

Rt. Rev. Dr. GAULIN, Roman Catholic Bishop of Kingston, died in Montreal on the the 9th inst., from an affection under which he has suffered severely during the last fourteen years. The departed prelate was the second Bishop of his church in the Province of Canada.

THE BURDELL MURDER.

The Reward of $5,000—Opinions of the Press.

From the Albany Knickerbocker, May 15.

The proprietors of the NEW-YORK TIMES offer a reward of $5,000 for the discovery of the person or persons who murdered Dr. BURDELL. This movement on the part of the TIMES is worthy of all praise, and will, we hope, shame the authorities into activity. It is to be regretted that the press is compelled to take the place of the Mayor and Police Department, and not only discover crimes but go in pursuit of the perpetrators. Had a large reward like that offered by the TIMES not have been made, the chances are that we would never again have heard of the BURDELL murder. That reward will act as a stimulant and cause an activity among the Policemen of the City superior to any feeling which could be imparted to them by a mere sense of duty. The sum offered by the TIMES is sufficiently large to produce the most satisfactory results. The probabilities now are that we will yet obtain a clew to the Bond-street murder. If the assassination was done by a villain hired for the occasion, the greater becomes the certainty that we will know who killed Dr. BURDELL. We shall expect a renewal of the excitement. That $5 000 reward will bring to light an immense mass of new facts. We shall now learn to a certainty where Dr. BURDELL passed "that last night." We think that it was at some improper house. For this reason those who saw him there have never come forward to explain away one of the leading mysteries in this very mysterious case.

THE MERRIMENT OF THE EVENING POST.

From the New York News, May 16.

FUNNY.—The Post is really getting facetious. It wittily describes a meeting of public spirited peanut dealers and orange peddlers, who, after discussing the subject thoroughly, offer a reward of five thousand peanuts for the discovery of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL.

This is too grave a subject, Mr. Post, to exercise your funny propensities upon, and hardly becoming the solemn biographer of Col. JOHN CHARLES FREMONT.

Suppose you should wake up some morning with your throat cut from ear to ear, and learn, after all excitement had passed—which would not continue long—and the burial service properly performed by John Brown, that a reward of a pint of peanuts had been offered for your assassin? Would you not turn in your mahogany in disgust at the low estimate placed upon your services and exploits while among the living? You should have thought of all this before you cracked peanuts over the tomb of Dr. BORDELL.

THE BUSDELL MURDER.

From the N. Y. Courier, May 17.

A new interest has been imparted to the Burdell murder by the bold enterprise of the proprietors of the DAILY TIMES, in offering a reward of $5,000 for any information that may lead to the detection of the murderer Some of the other daily papers, with their customary meanness, have attempted to throw ridicule on the praiseworthy efforts of the TIMES to discover the perpetrator of that atrocious crime. Let the motive of the TIMES not have been made, the chances are that the object itself is a good one, and the public may be greatly the gainers. When rogues find that even private citizens are willing to be at so great a cost to detect them, and bring them to punishment, they may be a little more cautious how they commit their rascalities. If the other papers are jealous of the superior shrewdness and liberality of the TIMES, let them offer a reward for the detection of some other villain, and so be even with their enterprising rivals.

WHO KILLED DOCTOR BURDELL?

From the Oswego Daily Times, May 15.

This is a question now agitating the New-Yorkers, and which they are attempting to solve with a degree of energy which, had it been exercised at the time of the murder, could not have been unproductive of results. The proprietors of the NEW YORK TIMES have offered a reward of $5,000 for such information as will lead to the discovery of the perpetrator, and Dr. B. BRANDRETH generously offers to be one of either ten or twenty persons to give $1,000 each for a similar purpose.

All these circumstances seem to call loudly on Gov. KING, for the honor of the State, to offer a large reward for the detection of the murderer.

A LARGE AND LIBERAL REWARD.

From the Binghamton Republican, May 15.

That able, enterprising and progressive paper, the NEW-YORK TIMES, despairing of any action on the part of the Governor, or local authorities of the City of New-York, has offered a reward of Five Thousand Dollars for any information which will lead to the conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. BURDELL—he communications to be addressed to the Editor of the NEW-YORK TIMES, as confidential. The TIMES reserves the right to withdraw the offer, on a sufficient reward being offered by the proper authorities. This is a good move.

REWARD OFFERED FOR THE MURDERERS OF DR. BURDELL.

From the Burlington (Vt) Free Press, May 15.

The proprietors of the NEW-YORK TIMES offer a reward of $5 000 to any person or persons who will furnish them information which shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL. They do this, they say, from a conviction that the regular authorities of that City and State cannot be relied on for such action as the interests of the people demand at their hands, and that the Public Press will in this instance, as in many others, be found the truest representative and most faithful guardian of the public welfare.

BURLESQUING AN ATTEMPT TO DETECT A MURDERER.

From the Troy Whig, May 16.

BENNETT, of the Herald, in order to throw ridicule on the TIMES' reward of $5,000 for the discovery of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL, comes out and offers $5,000 reward for the discovery of some half a dozen murderers now at large, besides $7,500 to any country lawyer who will come to New-York and clear the Court dockets. The Evening Post, too, tries its hand in the same line, and publishes the card of some peanut dealers, who offer 5,000 Peanuts to any person who will discover the murderer of Dr. BURDELL—to be paid on conviction. All fair hits, perhaps, but the TIMES' original dodge must be considered the best of all.

THE NEW-YORK AUTHORITIES.

From the Trenton Republican, May 15.

The NEW-YORK TIMES of yesterday morning offered a reward of $5,000, for information that will lead to the conviction of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL—as the reason prompting them to this course. They however reserve the right to withdraw the offer when the authorities take measures to accomplish the same result. This testimony to the inefficiency of the authorities is doubtless well merited. No less than six murders have recently been committed in the City or vicinity and the perpetrators remain undetected.

OFFERING REWARDS.

From the Sun, May 16.

Our neighbors of the TIMES, believing that the public authorities do not intend to make any effort to discover the murderer or murderers of Dr. BURDELL, and evidently entertaining suspicions that there is knowledge of the matter which the temptation of a large reward might bring out, have offered to pay $5,000 to any party who will communicate such information as shall lead to the detection and conviction of the perpetrators of the Bond-street tragedy. They reserve, however, the right to withdraw their offer should the public authorities take suitable action and offer a sufficient reward. The TIMES seems to have made its offer in good faith, either to stimulate our inactive authorities, or to elicit information regarding the murder; but our impression is, that ten times five thousand dollars might be offered without any risk of its payment being ever required.

THE VIEW TAKEN OF THE SUBJECT BY THE GUARDIANS OF PUBLIC VIRTUE IN THE MORAL CITY OF BOSTON.

From the Boston Traveller, May 16.

TRAFFIC IN MURDER.—The NEW YORK TIMES offers $5 000 reward for information which will lead to the detection of the real murderer of Dr. BURDELL. A very fair advertising card is this for the TIMES, for it helps its notoriety any way, and if that journal can thereby obtain exclusive information of the true murderer, its money will be well invested. The Evening Post ridicules the offer by a flaming card from two peanut dealers, offering 5,000 peanuts for like information.

A VERY SOLEMN AND AFFECTING REMONSTRANCE.

From the Boston Courier, May 16

A BOLD STROKE TO ATTRACT ATTENTION.—For the obvious purpose of attracting momentary attention to their sheet, the proprietors of the NEW YORK DAILY TIMES offer a reward of five thousand dollars to any person or persons who will furnish them information which shall lead to the detection of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL. We do not remember to have seen a more preposterous attempt at self-advertising on the part of any newspaper establishment. Nothing like it, we venture to say, ever before appeared in the columns of any paper with any pretensions to respectability. In view of the fearful tragedy to which it refers, there is an obvious impropriety in such an editorial advertisement, which even its absurdity cannot keep out of sight. It is painful to see a journal reduced to such a strait in order to keep its name before the public.

A VERY PROPER REBUKE OF THE BOSTON PECKSNIFF.

From the New York Mercury, May 17.

We beg leave to inform the gentlemen of the Boston Courier, and they happen to be friends whom we respect, that they will probably very soon ascertain that the proprietors of the NEW YORK TIMES have not been induced to the offer they have made by a selfish desire "to attract attention."

That paper was impudently sued for libel, several weeks ago, because it intimated that a certain individual might as well, as otherwise, be looked to.

The TIMES is on the true scent, we happen to know; and we hope we may not have long to wait before the existence of the mid-day sun, that the murderers of Dr. Burdell will speedily—if they have not already committed suicide—be arrested.

The murderers, and there were two of them, entered Doctor BURDELL's house from the rear, in Bleecker street, and made egress in the same way. In the rear of No 31 Bond street—the Burdell residence—there is a narrow court, or alley, which communicates with Bleecker street.

Adjoining the rear of No 31 Bond street, there is a drapery and shed, the latter being, from its space, only three feet from Doctor BURDELL's rear window—to ascend to which nothing was necessary but a hand ladder, which had probably been provided some time before, as it was found standing in the place assigned in the morning after his murder. Reaching the top of the shed, the murderers found easy access to Doctor BURDELL's room, through the window. They opened it; seized their victim; and murdered him. They had been with him early in the night of the assassination; and followed him home. Arriving at the front door of No. 31 Bond street, they attempted to force their way in; but were prevented by the hasty closing of the door. They then proceeded to Bleecker street, as they had originally designed, and carried their bloody views into execution.

The two murderers were men capable of their mission; and had double objects to avenge. One of them professed to have been swindled at a gambling house out of a large sum of money; the other, alleged that his wife had not only been insulted, but violated, whilst submitting to a dental operation. The desire of vengeance to both was equally inviting and sweet. A very few days only, in all probability, will produce such evidences of undoubted fact as will cast aside all mystery in relation to the BURDELL assassination.

A REWARD OF $5,000 FOR THE MURDERERS OF DR. BURDELL.

From the Albany Atlas and Argus.

The proprietors of the NEW YORK TIMES offer "a reward of $5,000 to any person or persons who will furnish them with information which shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL." The reason assigned for this step is "a profound conviction that the regular authorities of the City and State cannot be relied on for such action as the interests of the people demand at their hands, and that the public press will, in this instance, as in many others, be found the truest representative and most faithful guardian of the public welfare."

Again, says the TIMES: "The Police and other Municipal authorities seem to be too much engrossed in disgraceful struggles for power and patronage, to be able to give the requisite degree of attention to the protection of the lives of our citizens; and the Governor of the State has thus far given no indication of a purpose to exercise the power with which he is clothed to promote the ends of justice in this particular instance."

The proceeding has a march of enterprise and energy, and has a smack of attractive novelty about it, that will not be lost to the projectors.

ANNIVERSARIES.

Central American Education Society.

The Anniversary Sermon of this Society,—the object of which is to render pecuniary assistance to poor and pious young men who are striving to obtain an education, to prepare themselves for the ministry,—was preached, last evening, at Rev. Dr. ADAMS Church, in Madison-square, by Rev. EZRA A. HUNTINGTON, Professor in the Auburn Theological Seminary. Prayer having been offered by Rev. Dr. OWEN, the following abstract from the Report was read. The Society now is in the 39th year of its existence:

During the year which closed with the 30th day of April last—the 39th year of the Society's existence—the whole number of young men aided from its funds was 113, and from those of its several auxiliaries, which have reported, about 42; making 155 in all.

The number receiving assistance at the beginning of the Fortieth year is, from this Society, 73, and from its auxiliaries about 38; the total being 111.

The returns from the auxiliaries, in regard to the state of their respective treasuries, are not yet sufficiently complete to be presented in this statement.

The funds of this Society, received from all sources during the Thirty ninth year, have amounted to $10,702 63, and the disbursements to $11,103 59—of which $9,740 have been paid in appropriations to the young men under patronage—the appropriation to each being $25 the quarter, or $100 the year.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, May Day, Friday.

Palmerston's Parliament opened yesterday, when PALMERSTON's speaker of the House of Commons, Mr. EVELYN DENISON, a fifth-rate mediocrity, was elected without opposition, simply because opposition would have been useless, once Palmerston, a distant Canningite connection of whom he is, said he was the man for the place. In returning thanks, Denison, who had rarely indeed opened his lips in the house during the thirty years he has belonged to it, quickly undeceived those who had supposed that his attainments must be great to have recommended him for such a post. He lacks even the physical requirements that should pertain to it. Gaunt, gauch, grim, sinister-visaged, feeble-voiced, he presents a miserable contrast to all the speakers within living recollection. But he is Palmerston's speaker, and that shuts the mouth of all carpers: at least it renders the opening of mouths unutterably superfluous, which comes to the same thing. The proceedings were brief and insipid, though the attendance of members was exceedingly numerous. Not less so was that of the corps diplomatique, among whom, for a wonder, Mr. Dallas was not one. Continental politicians have got it in their heads that something amazing is going to happen in England, shortly. The supremacy of Palmerston is so obvious in appearance, and so overpowering in reality, that they cannot believe he will suffer things to remain even as they are, and will attempt a coup d'état of some kind or other, they know not what, just as NAPOLEON, after Waterloo, thought that WELLINGTON was too powerful to remain a subject, and would change the dynasty. It was an exposition of this feeling that so many of the representatives of foreign powers were present trying what they could see looming in the future through the imperialized formalities of the scene before them. What divination they drew from the horoscope there and then cast it is difficult to imagine, for most of the natives were very much astonished at some of the portents. With these, however, it is useless to trouble you.

The principal incident to-day is one that bears very pertinently on one of the causes of the foregoing foreign curiosity. News has come of the fêtes in Paris in honor of the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE. Russian and French flags intertwine along the whole route of the procession, to the exclusion of those of England. The efforts of the French Government to divest these honors of a political significance, only lead a greater piquancy to the too successful efforts of the Anti-Anglo party among the Franco-Muscovites, whose name appears to be legion, and the legion seemingly becoming many very fast. A great deal is being made, on both sides, of an article in the Presse, distributed extensively at the very time the Grand Duke was entering Paris, landing the alliance of France and England as the basis and bulwark of civilization and freedom. It was known long beforehand that this article would appear, and its appearance is attributed to a very high inspiration, but that inspiration is not stated. It might be supposed to have been Prince NAPOLEON, who was alleged to be hostile to Russia, but that his Imperial Highness received the Grand Duke, and accompanied him to the Tuileries. That it appeared with the privity, if not with the express sanction of the court, there can be small doubt, and the object of its appearance under such auspices, at such a juncture, is not a little puzzling. We must wait the explanation of the mystery in the Russian Emperor's organ, the Nord, of Brussels, and which, by the way, is not merely the Russian organ, but, bewilderment upon bewilderment, the Bonapartean organ too; for the whole Western World, including the good city of Paris, now obtain intelligence of the intentions of the Napoleonic Government, through this publication in the Belgian capital.

The latest illustration of this fact is in yesterday's number, which tells us that it is the determination of the French Government formally to demand a permanent embassy at Pekin, and in case of a refusal, will endeavor, in concert with the English forces, to penetrate to the Celestial capital by water, and there dictate terms. The Nord has been so frequently right, in announcements even more startling than this, that it is highly probable it may be correct on this occasion.

Apropos of China, it may be mentioned that Lord ELGIN's Secretary, Mr. LAWRENCE OLIPHANT, has an article, but without his name, in the May number of Blackwood, issued to day, recounting a portion of his late experiences in Central America, as adverted to in the last communication but one from your correspondent. In the course of the article, which is a very interesting one, at least for readers on this side of the Globe, Mr. OLIPHANT thus describes the fillibustering chief:

"In stature, General WALKER is but little over five feet four. His features are described as coarse and impassible; his square chin and long jaw denote character, but his lips are full and his mouth is not well formed: his eyes are universally spoken of as the most striking feature in his face—of a singularly light gray, they are so large and fixed that in a daguereotype the eyelid is scarcely visible. His manner is remarkably self possessed, and some of his most intimate friends, who have been with him throughout the most trying scenes of his Nicaraguan experiences, have assured me that under no circumstances have they ever observed him to change countenance, even to laugh, or to alter in the smallest degree his slow and precise mode of diction. He is at all times taciturn, and when he does speak, it is directly to the point. He manifests a contemptuous indifference to danger without being reckless, and altogether seems better qualified to inspire confidence and respect among lawless men than to shine in civilized society. He is ascetic in his habits, and his career hitherto has shown him to be utterly careless of acquiring wealth. Highly ambitious, it is but due to him to say that his aspirations, however little in accordance with the moral code in vogue at the present day, are beyond riches. Like Louis Napoleon, he has a fixed faith in the star of his destiny, and like him he will doubtless be branded by the civilized nations of Europe as an unprincipled adventurer or a heaven-born hero, according as he fails or succeeds in his daring enterprise."

How far this portrait is drawn from the life is not for Londoners to judge. Of the political problem of Walkerism, Mr. OLIPHANT says:

"Ever since the disclosures by General GOLOSCHIA of WALKER's real intentions, the American Government has taken a very different view of his proceedings. They now perceive the danger that would arise from the formation of a federal union of the Central American Republics and Mexico by Anglo Saxons. No sensible American ever either hopes or desires to annex to the United States these countries, containing a population of 9,000,000, who have vainly endeavored to carry out republican institutions, and who, if infused into the United States, with the rights of citizens, to which they would be entitled by the Constitution of that country, would be a source of weakness rather than of strength. Added to this, is the opposition which would arise on the part of the North to the annexation of so large a tract of tropical country, involving slave labor. The question for the American Government to consider is, whether it is preferable for these States to remain as they are, or to be incorporated into a federal government by Anglo Saxons, under institutions by no means republican in their character, but adapted to the present peculiar political condition of the inhabitants, necessarily partaking of the nature of a military dictatorship."

Sentiments of this sort are not misplaced in the mouth of a Secretary to a mission that does not mean to be very mealy-mouthed in its dealings with "insolent barbarians," and which is the reflex of sentiments evoked by the India mail tidings this week, recounting how Mr J. BROOK, the Rajah of Sarawak, arming the ferocious Dyaks, of whom he once slew thousands in cold blood, slaughtered two thousand Chinese in retaliation for an assault upon himself and his establishment, including a bishop, who applauded the Christian retribution exacted from the heathen.

Two announcements of some interest to the citizens of the United States, were made in yesterday's journals—one relating to the evidence of American gratitude for services rendered by British seamen, lately offered by the new President; the other, the commencement of a subscription in aid of the expedition which Lady FRANKLIN has determined upon directing in search of her husband and such of his brave companions as may yet survive. The list is headed by Lord DUFFERIN great-grandson of RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN), Col. SYKES, a director of the East India Company, and the Hon. F. BYSON, a descendant of the Commodore of that name, so well known by the narrative of the loss of the Wager, which furnished his gifted kinsman with some of the most striking incidents of the shipwreck in Don Juan. Lady FRANKLIN has purchased a vessel for her purpose, and the Resolute continues to lie useless in harbor.

The medals and gratuities forwarded by President PIERCE for presentation to the men of the life-boats which were instrumental in saving the lives of the crew of the Northern Belle, were transmitted to Lord CLARENDON a few days since by Mr. DALLAS, whose dispatch appeared in yesterday's journals. Each of the brave fellows receives a silver medal, and a gratuity of from £10 to £30, according to the amount of risk incurred in the performance of their arduous and humane duties. There is no class of men whose character stands higher than that of the hardy fellows who form the crews of the numerous life-boats kept in readiness on the British coasts. The nature of their service seems to impress them with a certain moral dignity not often observable among the humble orders in this country, and there is little fear, therefore, that the silver medals sent them by Mr. BUCHANAN will ever figure by the side of those of the military heroes of the Punjaub and the Crimea, among the unredeemed pledges in the pawnbrokers' shops.

Such a scene of peril as was witnessed when the Broadstairs boatmen brought off the crew of the Northern Belle forms the object of one of the most striking pictures in this year's exhibition of the Royal Academy, which opened this day. Mr. COOKE, the artist, has avoided, however, the extreme horror experienced by the unfortunate seamen of the American bark, and shows us a stranded Indiaman, on the point of breaking up. The passengers and crew have left the vessel, and been ingulfed in the waves; the captain alone remains, standing by his ship to the last, as the commander of the British packet-ship Violet did on a recent melancholy occasion. It is morning; the gale is moderated, and a pilot-boat and a life-boat are bearing down to the rescue of the forlorn captain of the Indiaman. From these incidents Mr. COOKE has produced a masterly picture, the skillful delineation of which is only equalled by its fidelity. There are two or three other marine subjects by the same artist in the exhibition, and one of great power from the inimitable pencil of Mr. STANFIELD. The scene which he has selected would have made a striking work in itself, but he has given it a human interest by the accessories which he has introduced. In the year 1588, two vessels of the Spanish Armada, mistaking the singularly-formed basaltic cliffs which wall the coast of Antium for Dunluce Castle, were wrecked there; and this is the incident which Mr. STANFIELD has depicted in his magnificent picture. In the centre of the little bay which the perpendicular rocks half inclose, and partly obscured by surge and spray, lies the wreck of a Spanish vessel, the crew of which are endeavoring to escape upon a raft. Mr. STANFIELD has painted many fine marine subjects, but on none of his past efforts will his fame rest more securely than on this.

Mr. ROBERTS, as usual, exhibits some beautiful transcripts of Continental scenes, and whether we stand before his "Church of St. Gomar," at Leins, in Belgium, his "Interior of Milan Cathedral," or the "Piazza Navona," Rome, we are equally impressed with his artistic genius, and wondrous fidelity to nature.

Mr. HART exhibits three pictures, varied in their subjects, but all excellent of their kind. He has given us two charming female figures in "Sacred Song," achieved a triumph of architectural delineation in his admirable "Interior of the Subterranean Church of St. Francis," at Assisi, and painted one of the best, if not the best, portrait in the exhibition—that of Dr. ADLER, Chief Rabbi of the London Jews. Who has not heard of FRANK STONE? and who would not pause before a picture with the title of "Bon jour, Messieurs," when invited by such bewitching female faces as those of the cart-load of happy and smiling peasant girls returning from Boulogne market, which this gentle artist has depicted? There is a fascinating sweetness about all the works of this clever artist, which renders them universal favorites, as the windows of the print-shops bear witness; and his present subject is equal to the best of his previous efforts.

Mr. ECO has chosen for his exhibition picture a scene from Mr. THACKERAY's novel of Esmond, that in which BEATRIX decorates her lover with the scarf and sword-knot which she has wrought for him during his absence in Flanders. This picture attracted much attention to-day, and Mr. THACKERAY may esteem himself fortunate in having so able an illustrator.

That teeming mine of wealth to artists, the Faust of GOETHE, has been further drawn upon by FRANK STONE and Miss ROBINSON—by the former in "Margaret at her spinning-wheel," in which he proves himself as equal to pathos as to merriment; and by the latter in a very charming composition of "Gretchen at the well."

PHILIP and ANSDELL each send two beautiful Andalusian subjects, as remarkable for their local truth as for skillful drawing and brilliant and effective coloring. Mr. ANSDELL's are landscapes on the banks of the Guadalquiver, with admirably painted cattle and very charming distances; Mr. PHILIP has taken a higher flight, and gives us a fine picture of a young Gitana, with an infant, vainly asking alms of a burly priest: and another, of even a higher class, representing the interview of a prisoner—whose noble countenance bespeaks him either a political offender or one unjustly accused—with his young wife, who holds their child up to the grating to receive his kiss. Each of these pictures, but the latter more especially, will fix the attention for some time.

The same truthfulness and tender pathos marks a very touching picture by Mr. RANKLEY, called "The Lonely Hearth." It is Sunday evening; a widowed peasant, of honest, manly countenance, has just returned from church, and sits with bent head over his wood-fire, musing on the recent loss denoted by the deep hand upon his hat, and the black gloves upon the settle. His Bible and Prayer-book are beside him, and on the table stands the untasted meal. The artist has followed the example presented in the well-known picture of the dream of the wounded soldier in the hospital at Scutari, and represented above the fire-place a dim vision of angels bearing away the partner for whom the poor man sorrows, while a cherub seems to whisper consolation in his ear. This picture elicited general admiration, and will doubtless be a favorite subject with engravers.

The great feature of this year's exhibition, however, is MACLISE's noble picture of PETER the Great working in the dock-yard at Deptford. The great Muscovite, attended by MENZIKOFF, GALITZIN, GOLOVIN, and others of his nobles, is engaged in sawing a piece of timber, and suspends his labor to greet WILLIAM of Orange, who, with two or three courtiers, scans with quietly observant eye, the manual toil of his brother monarch. The subordinate figures and accessories are numerous, and evince attentive study of the subject. The presence of three pretty women, and the fig on and glasses on the capstan, denote the Czar's penchants, while the barbaric magnificence of his Court is shown in the richly-attired negro and the two dwarfs in attendance upon him. The buildings erected at that time, and still standing, are seen in the back ground; and even the destruction of EVELYN's "glorious and impenetrable holly hedge," by PETER making a short cut through it with his wheel-barrow, is commemorated by the introduction of the identical harrow, with a sprig of holly sticking in the wheel. If this picture was intended as a compliment to the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, a better subject could scarcely have been selected; but his Imperial Highness is not coming to London, a circumstance to which much political significance is attached.

The question of the decimalization of the British coinage, advocated with so much zeal and ability by the Decimal Association, under the presidency of Mr. W. BROWN, M. P., has advanced a step nearer to a solution by the issue by Lord OVERSTONE of a series of inquiries intended to elucidate the difficulties which are supposed to stand in the way of adopting the new system. Lord OVERSTONE is one of the three commissioners appointed to report on this question, and also a director of the Bank of England, and of course an authority on monetary matters of every description. From the construction and tenor of his lordship's queries, it is supposed that he is not very favorably inclined towards the plan recommended by Mr. BROWN and his coadjutors, and the writer of the city article in the leading journal took occasion to contrast the pound and mill system with the currency of the United States, to the advantage of the latter. The half-penny would represent the cent, and fifty pence would be a dollar; nothing could be easier. What was to become of the gold coinage in the event of the American currency being adopted, the public were not told. Accounts could not be kept in pounds, shillings and pence, and paid in dollars and cents; and as a new gold coinage would therefore be absolutely necessary, it is difficult to discover the superiority, in point of simplicity, of this new project over the system advocated by Mr. BROWN and the Decimal Association, which is now tolerably well understood by most men of business. That the American currency is far superior in this respect to the British, is admitted by the decimalists; but the question to be solved is, what decimal system presents fewest difficulties to the British public? The pound and mill system starts from the latter coin, which might, if desirable, be called a farthing, and would be the only new coin required. Sovereigns, mills, shillings, florins, and pounds, would be of the same intrinsic value as cents and dollars are to Americans, quite as soon understood by British minds. The object is one of great importance, and, notwithstanding the treatment it received last year from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, must eventually result in the simplification of our coinage, whatever system may be ultimately decided upon.

PARIS GOSSIP.

Anonymous Work on Louis Napoleon—The Gold Snuff-Box Again—Marringeable Generals—Wealth of Parisian Jews—Marshal Marmont Redivivus—Gen. Walker's Brother in Paris—Senator Sumner—Sale of Old Paintings—A Romantic Story of Real Life.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Monday, April 27, 1857.

An anonymous writer lately published in England a history of the reign of LOUIS NAPOLEON. The book is but a pyramid of empty eulogisms, translated by the word "man-worship." So much devotion, however, so much historical fidelity, must not go unrewarded. An order was issued from the Tuileries to seek out the author, and as is usual in researches of this character, the difficulties of the case were not very great. The author was soon found, and proves to be a Captain MORRISON, of the English army. Whereupon NAPOLEON, with his usual generosity, dispatched one of those everlasting gold snuff-boxes which he has made by the hundred dozen, at a rate of cheapness that would astound their recipients. The Captain, with the true sentiment of every English gentleman, not wishing to be outdone in generosity, or, perhaps, wishing to give a lesson to the imperial donor of so common a gift, sent in return four blooded horses, each of which were worth just four times the value of the snuff-box. NAPOLEON should have known the aristocracy of England better than to have sent to an English gentleman a gift which he distributes right and left, for paltry inventions and insignificant acts of devotion. It is, in fact, the minimum gift of the crown, and must therefore be common. How will he get out of the difficulty? As a first step he has ordered that the book be translated and published in France. As an author this will afford some compensation; as an apologist of NAPOLEON, none at all, for they are not great men who venture into this field.

From this meagre exemple people insist that the Anglo-French alliance still exists. But there is a better proof than that. When it was at last decided that the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE was coming to Paris, the question of decorating the Duke and his officers came up. It was then discovered that the English officers who were entitled to the honor of a decoration by their services in the Crimea had not yet been decorated, and that to decorate the enemy before the ally would be to push their new-born complaisance for Russia a little too far. So the Moniteur, a few days ago, published a long list of decorations in the English army, but the name of Captain MORRISON, author of the eulogy on the reign of NAPOLEON III., does not appear in the list. His name will no doubt appear later, and isolated so as to give it more prominence.

A little history of the romantic order has grown out of the passage of Gen. TODLEBEN through Paris. A young lady of one of the most aristocratic families of the city, who saw and conversed with the heroic defender of Sebastopol, conceived for him a violent passion. She even manifested her sentiments in so marked a manner as to give some inquietude to her family. It was thus that Gen. CAVAIGNAC was admired, and finally contracted a marriage which the Princess de LIEVEN called "a marriage of admiration." No such good fortune, it appears, attends the three gallant bachelor Marshals, PELISSIER, CANROBERT and BOSQUET, who, notwithstanding, are fairly in the field of marriage candidates. The last attempt of Marshal CANROBERT was in an American family, where a beautiful blonde had captivated his attention, but the Marshal was too much of a gros bon homme to please the American beauty.

Some one has made a singular calculation in regard to the Jews in Paris. In sharing among the entire Hebrew population of the city the total fortune of all the bankers, capitalists, negociants, merchants, &c., belonging to the great Jew family, each of the children of Israel would have an annual income of about $2,500. The same calculation was made for the Christian population, and it was found, that in case of an equal distribution, the annual income of each individual would be but $60. The proportion is enormous.

A good deal of noise has been made lately over the name of Marshal MARMONT, Duke de Raguse. A report gained circulation a few days ago, that the widow, Duchess of Raguse, had just died. The Duchess is not dead, but only seriously indisposed. The mention of this name brings up a souvenir of her marriage with the Duke, of some interest. The Duchess was the daughter of the rich banker of the Directory, M. PEREGAUX. When the fortunate officer, become a General, proposed for the hand of the wealthy heiress, he was at first repulsed by the family. But NAPOLEON made him a present of near a million, and the family yielded. The Duke, although a brilliant officer, and, as we have seen by his posthumous Memoirs just published, a caustic writer, was characterized, nevertheless, by an uncongental disposition, which was the cause of his separation from his wife in 1828, and of his great unpopularity with the people.

The publication house of HENRI PLON put on sale yesterday the fourth or fifth refutation of the Memoirs of the Duke DE RAGUSE, in a large octavo volume, from the pen of a well-known historical writer, M. LAURENT DE L'ARDECHE. The work bears the title: Refutation of the Memoirs of Marshal Marmont, Duke de Raguse. These publications show the importance which is attached to these Memoirs.

A mystery hangs over the announcement of the presence of Gen. WALKER's brother in Paris. The announcement appeared on the same day in eight journals in their items column, and in the following words in each journal: "Le frère du General Walker se trouve en ce moment à Paris." (The French as you know have no W, which does not prevent them, however, from some singular caprice which I could never comprehend, from invariably printing the English word Vauxhall Wauxhall.) The arrival of Gen. WALKER's brother, a gentleman never before heard of, announced thus uniformly in the same words and on the same day in all the large journals, is a mystification to the Parisians, many of whom never heard of "Gen. WALKER" himself, to say nothing of his brother.

A correspondent of a Belgian journal, who professes to have seen Mr. SUMNER at Paris, and who certainly makes no exception to the general body of his confrères who are gifted with the power of seeing and hearing things that remain unseen and unheard to others, says that he saw upon the face of the Massachusetts Senator the cicatrices from the blows of BROOKS' cane!

One of the excitements of the week was the sale of M. PATEREAU's gallery of old paintings. In this age of railroad stock and grand dividends M. PATEREAU was an enigma. A man who could allow two or three hundred thousand dollars to sleep quietly in a saloon in the shape of old paintings, was in danger of being interdicted by his friends the use of his own property on suspicion of insanity. Happily perhaps for M. PATEREAU, he died before his friends knew the extent of his costly admiration for this style of investment. In 1850, M. BERRYER cried on the tribune of the Legislative Assembly, "Take care, gentlemen of the majority! the great social positions are disappearing." He meant to say that a prince, carrying an old historical name, ought not to be assimilated to other citizens. M. BERRYER was talking to the Republicans. His caution applies to the present French society. Nothing in fact could better translate the words of the oligarchic orator than this sale of old paintings. Under the hammer of the auctioneer, that indomitable symbol of modern equality, you might have seen thirty of the leading men of French society, including the representative of the Chief of State, disputing for the treasures, the idols, the worship of a single man. This great collection, which had cost a life of labor, was about to be scattered, dispersed—the social position which M. PATEREAU had created, was about to disappear.

The collection embraced Teniers, Rembrandt, Rubens, Hobbema, Wouvermane, Brauwer, Ostade, Wynants, Berghem, Albert Cuyp, Ruysdael, Karel Dujardin, and a hundred others. The principal purchasers were, the Emperor, the Princess Mathilde, the Louvre, Count Nieuerkerke, M. Fould, M. Rothschild, the Marquis of Hertford, the Museums of Brussels and Berlin, and the brothers Pereire. With such bidders as these, you may imagine that competition was a dangerous affair for a light purse. The Windmills of Hobbema, strongly disputed by Count NIEUERKERKE, the Marquis of HERTFORD, Russia and Prussia, was finally adjudged to the Musem of Berlin at $19,200. The Count NIEUERKERKE made several purchases for the Emperor, among the number a Murillo at $9,000. He also bought for the Louvre a little landscape of Wynants at $360; a landscape of Wouvermans at $6,000; the Repose of the Cavaliers, by the same master, considered his chef d'œuvre, at $10,620; and the Sleeping Infant Jesus, of Murillo, at $8,200; M. FOULD paid for a Child's Head, by GREUZE, $2,180; for a landscape of TENIERS, $400; another of BERGHEM $1,000; a Love Messenger, a little bijou, by JEAN STEEN, $440; for an Interior, by TENIERS, $360; Lord HERTFORD bought two of the finest pictures of the sale: the Dutch Beer-house, by OSTENDE, at $10,240, and the Marine View of CUYP, at $5,200. The Marquis took, also, the Repose of the Harvesters, by GONZALES COQUES, at $9,200; and a Calm Sea, by VANDEVILLE, at $2,000. The first twenty-six pictures brought the sum of $90,000! (The above sums, in francs, are divided by 5.)

When Baron ROTHSCHILD appeared in the auction-room of the Rue Drouot, the crowd separated to allow him to pass. A brother millionaire, pointing to one canvas of KAREL DUJARDIN, and another of PAUL POTTER, said to M. ROTHSCHILD, "Baron, there are rags that are worth more than bank bills." "That's not my opinion," replied ROTHSCHILD.

Mademoiselle FIOZAE, a young and handsome actress of the Comédie Française, appeared suddenly in the midst of the gilded crowd. She shone like a rose amid dog-fennel. Everybody's eye-glass was upon her; her large eyes, on the contrary, were fixed on the two chefs-d'œuvre of GREUZE, La Psyché and La Tête de l'Enfant. But, alas! when the costs of sale and the tax were added to the sum bid, it was a figure of 45,000 francs, and the prettiest comédienne in the world has not always that sum in her purse of precious stones. Mlle. FIOZAE regarded, admired, and sighed. The days of chivalry are passing away. Among all these men who stir about as many treasures as did the King ATTALUS, there was not one whom the fine eyes and desolate look of the handsome actress melted. The fact is, we are far from the time when a Marshal of France sent to LA GRIMARD, hid under the crust of a paté d'Amiens, twenty-five thousand francs of precious stones.

This sale assumed at times the physiognomy of a regular battle. The anglo-French alliance was more than once fairly ruptured. The two ancient rivals fought a public duel with golden Napoleons for weapons. It was not the least curious feature of the sale to see the Count NIEUERKERKE lance his metallic phrases at the auctioneer. "One thousand francs! Two thousand francs! Four thousand francs!" But then the Count was bidding for the Emperor and the Museum of the Louvre. "No matter about bread!" as AUGUST VACQUERIE said, ironically, in the revolution of 1848. "But museums! museums! museums! We must have museums!" On his side the rich Lord HERTFORD set into operation a monetary artillery not less sonorous.

The paintings of the great artist PAUL DELAROCHE, lately deceased, which were wanting at the Great Exhibition of 1855, have been reunited for a charitable object, and are now on exhibition at the Palace of the Fine Arts. An enormous number of visitors have rushed to see these works, for the most part unknown to the public, except by the engravings, which conveyed only enough of their beauties to excite the curiosity to see the originals. PAUL DELAROCHE refused for a long time before his death to exhibit his works. When asked the reason one day by his colleague of the Institute, M. HALEVY, he replied: "I have in my secretary perhaps fifty letters from the most prominent men in Europe, nearly all running thus: 'Sir, I desire to possess a picture from your pencil. You will choose your own subject, make it the size you please, for the price you please, and as soon as you please. But the sooner the more agreeable.' Having thus enough of work for more than a century beyond the duration of my ordinary life, why should I expose myself to criticisms, to contestations, to depreciation? I have everything that art can procure to one who has had the happiness to succeed, riches, renown, honors, and especially tranquillity. Why should I risk compromising all that in delivering up my works to be criticized by the journals? It would be folly, and that is the reason I do not expose."

What DELAROCHE refused to do living his friends are now doing for him dead. His works have been gathered from their happy possessors from every part of Europe, and there are some even that were found in Moscow. The Committee who have this work in hand have been obliged to estimate the value of each picture, to guarantee the proprietor against its loss, and to insure it. The value of the whole collection, thus estimated, is six millions of francs! The chef d'œuvre of the collection is the Death of the Duke of Guise.

By its mixed and bizarre population, Paris offers in its private residences more romantic histories than any city in the world. At every step you can put your finger upon a princely palace or a bijou of a cottage that has had its origin in some tale of love or romance. Those of your readers who have been in Paris lately will recollect the forty or so rods of front on the Avenue of the Champs Elysées, which comprises on the upper part the residence of M. EMILE DE GIRARDIN, then the palace and grounds bought by the Empress for her mother the Countess of Montijo, then the Jardin d'Hiver, then a private hotel well known as the Maison Valin, then a new palace just building in the style LOUIS XV., then some old buildings, and finally the billiard room of the Count DE MORNY and the magnificent residence of his former friend the Countess LEBON on the corner of the Rond l'oint. There was a time, not long ago, when the Empress and the Countess LEBON had projected a plan to purchase all the ground and buildings, with the exception of Jardin d'Hiver, which intervened between them, so as to secure a more aristocratic tenantry than it now boasts; and when they ascertained who it was that was building the Louis XV. palace between them, their anxiety to sweep the neighborhood was only increased. But it happened that those people were as anxious to stay in the aristocratic neighborhood as the others were to get them away, so having good title deeds for their property, they preferred to refuse the liberal prices offered them. And this brings me to the story of the new residence Louis XV. I was told the story some months ago by the well known author M. ROUER DE BEAUVOIR; it has been repeated to me since by diplomatic people who know the circumstances; and now I find in the Illustrated World a further confirmation of it. Here it is:

Four years ago a woman who had just passed the "cape of thirty," stood, toward 5 o'clock in the evening, at the side of a young man at one of the upper windows of the hotel I have already spoken of, the Maison Valin. This woman possessed a strange and striking beauty; she had immense eyes of an indefinable expression, a mouth that struck terror, a nose unknown to the Greeks, a person copied from Rubens, an ensemble splendid yet strange, attractive yet terrifying—a true Scandinavian Circe? A great artist had ardently loved her; when the time arrived that he no longer loved her, in order to console himself, he starred on a long voyage, which had its termination in America. Since then this woman, enveloped in a strange prestige, and exercising an influence upon all who come within her reach, was sought in marriage by the Portuguese Minister at Paris, and thus became the Marchioness do P——. Then there was a separation, from incompatibility of temper between the north pole and the tropics; and one fine Summer evening the Marchioness found herself, as I have said above, leaning out of the window of a sorry chamber, more or less furnished, confessing her complete destitution to the friend of the moment.

"I wonder where I shall dine?" she said. "I am sure I do not know! I owe three months of rent; all that I have available has disappeared. I have no jewelry—not a sou. But listen! Before the end of five years I shall either be dead, or I shall have a palace—here, in the avenue of the Champs Elysees! And if you should ever pass by, I shall call you in, as I have done this evening, to show you, not my dream, but my presentiment realized!

The palace that is now building a few steps from the Maison Valin is the palace of the Marchioness de P. The walls will cost a million, the furniture another million. The mosaic workers of Florence are finishing the dados of the peristyle. When it is finished still another million will be appropriated to the purchase of the Maison Valin and some old houses that surround it, and a handsome gilt iron fence, to conform to that of her aristocratic neighbors, and a garden, will encircle and adorn her door.

The reader will ask, from whence does the Marchioness draw her millions?—by what magic has the sorceress realized her presentiment? The explanation of this part of the history belongs to that mysterious under-current of life at Paris which SUE and DUMAS have tried to delineate, which is a mystery even to those who are the actors in it, and which is paved with moving scenes of love and jealousy, of fearful debauches, and of wrecked fortunes. It proves once more the power of a strange beauty united to an indomitable will and high ambition, and reaffirms the maxim one hears so often, that "Paris est le ciel des femmes et l'enfer des hommes." MALAKOFF.

AFFAIRS IN KANSAS.

Proceedings of the Free-State Men in Ossawatomie—The Criminal Trials.

Correspondence St. Louis Republican.

We have a new manifesto from the shady side of Kansas politics, in the form of a "preamble and resolutions" from a Convention of citizens in Ossawatomie, Lykens County, K. T., in which they very politely request a Free-State National Democrat, holding office under the "Bogus Legislature," to resign his office, for causes set forth in their resolutions.

Squire WILLIAMS is a New-Yorker, bred and born, but moved here from Pennsylvania in November last. He was appointed in January last to certain judicial offices—one by Gov. GEARY, and one by the Territorial Legislature. He believes the code of Kansas laws, as now modified, to be a reasonable one. But as an office-holder under the "Bogus Legislature," he has incurred the disapprobation of the Republicans among whom he lives, who desire him to purify himself from the imputations of Pro-Slavery or Border-Ruffian proclivities, by telling the Territorial Administration that he is unwilling to hold office under its laws.

The notice is as follows:

MR. L. D. WILLIAMS.—Sir:—We, the committee appointed by the citizens of Ossawatomie, in convention assembled, March 31st, 1857, to wait upon you and all others who have accepted office under the assumed laws of Kansas, and express their wish that you resign, beg leave to present the following preamble and resolutions passed at said convention:

Whereas, It is reported that there are among us men, who, either from a limited knowledge of our affairs, or from little sympathy with our cause, have been prevailed upon by men whose interests are opposed to ours, and whose designs are to reduce us to submission to the demands of those who have murdered our citizens, plundered our property and laid our towns in ashes, and who demand of us to recognize as law the enactments of a mob which was forced upon us in direct subversion of our rights as American citizens by the inhabitants of a neighboring State; and

Whereas, Considering those men who claim to be Free-State men, and who have made oath to enforce the statutes of the so-called Kansas Legislature, as men who say one thing and exert themselves to do another, and as men in whom we can place no confidence whatever; therefore, we, the citizens of Ossawatomie, have

Resolved, That a committe of three be appointed to wait upon such persons as have accepted office from the so-called Kansas Legislature or their appointees, and request of them as the unanimous wish of this community that they at once resign their commissions to the authorities from whence they were derived.

Resolved, That in the event of their refusing we must consider them as spies set over us by our oppressors and as dangerous to our cause, and that we will avoid them in; social and political relation, and that we discountenance in our community all men who acknowledge and uphold the supremacy of Border Ruffian power.

The above, Sir, are some of the considerations which induced the citizens at the above named Convention to take the action they did; and now you having requested of us as a Committee to set forth the reasons which should move you to resign any and all offices you may hold, we have to say in connection with the above,

First, The so-called Legislature which assumes to legislate for Kansas, and whose enactments you are to enforce, and which we are called upon to obey, was elected by an armed mob from a neighboring State, amidst scenes of blood and violence, and in direct opposition to the wishes of a large majority of the actual residents of the Territory and the body of people which are, and have been opposed to these acts of fraud and mobocracy, always have been, and still are in a vast majority in Kansas Territory, and if the people of Missouri were to withdraw their support, and the General Government the countenance it sees fit to accord them; they would scarcely be heard of in the remotest corner of Kansas.

Second, The so called Legislature and laws being thus fraud, and being thus opposed by the majority of the people, who alone have the right to govern, we deny that any one is under any moral obligation to obey the enactments of the so-called Legislature.

Third, The assumed Legislature, being thus a fraud, it proceeded at once to display the spirit of fraud and virulence, by passing such enactments as are oppressive and tyrannical; by making all the offices that are usually elected by the people, and alone responsible to them for their powers and continuance in office, dependent solely upon the will of the so-called Legislature, by imposing test oaths upon voters, a thing unheard of among civilized people; by giving sheriffs, and their other minions of power, the selection of jurors, thus virtually depriving the people of the right of trial by jury, by decreeing the death penalty against any one who shall entice away a slave from hondage, though one may steal fifty times his market value, and escape with a term of years of imprisonment frequently short. Chapter 151, Sec. 4, 5, 6, Page 716."

[The fourth resolution is on freedom of speech.]

"The assumed Legislature passed many other acts, especially designed to deprive the majority of the people of the right of governing, and calculated to perpetuate their own infamous power of tyranny and usurpation; and we hold that any man claiming to be a Free-State man, should crimson with shame when he propcses to enforce the enactments of the so-called Legislature, in view of the source from whence they all emanate, and the enormity of many of their assumed laws.

Fifth, We consider that the acknowledgment of such fraudulent authority is a dangerous precedent which should be guarded against most rigorously and especially by magistrates or persons holding office.

Sixth, We consider that you are indebted to the free-State settlers of this community for the comfortable home you now occupy, and for the bright future prospects you have, and one inducement they had to interest themselves for you was, in relation to the so-called laws, your express declaration that "I have nothing to do with them."

The above we urge as reasons for the request we now make, that you forthwith resign any and all offices you may hold derived from the assumed Legislature of Kansas.

If you see fit not to comply with our request, we shall expect your reply in writing.

We have the honor to be your humble and obedient servants,

GEO. O. ENGLISH,
LEANDERE MARTIN.

OSSAWATOMIE, Kansas, April 14, 1857.

LECOMPTON, Tuesday, May 5.

Judge CATO's Court, which commenced here yesday, last adjourned on account of the non-appearance of grand jurors, was opened at 9 o'clock this morning, when his Honor, Judge CATO, delivered a clear, practical and forcible charge, laying down the general principles of law which should govern them in their presentments, and urging upon them most strenuously to deal fairly, and do justice in every case which might be brought to their notice.

During the first reading of the docket, upon the calling of the Territory of Nobraska vs. WILLIAM UPDEGRAFF, of Lecompton, K. T., and others, WILLIAM STEVENS, Esq., of Mansfield, Ohio, the counsel for the defence, rose and stated to the Court the defendant was in Court and desired to be taken into the custody of the United States Marshal, which was accordingly done, and his bail released. A similar course was pursued in the case of the same party on another indictment. These are both political offences. The crime charged in both cases is for grand larceny—breaking into houses and "pressing goods" belonging to the Pro-Slavery men into "Free-State service." The counsel for defence stated that they were ready to proceed to trial, but the District Attorney informed the Court that the prosecution was not yet prepared.

The celebrated "Hayo case" was called, but the District Attorney stated that they were not prepared for trial. The defendant is here, and declares himself ready for trial. HAYS, it will be remembered, is the alleged murderer of BUFFUM, on the Wakarusa, last Fall. It was out of this case that the difficulty between Judge LECOMPTE and Gov. GEARY sprung up—the point at issue being the propriety of Judge LECOMPTE's action in admitting HAYS to bail.

And now we have given you all that would prove interesting to-day. The treason trials will not come on, in all probability, for some time yet. The criminal docket is a heavy one—say three hundred cases.

Truly yours, BISOF.

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF HEMP FROM KANSAS TERRITORY.—The steamer A. B. Chambers arrived yesterday, having on board, with other freight, 19 bales of hemp, consigned to U. BASIN, by A. B. MILLER, of Leavenworth City. We tried to discover the name of the grower, but did not succeed. His farm is in the vicinity of Leavenworth. This is the first shipment ever made of the article from the Territory. Kansas, before long, may be a rival of this State, in the amount and quality of the hemp which she will export.—St. Louis Democrat

The Newburg Murder.

From the Newburg Daily News, Saturday.

Although the public "excitement" caused by the first announcement of the diabolical murder near this village has in a measure subsided, there has been no let-up in the efforts to ferret out the perpetrators of the foul deed. The Coroner, Sheriff EDWARDS, and officer CLARK, have been unremitting in their exertions to obtain some clue to the identity of the murdered gir

QUARANTINE MATTERS.

Injunction on the Quarantine Commissioners.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term.
Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

David Van Name vs. Obediah Browne, Geo. Holland Egbert Benson, Commissioners, &c.—An injunction was this morning granted by Judge CLERKE, restraining the Quarantine Commissioners from erecting any buildings, &c., at Seguine's Point, returnable on the 21st inst. George White is the plaintiff's attorney. The following is a copy of the

INJUNCTION:

On reading the complaint in this action, duly verified according to law, ordered, that the defendants in this action show cause before me, at a special term of this Court, to be held at the City Hall in the City of New-York, on the 21st day of May inst., at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, why an order should not be made restraining the defendants during the pendency of this action from making, entering into or consummating any contracts for the construction or erection of any hospital buildings, fences or docks, and on the premises near Seguine's Point, in the town of Westfield, Richmond County, recently purchased by them for quarantine purposes, and from paying out any money appropriated in and by an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, entitled "An act for the removal of the Quarantine Station," passed March 6, 1857, three-fifths being present, it was among other things enacted that the Governor of the State should nominate, and with the advice and consent of the Senate, should appoint, three citizens of the State, who should form a Board of Commissioners to perform the duties imposed by said act; and that, in pursuance thereof, the above named defendants were duly appointed, accepted, and became qualified as such Commissioners, and under took the performance of the duties required by the said act aforesaid.

And the plaintiff further shows that the said defendants, under color and pretence of performing the duties so imposed on them by the said act, and more especially by the 21st section thereof, have lately completed the purchase of a tract of land situated in the County of Richmond, at or near a place known as Seguine's Point, being a portion of the farm and premises formerly owned by Joel Wolfe, as a site for Quarantine purposes, whereon to erect hospitals for patients who may be afflicted with the yellow fever or other pestilential diseases, and also a dock and fences for the inclosure thereof, and that the said defendants claim the right of expending not exceeding fifty thousand dollars, under the provisions of the said twenty-first section of said act, for the purpose of making a temporary Quarantine, until the present Quarantine shall be removed to some other place.

And the said plaintiff further shows, that the said defendants, under the provisions of the said act, are permitted to appropriate and pay out public moneys, a portion of which have been contributed and may yet be exacted from the plaintiff, as his proportion of taxes raised and collected in due course of law, for the purpose of providing temporary accommodations for a Quarantine, under the twenty-first section of the said act, to the extent of fifty thousand dollars.

And the said plaintiff further shows that notwithstanding the plain and express directions of the sixth section of the act aforesaid, which requires that the contracts for the erection of each and all of the wharves, buildings, offices, docks and warehouses and the furnishing of the materials for the same, come up later by the said act, and also the plans and specifications for the same, to be made and properly done, should be let at public auction to the lowest bidder, after having been duly advertised for one month in three daily papers in the City of New-York, in the daily paper in the County of Kings, and in one weekly paper in the County of Richmond, yet the said plaintiff shows that the said defendants, in open disregard of such requirements and against the injunctions thereof, are now proceeding to negotiate, and inviting proposals for the construction of hospitals, fences, and a dock upon the said premises, near Seguine's Point, in a manner and form following, as will more fully and particularly appear from an advertisement put forth and signed by them, and first published on the 6th of May, 1857, in the Staten Island Chronicle, a newspaper printed in the County of Richmond, of which the following is a true copy, to wit:

"To Builders.—Sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned, at their office, No. 23 William-street, in the city of New-York, until the 13th day of May, instant, at twelve o'clock at noon, for the construction of, and furnishing of the necessary hospital buildings, fences, and dock, upon premises near Seguine's Point, in the town of Westfield, Richmond County, recently purchased by the undersigned for Quarantine purposes. The plans and specifications for each buildings, fences, and dock, may be seen at the office of the undersigned, upon application to Mr. Snedeker, the Secretary of the Board. The Commissioners reserve the right, if they deem it necessary for the interest of the State, to reject or accept any proposal which may be made. Security will be required for the faithful performance of the contract. GEORGE HALL,
EGBERT BENSON,
O. BOWNE,
Commissioners for the removal of the Quarantine Station.
Dated May 5, 1857."

And the said plaintiff complains and insists that the defendants in proceeding in the manner aforesaid, are violating the trust and duty reposed in them by the said act, and acting in fraud thereof, and that if they proceed to consummate any contract or contracts for the erection of such hospital buildings dock, and fences, or to pay out any money so appropriated in and by the said act, to carry into effect any such contract or contracts, their acts must be illegal and unjust toward the plaintiff and all others who are tax-payers.

Wherefore the said plaintiff applies to this Court, for relief, to restrain them from so proceeding, and for an injunction against erecting any such hospitals, fences, and dock, until they shall have advertised for one month in the manner required in and by the sixth section of the said act, and for such other or further relief as may be consistent with equity and justice, with costs of suit.

GEO. WHITE, Plaintiff's Attorney.

Richmond County, ss.—David Van Name, plaintiff in this action, being duly sworn, says the foregoing complaint is true of his own knowledge. DAVID VAN NAME.

Sworn to this 16th day of May, 1857, before me.
R. P. WELLS, Justice of the Peace.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, MAY 18, 1857.

THE BURDELL MURDER.

Five Thousand Dollars Reward for the Discovery of the Murderer!

The PROPRIETORS of the NEW-YORK TIMES hereby offer a reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS to any person or persons who will furnish them information which shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL.

The Proprietors of the TIMES are prompted to this course by a profound conviction that the regular authorities of the City and State cannot be relied on for such action as the interests of the people demand at their hands, and that the PUBLIC PRESS will in this instance, as in many others, be found the truest representative and most faithful guardian of the Public welfare. The action thus far taken by the officers of the law has signally revealed their utter incompetency and inability to prosecute such an inquiry as it should be carried on. The parties inflicted for the crime have been acquitted by a Jury, and all further efforts to trace it to its author seem to have been abandoned. The Mayor of the City alleges that he has no power to offer a reward for the discovery of the murderer. The Police and other municipal authorities seem to be too much engrossed in disgraceful struggles for power and patronage, to be able to give the requisite degree of attention to the protection of the lives of our citizens; and the Governor of the State has thus far given no indication of a purpose to exercise the power with which he is clothed to promote the ends of justice in this particular instance.

Under these circumstances, unless some action is taken by our citizens, this most horrible and atrocious crime is likely to pass unpunished;—our City must bear the reproach of permitting the most horrible atrocities to be perpetrated with entire impunity; the hundreds and thousands of abandoned ruffians who abound in all large cities are to learn, that any citizen may be assassinated in the most open manner, in his own room, surrounded by the inmates of his own house, in a street every foot of which is occupied by dwellings, at an hour when the utmost silence prevails, and when any unusual noise would be the most likely to attract attention;—and that in spite of all these circumstances the assassin may continue to mingle with the mass of the community, and escape all suspicion of his atrocious guilt. It is the duty of all good citizens, who set a proper value upon the security of life and of property, and who feel any interest in the execution of justice and the prevention of crime, as well as any concern for the honor and reputation of the City, to do everything in their power to prevent such results.

The Proprietors of the TIMES are disposed, in the absence of proper efforts in other quarters, to take the lead in such a movement; and they accordingly offer the above reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS for such information, to be communicated to them in writing, as shall lead to the development of this mystery, and the detection, conviction, and punishment of the parties guilty of this murder. If any doubt shall arise as to the rightful claimant, the money will be paid upon the written award of a majority of the Justices of the Supreme Court for the First Judicial District.

The Proprietors of the TIMES reserve the right of withdrawing this offer whenever the authorities of the City or State shall take proper action calculated to accomplish the same result; and upon so doing they will, if requested by the parties, hand over to the said authorities whatever information may be elicited by this notice.

If any parties who may communicate information on this subject desire that the fact of their having done so should be kept secret, their names will not be disclosed, without their consent. All communications in response to this offer should be addressed, in sealed envelopes, marked "Private and Confidential," to the "EDITOR OF THE NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES."

In consequence of the active and ingenious efforts made by interested parties, through the columns of the Day Book, Herald and Evening Post, as well as in private quarters, to create the impression that the above offer is insincere, we beg to add that any security which may be asked for the payment of the money will be cheerfully given,—and that the $5,000 will be deposited in the Shoe and Leather Bank, if requested, as a preliminary step to the communication of the information which it is designed to elicit. Officers and members of the Police Department, Magistrates, and all other persons who may have the means and the disposition to prosecute this most important inquiry, may rely upon it that the OFFER IS MADE IN THE MOST PERFECT SINCERITY,—and that THE MONEY WILL BE PROMPTLY AND CHEERFULLY PAID UPON THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF THE DESIRED RESULT.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We understand that CHARLES MCILVAINE, Esq., newphew of Bishop MCILVAINE, a member of the bar of this City, and a decided Democrat, goes to Kansas with Governor WALKER as his Private Secretary. Whether he is the gentlemen to whom the Herald of Saturday allnded in saying that Governor W. had appointed "an attaché of a black Republican newspaper as his Private Secretary," we are not aware. Considering that the blnndering Herald nsually publishes as news the exact opposite of the truth, we presume he is. We also learn that the War Department have assigned Major DEAS, Lieut. CARR, and Lieut. WALKER, of the regular Army, as the military aids of the Governor.

The fillibustering operations against Sonora have received a most decided check, if latest advices from the Mexican Capital can be relied upon. It is stated that Col. CRABBE'S California party had been attacked by Mexican troops at Caborca, and forced to surrender at discretion, and that the whole party, numbering sixty, including the Colonel, were to be shot. If the first part of this statement is true, the last part undoubtedly is, also, as it is in perfect accordance with the Mexican method of proceeding in similar cases. The whole story, however, bears the appearance of improbability.

The new Police Commissioners did nothing of particular importance on Saturday. Mayor WOOD has addressed a letter to President DRAPER in which he expresses his regret that the new Board deem it prudent to anticipate the decision of the Court of Appeals by active movements against the present administration of the Police Department of the City. He says it is quite certain that, acting in the capacity of the City and head of the police in possession, and under a joint resolution of the Common Council restricting him, he could not consent to yield up the station-houses and other police property which belongs to the Corporation of New York and which cannot be alienated without its consent under an act of the Legislature which he firmly believes is not law. He asks therefore whether it would not be well for the new Board to employ the coming two months in procuring information and making themselves personally acquainted with the numerous duties essential to a comprehension of the duties before them, assuming the new police law valid.

On Saturday a temporary injunction was obtained by DAVID VAN NAME, against the Quarantine Commissioners, to restrain them from putting up any bulldogs, docks, &c., at the new Quarantine ground at Seguine's Point. The ground on which the injunction is asked is, that the sixth section of the act for the Quarantine removal provides that the Commissioners shall sell the contracts for the work to the lowest bidder, and advertise for such contracts in three daily papers in New-York, one daily paper in Kings, and one weekly paper in Richmond counties. Yet, says the plaintiff, the Commissioners advertised for proposals merely until the 12th inst. He claims a standing in court on the ground of his being a taxpayer, and being interested in the expenditure of his tax-money. The effect of this injunction, provided it holds, will defeat the whole purpose of the Commissioners, as after twenty days, the time fixed for the filing of their answer, it will be too late to attempt the execution of the buildings for any practical use for the present season; but the Commissioners think there are several weak points in the complaint. It has already been decided in the Mayor Wood injunction, that one taxpayer cannot obtain an injunction in his own name. Again, the money to defray the expense of the buildings, &c., does not come from any taxes to be raised out of the citizens, but has been especially provided for by an appropriation of the Legislature; and finally, the Commissioners are not acting under the act recited in the complaint but under the 21st act of the Legislature, from all which they infer that the injunction will fall to the ground.

The Quarantine Commissioners assert that the statement that renewed proposals have been made for the lease to them of Coney Island is not correct. They further say that they have examined the lease referred to, and find insuperable obstacles in the way of using that locality, in the lease itself.

In the Court of General Sessions on Saturday, JOHN E. ENRIGHT, the emigrant runner who was charged with Alderman WILSON and others, with assault and battery on FELIX DUFFY, a voter in the First Ward, on last election day, and who was convicted of the offence, while the Alderman was acquitted, was sentenced by Judge RUSSELL to pay a fine of $100—a lenient sentence, all things considered. But then the services of this class of men are so valuable at election time. Of course the fine was immediately paid. For far lesser offences even boys go to prison. JOSEPH MILLER, who so cruelly beat his young wife to death, pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the third degree, and was sentenced to imprisonment at Sing Sing for four years, and fined $200, being the full extent of the penalty allowed by law. The sentence of PETER ARNESON, who shot a boy in a lager-bier saloon in the Bowery, was postponed. The negro SALTERS, convicted of manslaughter in the fourth degree, was sentenced to the State Prison for two years. DENING will be tried for arson to-day, and the negro DORSAY, for murdering the girl in Worth-street, will be tried on Wednesday.

On Saturday Judge DUER—as the oldest on the bench—was selected by the Judges of the Superior Court to fill the place of the late Chief Justice, THOMAS J. OAKLEY.

A long-shore laborer named PETER WARD, died yesterday at the City Hospital, from the effects of a blow on the head with a handspike in the hands of THOMAS R. FISHER, mate of the schooner William Smith, lying at pier No. 5 North River. FISHER was taken in custody on Saturday, but was soon afterwards released, and yesterday when it was sought to rearrest him, he could not be found.

Four persons were arrested on Saturday, in the act of conveying away quantities of Butcher's offal, with the supposed intention of selling it for human food. They were all fined $10 each for this violation of the city ordinances; two paid up, and two stand committed until they form over.

The deaths in the City for the week ending on Saturday, were: Men, 92; women, 77; boys, 136; girls, 125; total, 430. This is an increase of 28 over the number of the previous week.

Important from Utah—Daring Outrage of the Mormon Government.

One of the most flagrant pieces of lawlessness we have lately been called upon to record, is that the interesting details of which are narrated in our letter from Great Salt Lake City, published this morning. The satellites of BRIGHAM YOUNG,—not satisfied, as in the past, with the perversion of justice by corrupting its fountains and packing juries to find verdicts according to Mormon edicts rather than the law and facts,—have invaded the temple itself, threatened and intimidated the Judge with the ermine upon his shoulders, and broken up and dispersed the Court by force. That this was done with YOUNG'S connivance, if not by his express orders, must be apparent to those who peruse the narrative of our correspondent; for, when asked if he would, as Governor, sustain the Judge in an attempt to execute the laws of the United States, he positively declined, upon the ground that the Court had given him trouble enough already!

Here then is an end even to the forms of the Civil law in Utah; and henceforth that Territory of the United States is entirely subject to the Ecclesiastical law of BRIGHAM YOUNG—to the tyrannical and irresponsible edicts of one who singularly combines the worst qualities of the religious fanatic and the selfish and sensual brigand. Here is successful treason, carried after years of progression to its furthest limit ere a single step is taken by the Government for its suppression. Nor is there yet any assurance that the National Administration are prepared to deal promptly and effectively with the evil. True, they await the answer of a brave and competent man to an invitation to take the troublesome position of YOUNG'S successor; but meanwhile precious time is passing away. Already the grass is well up on the plains, and in a few days more it will be impracticable for troops to start for Utah because they cannot rely upon forage for their animals.

If there is any honest intention to send a force this Summer to vindicate the law at Salt Lake,—if our suffering fellow-citizens upon those distant plains are not intended to be left for another full year to the mercy of the oppressor, entirely without the protection which every citizen should be secured at least upon American soil, if women are to be protected from forcible debauch and men from massacre, it certainly is high time that a force should be under orders for this distant service. No step of the sort has been initiated. Troops are on the march to punish a few marauding Indians in Iowa, and the Cheyennes in New-Mexico. Still others are posted in Kansas to keep the peace during the political struggle pending there: but to this time none have been directed to prepare for an expedition to Salt Lake. We submit that there is too much reason to fear that Mr. BUCHANAN is emulating the supineness of his predecessor, who by a succession of feints and false pretences succeeded all through his term in evading an issue with the outlaws of Utah. If be is in earnest there is yet time for a prompt and energetic movement in behalf of law and order now so shamefully defied; but there is not an hour to lose.

NEW-ENGLAND SUGAR.—The increasing dearness of that necessary luxury of life, sugar, has begun to quicken the wits of scientific men to discover some means of adding to the supply of that commodity, without invoking slave labor. The world is now dependent upon the tropics, and the tropics are dependent upon slaves, for the greater part of the sugar that is produced. Whether any means will ever be discovered of producing sugar in sufficient quantities to relieve mankind from their dependence upon the cane, which will not grow outside of the tropical belt, is a question yet to be solved.

A benevolent old gentleman in Massachusetts, named HUBD, recently died and bequeathed by his will, $5,000, to each of four New-England States, viz: Maine, Massachusetts, New-Hampshire and Vermont, to be judiciously invested, and the income thereof to be applied yearly in giving prizes to promote and encourage the manufacture and refining of sugar within those States.

This was not a mere visionary scheme on the part of Mr. HUBD, as he had been an experimenter in sugar-refining himself, and was the inventor or a method which has been extensively used, besides having been practically engaged in making beet sugar.

The probabilities of producing sugar to any extent in Vermont and New-Hampshire, are not very great, it must be confessed; a greater degree of heat than is ever felt in those regions seems to be absolutely necessary to the production of the saccharine juices in sufficient quantities to make the manufacture of sugar profitable. But something may be done with the new Chinese sugar cane, and even the small premiums which Mr. HUBD'S bequest will afford, may stimulate the ingenuity of some New-England philosopher to discover some means of extracting sugar from New-England soil. But it seems to be almost as hopeless as the attempt to extract sunbeams from cucumbers.

The great profits which speculators and importers of sugar are now making, in consequence of the constant appreciation of prices, will either lead to the production of sugar at home, or else its dearness will cause so great an economy in its use that the effect will be the same, so far as price is concerned, as an increase in the supply. There is no doubt that one of the causes of the present high price of sugar is, that so many of the great capitalists of Europe and America have been, for several years past, engaged in speculating in it. A few great capitalists have monopolized the trade in sugar, and as they have only to hold on to send up prices, there is no limit to the rates which may be attained. It has been stated that one house in this City has made a quarter of a million of dollars by speculating in Manila sugars alone.

The Burdell Murder—Apathy of the Authorities.

If we can judge from the letters which reach us daily, as well as from the expressions of the Country Press, the public at large does not sympathize in the least with the utter apathy and indifference which prevails on the part of both the State and the City Authorities in regard to the Burdell Murder. The manner in which this most extraordinary crime has been treated by those whose solemn duty it was, and still is, to detect its perpetrators, is without a parallel in our history. We assert, without fear of just contradiction, that if the Governor, Mayor, Common Council, Coroner, and all others upon whom devolves the duty of prosecuting and punishing crime, had been bribed by the murderers to pursue precisely such a course as should defeat the ends of justice and screen them by fastening public attention upon other parties, until the popular eagerness for the detection of the murderers should have died away, they could not have labored more effectually for the accomplishment of that end than they have done hitherto. Every step that has been taken turns out to have aided in the concealment, rather than the exposure, of the crime. The public horror and indignation which the deed awakened were turned against particular parties,—and public attention was fastened upon them exclusively for weeks and months.

The whole inquiry was confined to them. All indications of possible guilt, which looked towards others, were utterly disregarded. The whole proceeding took the shape of a crusade against a single woman, and three or four persons who were regarded as her accomplices. Her position certainly exposed her to suspicion, and the authorities only did their duty in holding her for trial. But they are culpable in the highest degree for never having looked beyond her for the authors of the crime,—for not having regarded it as possible that she might be acquitted, and taken steps to prevent the utter defeat of justice in that event. They resolutely shut their eyes to everything else. They left the real murderers the most ample time and opportunity to destroy the tracks of their guilt. And when everything had thus been staked upon the solitary chance of convicting Mrs. Cunningham,—after others, if others were guilty, had effectually removed all chances of detection,—the prosecution breaks down discreditably, the accused woman is almost instantly acquitted, the party indicted with her is set free without the formality of a trial,—and the Authorities, counting upon the apathy and indifference of the public concerning a crime three months old, abandon all pretence of endeavoring to trace it to its author!

We do not wonder that the People of the country districts look upon such proceedings with absolute amazement. They are utterly disgraceful to our City, and are calculated to cast the deepest reproach upon our institutions. If such things had occurred in Mexico, or Cuba, or France, or England—if the pursuit of a murderer had been conducted with such utter inefficiency and abandoned so completely and so suddenly, our Press would have teemed with denunciations of a government so manifestly in league with criminals, and carried on for the exclusive benefit of the enemies of social order.

There is one feature of the action, or rather inaction, of the authorities in this case which especially demands attention—and that is their neglect and refusal to do what is universally done in similar cases, offer a reward for the discovery of the murderer. Why has not this been done? Governor KING finds no difficulty in offering a very handsome reward for the detection of the parties who set fire to a house on Staten Island—and that, too, in advance of any attempt at their detection. Governors have over and over again offered large rewards for the detection of crimes of all grades, perpetrated in any part of the State. Our City authorities have very properly offered rewards for the discovery of the murderer of Policeman HARDENBROOK, and for other criminals of various sorts. Why do they refuse so obstinately to pursue the usual course in this case? It was once proposed in the Common Council to offer a reward of a thousand dollars, but it was voted down: and the reason assigned, that such an offer might look like an interference with the regular course of justice, for a time quieted, if it did not satisfy the public mind. But now that the Courts of law have utterly failed in their endeavors to fasten this crime upon the parties who were at first suspected, why is it that nothing whatever is done to pursue the inquiry? Why does not Governor KING offer a reward for the discovery of the murderer? Why does not the Common Council pursue a similar course? Is it from a belief that it would be fruitless? Even in that event, what possible harm could be done? The State or the City would lose no money. No expense would be incurred. And the world at large would no longer be left to believe that not only is Law utterly powerless, but that the Officers of the Law are utterly apathetic and indifferent in regard to the punishment of crime in the City and State of New-York. But it is ridiculous and imbecile to assume, in advance and as an excuse for inaction, that efforts of this kind would not meet with any success. All experience shows that the hope of reward is the most powerful motive to the exposure and detection of crime. Public officers need its stimulus. Innocent parties who have accidentally become possessed of knowledge on the subject may be induced to disclose it. And even accomplices, especially when they have reason to believe that their aid to the cause of justice will be regarded as a ground for being relieved from punishment themselves, have often been thus encouraged to expose the more guilty criminals. The excuse that no good result could be reached, urged on behalf of the State or the City authorities, is worthless:—it is cowardly and criminal.

The "TIMES" Proprietors have done what little private citizens can do towards remedying the evil effects of this apathy on the part of the public authorities. They have themselves offered a reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS for information that shall lead to the detection and conviction of the murderer. This action on their part elicits various comment, which is important mainly as betraying the character of those who make it. By those who have no interest in misrepresenting or misjudging it, it is treated as a laudable indication of public spirit,—as evincing a williagness—sufficiently rare it must be confessed, to be a matter of some surprise,—to sacrifice something for the public good. The immediate newspaper rivals of the TIMES endeavor openly to defeat an effort which we should be very glad to have them share. And the Pharisees of the press, like the Boston Courier, which are far too holy in their own conceit to concede the possibility of honesty of purpose, or of endeavor, in any other members of the profession which they adorn, denounce it as an "advertising dodge," and a most unwarantable profanation of the mysteries of the Burdell murder! All this is very harmless and very absurd. We presume the Proprietors of the TIMES claim no superiority over the rest of the world in the disinterestedness of their motives, nor have we any reason to believe that they pretend to any special exaltation of views and intentions in their offer of this reward. They have probably found that nothing is more certain to prove its own reward, especially to a Newspaper, than a marked service to the Public. The London Times never served itself better than when it expended some $10,000 in detecting and exposing a gigantic crime, perpetrated upon sundry merchants of London. Probably the expectation of receiving some credit and consequent profit from this movement, mingled with its motives for undertaking the task:—but neither the British Press nor the British public was so unreasonable or so malicious as to disparage its efforts on that account. If the TIMES' offer of a Reward should lead to the detection of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL, its Proprietors will unquestionably be abundantly rewarded for the expenditure of the $5,000 which they will gladly pay to the informant through whose agency it may be brought about. If the offer fails of success, they lose no money—even if they do no good. We should be obliged, therefore, to some of our most captious cotemporaries if they would inform us what harm will be done in either case, and if they will induce the authorities to offer the same reward, the TIMES will most cheerfully retire from the field and leave the matter in the hands to which it properly belongs.

Reformatory Convention.

Thirty-three years ago, Mr. J. W. GERARD, then a young man, arose in a New-York Court to defend the case of a boy, accused of stealing a canary-bird. Having tried in vain certain legal quibblings for his young client, he fell back on an eloquent appeal to the Jury, based on the certainty that the poor lad, if he was convicted and sent to the Bridewell or the Penitentiary, would come forth an accomplished rogue, and ruined for life. This result was common and well known. The Jury felt the force of the appeal, and on the alleged ground of the technical defence, acquitted the boy. The final issue was, as might be expected, that the young thief grew up a vagabond and died in State's Prison. From this case, arose in the mind of Mr. GERARD and others, the strong conviction of the necessity of a Reformatory Institution for young criminals, which was finally embodied in the New-York House of Refuge, the father of the numerous similar Institutions through most of the States of the Union.

On Tuesday last a Convention of Delegates from the greater part of the Houses of Refuge and Schools of Reform, from Maine to Louisiana, met in the new Chapel of the New-York House of Refuge on Randall's Island. The objects were to see what had been accomplished by the original institution in New-York, through which 7,000 young criminals or vagrants have passed, and to communicate information to each other in regard to the respective systems and modes of reform. Delegates were present from Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Missouri, Louisiana and other States. The occasion was certainly novel, and among the many Anniversaries and Conventions, this is probably the first which has ever met in this country for such an object. We rejoice at it, and shall take pleasure in chronicling and commenting on its proceedings. It shows that the great subject of dealing with the younger criminal class has become not merely a matter of philanthropic sympathy, but a matter of science—something on which acute and expanded minds can reflect, and in which great principles can be discovered and applied.

The subject of Punishment and Reform is an exceedingly difficult one. How far vices can be cut off by the sharp stroke, and how far good principles can be sown in place of the evil; to what degree man in his diseased condition can be trusted without being made to feel the full consequences of wrong doing; where mercy should end and where severity begin—these are all no light problems. It is easy to advise all gentleness and softness towards the criminal, and still easier to cast the wretched transgressor to condign and pitiless punishment; but on one side it will not do to leave out Fear from human motives, and on the other, penalty alone, with no system of prevention or reformation, is of little use. The whole subject needs the soundest judgment and the most humane feeling for its thorough treatment. One thing at least is settled in the especial cause which these gentlemen assembled in Convention represent—the world now allow that mere prison-penalty for youthful offenders is a failure. This step humanity has made almost in the last quarter of a century. Government and Society do not act up to this, but this is through the most civilized countries public opinion. "No prison-bars and convict-cells for boys and girls," say now all the wisest and most humane of Europe and America, "but try the young outcast and criminal with kindness, with hopeful labor, with Christianity!" The old penitentiaries, where young ruffians got their first lessons in thieving, burglary, robbery, obscenity and slang, from mature scoundrels, which were little academies of villainy, and Normal Schools of crime, are now, in theory at least, exploded. The boy or girl who has erred from the path, is not looked upon as at once a fit companion for old graduates of vice; it is felt that society has much of the blame; that their circumstances have been unhappy, and that better circumstances may yet restore them. New motives are applied, new influences brought to bear; the child is placed in a "House of Refuge," or a "Reform-School," where kind faces meet him, where industry is the habit, and patient teaching rather than blows, is to fit him for society again. Government takes up the young street-vagabond, who has violated law, and instead of dropping him into a convict's cell, places him kindly at school and in honest industry. This is the simple idea of these Juvenile Reformatories. That many of them have often wandered from this principle, is most true, as we shall see in examining hereafter the reports of these institutions; that others have added to this idea certain very admirable principles of discipline is also true, as we hope to show; but the grand principles are simply—giving work and education instead of punishment to young offenders.

What could be more reasonable or more humane? We wish success and a useful deliberation to those, now for the first time met in convention, for the purpose of considering such important interests.

Commerce and Art.

There are hundreds of our countrymen now weekly taking their departure for Europe, and thousands more have the trip in contemplation. Of these, one-third are probably old travelers, to whom European highways and by-ways are tolerably familiar, and upon whom all hints as to what to see or how to see it, would be thrown away. Another third are probably about to "do" Europe, and any suggestion that increases the amount of labor they have to get through, would in all likelihood not be very welcome. But we may safely conclude that the remaining third are sincerely anxious to mingle profit of the highest kind with the best and purest pleasures. To such we can promise a treat, in that place of all others, in Europe, in which associations, past history, and current prejudices would lead most people least to expect a treat of the kind—in Manchester, the headquarters of cotton, the pet illustration of all declaimers upon the wrongs of labor and the miseries of English workingmen, is this Summer to contain and exhibit such a collection of paintings as has never before been seen, and such as this generation will probably not have another opportunity of enjoying.

Manchester has got fairly through the worst phase in a career of commercial prosperity. She has triumphed in a very arduous struggle, and is now enabled to devote herself heart and soul to the enjoyment of the victory. There could hardly be a better proof of the falsehood of the charge so often brought against commercial pursuits and democratic opinions, of destroying a taste for literature and the arts, and so absorbing men in the worship of gain as to deprive them of all relish for sensuous or intellectual enjoyment, than is afforded by the history of this city. Her population is as free from any tinge of the aristocratic element as that of any town in the United States. Hard-fisted weavers from the Lancashire moors and Yorkshire hills, Puritans of the sternest mould, and Radicals of the deepest dye, ever since the days of OLIVER and his Roundheads, have built her mills and filled her warehouses. Two centuries have passed since the population of that region repudiated the doctrine of divine right and forsook the parish churches. The sternest opposition which has ever been offered in England to oligarchical government, and the most strennous support ever received by non-conformity, have always been met with in the smoky valleys between the Mersey and the Humber. Strange as the assertion may seem, a lord is an animal almost as little known and as little valued amongst the Bradford woolcombers and the Manchester spinners as amongst the New-England farmers, and whenever the day comes which shall see the triumph of Democratic opinions in England, the great district of Northumbria will certainly contribute to the national councils the quota of representation least tainted by any trace or tradition of the old régime.

A hundred years ago he would have been considered a rash prophet who would have foretold that this race of hurly, cock-fighting, bull-baiting, hard-headed and parsimonious mechanics would not simply build up, in the course of half a century, the manufacturing metropolis of the world, but have connected its name with some of the greatest talents in arts and literature and statesmanship. Manchester originated the Anti-Corn Law League, the most powerful political association founded on so narrow a basis, which the world has ever witnessed; and better still, she supplied the clear heads, the unflagging energy, and the sledge-hammer eloquence which achieved its triumphs.

The defeat of professional politicians, laden with University lore, and armed with the experience and traditions of hereditary statesmanship, by a handful of mill-owners, fresh from the counting-house and the workshop, was a spectacle not easily forgotten. That which Manchester will afford this Summer will be one still more remarkable. Those who have been forced to acknowledge that commerce can supply ready tongues and sharp tools for the former, must now accord it that praise to which, of all others, it has been supposed in modern times, despite the lessons of antiquity, to be least entitled—the praise of appreciating as well as encouraging the fine arts. The collection of paintings, as well as of objects of virtu, has been arranged upon a principle, we believe, not hitherto adopted. The works of all the masters, both ancient and modern, are exhibited in chronological order, from the dawn of art to the present day.

Certainly so large a number of good specimens of the various schools has never before been got together. The leading connoisseurs and collectors, all over the United Kingdom, have stripped these galleries and drawing-rooms of treasures which have hitherto been guarded from the public eye with the most watchful jealousy. Works of incalculable value have thus found their way into the exhibition; and the fact that nothing could compensate the owner for their loss or damage, is a striking proof of the confidence as well as the liberality of the lenders. One curious discovery has been made by the preparations for the exposition, and that is, that many of the finest paintings in England are possessed by merchants and manufacturers in and about Manchester, who of late years have been the highest bidders and largest buyers at all the leading sales. This is a striking indication of the tendency of Art in modern times, to desert her old friends, the territorial aristocracy, for the lords of the mill and the mine.

Another Collision at Sea.

The collision between the American packet-ships Andrew Foster and Tuscarora, in the Irish Channel, is another instance of that reckless style of navigation of which we have had, of late, many disastrous examples. The Andrew Foster, a fine ship of 1,800 tons register, sailed from New-York on the 1st of last month for Liverpool. On the 28th, at midnight, when off Holyhead, the weather being mild and the atmosphere clear, she came in collision with the packet-ship Tuscarora, bound out from Liverpool to Philadelphia. These ships, we understand, were standing through the crowded Channel on opposite tacks, under full sail, no lights up, and very likely no lookouts on the forecastle. They struck bows on, and with such force that the Andrew Foster sunk almost immediately, her officers and crew escaping from the wreck in their boats, which were soon picked up by a coasting schooner, while the Tuscarora kept on her course without offering any assistance to the sinking ship.

By this piece of culpable carelessness, which is characteristic of our maritime management now-a-days, one ship has been seriously damaged, while another valued at $100,000, with her cargo valued at $175,000, has been totally lost. To this inventory would have been added, in all probability, the loss of the thirty-eight persons comprising the ship's company, who took to the boats—had it not been for the fortunate circumstances of a smooth sea and mild weather attending their embarkation. There were no passengers in the Andrew Foster. But had there been any, some of their lives would doubtless have been sacrificed in the panic and confusion caused by the collision, as is generally the case. Such a result, we must say, would have been beneficial in one sense. It would have attracted more attention to this disaster than it is likely now to receive, and it might have induced a judicial investigation into another case of wholesale manslaughter upon the high seas. But as this disaster was a bloodless one, it will probably be turned over to the insurance companies without causing any unhealthy disturbance of the public sympathy.

We cannot, after all, object to this disposition of it. Nor can we object to a continuance of these bloodless experiments in the reckless sailing of ships, so long as the Underwriters are willing to pay the expenses, and the public are not called to mourn over a loss of life. The Underwriters have this whole matter in their own control, and a frequent and expensive repetition of these disasters may eventually awaken them to the necessity of curing an evil which costs them so much to maintain. If they will insure property at sea which is under the charge of men who habitually drive their ships through thick and thin, without any regard to consequences; who press on their course in the blackest night and through the most crowded highways of the ocean, reckless of any dangers that may be lurking in the darkness ahead—we can feel no sympathy for their losses.

To abate the recklessness with which our ships are sailed, and to supplant rashness with prudence on the quarter-deck, can now be easily done by our Marine Insurance Companies. If they should make it a condition of every policy that the ship to be insured shall display a bright conspicuous light every night at sea, and shall keep a sharp look-out from the forecastle not only at night, but in all thick weather, and especially when off the land—the number of collisions at sea, now yearly increasing, will rapidly diminish, and we shall hear no more of such disasters as that which lately befell the Lyonnais, and but just now the Andrew Foster.

THE LATE JUDGE OAKLEY.—In Dr. HAWKS Church, (Calvary,) yesterday morning, Rev. Dr. PRATT, officiating in the absence of the Rector, (who is on a visit to North Carolina, his birth-place,) made a touching allusion in his sermon to the loss which had been sustained by this Church, of which the late Judge OAKLEY was a member, in the death of that eminent man and devout Christian. The affliction of his family, the grief of the profession of which he was an ornament, was shared by this congregation and the community at large. His compeers at the bar had borne testimony to his talents as a jurist, the powers of his mighty intellect, his upright bearing in public life, and his social qualities in private; but nothing of all that was said of him, was so great an encomium as what had been observed by one of the oldest and most eminent members of the bar, who had known him intimately all his life, that through all his long career, he never forgot his religion. Of him, if any one, it might be said:

"The sahes of the just Smell sweet, and blossom in the dust."

He had been taken away from them in the fullness of his years, before he had reached that unpleasant period of life at which he could be said to have survived his usefulness, to enjoy a Christian's reward through eternity. The Clergyman pointed to him as an example to be followed. The upright are always prepared for death. For them, the briefer life, the earlier Immortality.

☞ There was a meeting at Morrisania, Westchester County, this other evening, to sustain the recent acts passed by the Legislature, especially the new Excise law. The large hall in which the meeting was held was crowded with influential residents of the neighborhood. Mr. STEPHEN ANGEL occupied the Chair, and Mr. W. T. B. MILLIKEN and others delivered addresses. A Committee of thirty was appointed to sustain the law.

The Staten Island Expenditures—The Quarantine Question.

Staten Island, S. I., May 16, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: The article in your paper of this date, headed "Quarantine Incendiaries," I think reflects unjustly on a portion of the Island.

If you say that "the success of the Princess Bay incendiaries has inspired the people at the opposite end of Staten Island with an ambition to emulate their fellow-example." This evidently is a mistake, for long before the burning of the "Wolfe" property, incendiaries were at work in the vicinity of Stapleton and Tompkinsville; there has been but one fire there since the one that occurred on the Wolfe farm; prior to that there were several, and that too within the past sixty days. It is to be deplored at all times when men take the law into their own hands, but in justification of the people of Princess Bay, you have yet to look at the acts of several of our States, who refuse to obey the laws of the land, and also to the teachings of several clergymen, who stimulate people thus to act.

In their hasty zeal, people apply the torch to what they consider and know would be a nuisance to them; the act is one which all regret, but they look upon it in the same light, as they would driving from their homes the midnight robber. Their all is here invested, and to say to them, move away from the pestilence, is like telling the drowning man to catch at a straw. They are not rich, or able to go where they please and when they please; but I will say this for them, (having lived in their midst for a number of years,) that more kind-hearted, honest upright people do not exist on the face of the earth.

While the public consider the reason of the Commissioners going to so poor a location as Seguine's Point, a place not adapted in any respects for a Quarantine, I think public sympathy will be in favor of the people.

The property purchased has been in the market for sale for some time, which was known to one if not more of the Commissioners, and was negotiated for sixty days prior to the passage of the act; and three days (as the records show) after the passage of the act, the purchase was made.

Why this hasty action? It gives rise to the question who were the purchasers and by whose authority was it made?

Do you suppose for a moment that the purchase would have been made on mere speculation, on the rise of land in that vicinity, without the aid of Quarantine? No, never; for the last five years the property has been offered, and no purchaser could be found at the price paid by the Commissioners.

With the Quarantine, the balance of the farm (83 acres) not sold for Quarantine purposes was laid out in town lots, with the expectation that a handsome sum would be realized from the sales of the same; or, perhaps, the State might require a little more land ere long.

If the proposed change is but temporary, why not put one or more hulks and place them in the lower bay for yellow fever patients? This could be done at far less expense than the proposed measure at Seguine's Point. But, no; this is never considered, though it is done in London and Liverpool, and why not here? Coney Island, a far more eligible site than the proposed one, has been offered, and why not accept it? No, they say you have committed an act which will compel us to go to Seguine's Point, though we know it is not a proper place, and that millions of dollars and hundreds if not thousands of lives will be sacrificed.

But, Gentlemen Commissioners, be careful what you do; the people you are sacrificing (not for the public good) will not submit, and if your measures are carried out, I fear that more lives will be lost than were ever lost by yellow fever in one season at Quarantine. You say the supremacy of the laws must be maintained, but is it politic to force a law that you know to be unjust, and could have been and can still be enforced in a locality far less objectionable to all?

Ask the disinterested parties residing in the vicinity of the present Quarantine, and they will tell you they all sympathize with the people of the south side of the Island. They say themselves they would not submit; can you, therefore, expect those who are to have their homes destroyed, and their children cut down by the pestilence to submit? No, never. We are poor, 'tis true, but we love our homes and our children, and will make any sacrifice to protect them. HUGUENOT.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—This establishment reopens its portals to-night under the direction of Signor MORELLI for a short season of three nights. The experiment is made for the purpose of introducing Mr JACOPI, a young American tenor, who has recently returned from Italy to the American public. Miss. DE WILHORST is also engaged, and thus we shall have an American tenor and an American soprano in the same opera which, unhappily, is "Verdi's Trovatore." Signor ALDISI and Signora MORELLI and GASPARONI also assist.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Mr. WALLACK, Sen., continues his engagement here during the present week, and appears each night in one of his favorite impersonations. To night, SHERIDAN KNOWLES' popular play of the "Wife," is to be performed, with a cast that includes the entire strength of the company.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—The Ravels and their double company continue their successful performances at this house, and present three of their best pieces to-night—"Nicodemus," the "Elopement," and "Pongo, the Intelligent Ape."

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Mr. CHARLES READE'S play of "Nature and Art," (adapted and appropriated by Mr. CONWAY,) will be played here to-night, together with the show-piece called "Variety."

BURTON'S THEATRE—Mr. EDWIN BOOTH sustains the principal character in KNOWLES' play of the "Wife" to-night. The afterpiece is "Mischief Making."

BROADWAY THEATRE.—The grand legendary and scenic drama of "Faustus" will be produced here to-night, in the usual style of splendor for which this house is celebrated. It will occupy the entire evening, and will be sufficient to repay any one for a visit.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—"The Wild Knight," "Asphodel," and "A Day in Paris," are the three very attractive pieces presented by Manager POEDY to his patrons to-night.

AMERICAN MUSEUM.—"Neighbor Jackwood"—the most successful drama produced at this house for some years, will be repeated to night and during the week. See the advertisements.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.—The burlesque version of the "Trovatore" will be revived here to-night with other entertainments.

READINGS.—Miss TERESA ESMONDE, a young lady of marked ability, will give a poetical, biographical and historical entertainment to-night, concerning TOM MOORE and his poetry, at the Stuyvesant Institute. Those interested in the subject will be amply gratified by surrendering their attention to Miss ESMONDE.

CONCERT.—The Concert for the benefit of Miss ADA ROBINSON—a lady who proposes to visit Italy for the cultivation of her voice—takes place to-morrow evening at Niblo's Saloon. Signor MOSELLI, Mr. WM. MASON, Mr. CROUCH, and Mr. MOLLENHAUER, will assist Miss ROBINSON.

THE NEW POLICE COMMISSIONERS—WHAT THEY DID ON SATURDAY—LETTER FROM MAYOR WOOD.—The new Police Commissioners are very busy. They hold protracted meetings daily, at the office of President DRAPER, in Pine-street. Mr. SAMUEL BOSWORTH, whom they appointed Clerk on Friday, is an ex-member of Assembly, and a resident of the Ninth Ward. He belongs, or did belong, to the "North American" Party. The Commissioners, at their meeting on Saturday, made arrangements for the distribution of their laws and regulations among the Police, and in further developing and discussing their plan of operations. They continued the consideration of a new and permanent place of meeting, but did not, we believe, arrive at any definite conclusion. Many of the Police Captains of this City, it is positively known, are favorable to the new Commission, and await only a fitting time to publicly declare their adherence. Chief of Police FOLKS, of Brooklyn, it is asserted, has had an understanding with the new Commissioners, satisfactory to both parties. The Commissioners appear satisfied with their progress, and are sanguine that all the Police Captains will obey orders from head-quarters when desired to do so.

The following letter to SIMEON DRAPER sufficiently explains itself:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 16, 1857.

SIR: Having succeeded in placing the question as to the constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police Bill on the road to a speedy disposition in the Court of Appeals, I regret to find that the Board of which you are Chairman, deem it prudent to anticipate that decision by active movements against the present administration of the Police Department of the City.

As you are aware, the case will be argued next month in that Court, and a final decision on the whole matter in controversy may be had by the first of July, assuming that the decision will be in your favor, which I do not for an instant deem it possible, would it not employ the Commissioners and their immediate subordinates exclusively the whole of the intervening time in becoming familiar with the system and its practical operation, without disturbing the force or its command? The confidence that so much is to be learned before persons unpractised in the complex machinery, can become sufficiently conversant with it to comprehend and administer it efficiently, that at least two months will be required for this purpose. Will it not be better to so employ that time, and thus to avoid any unpleasant contest or jeopardy of the public interests which may ensue from an assumption of authority which may not be acquiesced in? I stated to you, in conversation a day or two since, that if this course was pursued, it would give me pleasure to afford every facility at my command to enable you to procure this information. I now repeat the offer, with a hope that it may be accepted in the same conciliatory spirit in which it is tendered. Your Board can then have the benefit of any experience I may have had, which will serve to some extent to qualify them for the arduous and responsible duties which will devolve upon them, in case the law shall be declared valid.

I can conceive of nothing more detrimental to the public welfare, than a conflict of authority between yourselves assuming to be head of the Police in prospective, and myself as Mayor of the City and head of the Police in possession.

It is quite certain, that acting in the former capacity, and under a joint resolution of the Common Council restricting me, I could not consent to yield up the station-houses and other Police property which belongs to the Corporation of New York, and which cannot be alienated without its consent, under an act of the Legislature, which I firmly believe is not law. Taking this view of my duty, I consider that much unpleasant controversy, and it may be open conflict of jurisdiction, may be avoided by following the course thus indicated by me. Will it not be well to do so, and for your Board to employ the coming two months in procuring information and making themselves personally acquainted with the numerous details essential to a comprehension of the duties before them, assuming the law valid?

Very respectfully, your ob't servant,
FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

SIMEON DRAPER, Esq.

MARINE MATTERS.

The Isabel at Savannah, from Key West, May 10, brings advices of the loss of the American ship Helen K. Booker, Capt. OLIS, of Bath Me. This ship is from Cardiff, Wales, with a cargo of 1,050 tons of railroad iron, bound to New-Orleans, and struck on Elbow Key, a few miles west of Carysfort Lighthouse, at 4 o'clock P. M., May 1. Assistance was promptly furnished by a number of vessels, which went alongside the ship and received 300 tons of her cargo. When at high water a heavy strain put upon a hawser attached to the ship's best bower, carried her into deep water, she was moored from her position and the pumps set to work. The ship leaking freely, it soon became evident that she could not be kept afloat, and she was allowed to again ground, in order that her cargo might be saved. It is now thought the ship will go to pieces, as the sea is running high and the waves breaking heavily around the vessel, but her cargo will be saved. Capt. OLIS has consigned the cargo to JAMES FILOR.

The lighter, with the cargo saved from the vessel, arrived at Key West on the 7th.

The bark Philah, Captain SRAFFORD, of New-York, from New-Orleans, bound to Rottenburg, with 795 bales of cotton and 100 bbds. tobacco, ran ashore upon the northeast part of Tortugas Shoal on the 6th of May, at 2 o'clock. Several wrecking vessels had arrived at Key West with portions of the cargo. One hundred and eighty bales of cotton had been taken out, when the vessel was got afloat and hauled along side the wharf. She is badly injured, and will probably be condemned. The cargo is uninjured.

The British Ship Muster, which put into Key West in distress, and nailed again for Liverpool in February last, after receiving two steam-pumps, arrived out safely, but with eight feet of water in the hold; one of the pumps having given out. By the accident and detention of this ship her cotton brought four cents per pound more than it would had she made the usual passage, owing to a rise in cotton of that amount. This advance pays all the expenses of detention and repairs.

MEMORANDA.—KEY WEST, April 28.—Schooner Kinnington, GRAY, New-York, encountered a severe gale on the voyage out, los boat, sails, rigging, and sprung a leak; some of the cargo was damaged. Vessel discharged and received temporary repairs, and is now ready to sail for Tampa, her port of destination. Bark R. H. Gamble, POWELL, for New-York, had experienced a succession of gales on the voyage; on the 6th one of the crew was crushed by a falling spar, and on the 7th PETER QUINN fell overboard and was lost. Pilot boat Edward Jones, JONES, arrived from Baltimore. 29th—Steamer Scottish Chief, CARPENTER, Baltimore, bound to the Isthmus of Tehuantepic, owing to some defects in her boiler has been detained, and is now undergoing repairs.

The Pilot Commissioners have had a meeting with reference to the additional duties devolved on them by the Legislature in the matter of removing obstructions in the harbor and upon the piers of this City. They have proposed to state the situation of affairs to the Governor. There being no response from the merchants, or the Chamber of Commerce, by way of providing the needful funds, operations must remain suspended. They now estimate the expense of carrying out the new provisions at near $10,000. Mr. ABRAM TURNURE will probably be their Superintendent.

☞ Captain JOSEPH TINKHAM, who was appointed one of the Board of Port Wardens, but failed to qualify, preferring to retain his post as one of the old Marine Surveyors, has been superseded by Capt WILLIAM A. ELLIS, whom the Governor has appointed in his place. Captain ELLIS has been Inspector of Vessels for the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company for several years.

The Chamber of Commerce Committee, whose business it was made to consult counsel upon the legal points of the Port bill, it is said will report to that body at their next meeting.

Naval.

The U. S. steam-frigate Wabash was at Aquadilla, P. R., on the 1st of May, recruiting; all hands well, and would sail again next day.

About the 1st of June proximo, the Navy Department will dispatch, from the Brooklyn Navy-Yard, a fine clipper-ship with stores for the United States squadron now in the Chinese seas. About the 20th of this month the store-ship Release will sail from the same point for Aspinwall, with stores for the Pacific and Home squadrons. Those desiring to send letters to persons in either of these squadrons by these opportunities should forward them promptly to the care of the Naval Lyceum, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The steamer Corwin, Lieut. CRAVEN, arrived at Key West April 29, having finished the Hydrographical survey of that part of the reefs and channels adjacent to Bahia Honda Keys.

Committee on Avenue Extension.

The Committee of the Board of Councilmen on Streets met in the Council Room, City Hall, on Saturday afternoon, (Councilman BOOLE in the chair,) to hear all parties interested in the matter of the extension of Sixth-avenue from Minetta-lane to Canal-street. The matter had been referred to this Committee at a recent meeting of the Board.

Several property owners were present. It was stated that the proposition, if carried out, will intersect ten or fifteen blocks on the line of the old York road, and create several "gores." Two gentlemen addressed the Committee at some length on behalf of the promoters and of the opponents of the measure. Petitions were presented at former meetings of the Committee both in favor and against the measure. Mr. JOHN H. POWER, a property owner on Sixth-avenue, said it was unquestionable that Broadway would be materially relieved by the proposed extension. He was willing to be assessed any reasonable amount to secure it.

The Committee then took up the inquiry as to what is to be done in the matter of widening Laurens-street, in preference to widening Wooster-street. A petition was read embodying this recommendation. Mr. W. B. WINDSOR addressed the Committee in favor of the measure; after which the Chairman said that he thought that the Committee would gain little by hearing further remarks on another day. He would suggest that if another meeting were asked, that next meeting would be the final.

It was decided to adjourn until Tuesday next, at 2 o'clock, when both propositions will be taken up.

The Theatre Question—Mr. Bellows' Syllogism.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In speaking of Dr. BELLOWS' argument upon Theatres, HENRY WARD BEECHER says:

"There is a middle term left out which no ingenuity can supply, and without which the argument cannot be saved from ridicule."

A correspondent of yours in to day's TIMES comes to the Rev. Doctor's rescue, and proceeds to supply such "middle term," by quoting from the address as follows:

"Major—Amusements are necessary to moral health.

Minor (or middle term)—Theatres are the most amusing of amusements.

Conclusion—Therefore, theatres ought to be countenanced by Christians."

I think, after all, the majority of your readers will side with Mr. BEECHER, as if that be the potent "middle term," like an only pier upon which to bridge over the gulf which separates church from theatre-goers, I fear the great body of the former, at least, will decide that the pier is a great deal too near the shore, and not in the middle of the stream at all. But in order to help your correspondent, and perhaps the Rev. Dr. also, I propose to plant another pier, to equalize distances and render the bridge a perfectly mechanical structure.

What say the friends of the drama to the following:

1. Amusements are necessary to moral health.
2. Theatres are the most amusing of amusements.
3. Christianity and theatres perfectly harmonize in their moral teachings and influence.

Conclusion—Therefore theatres should be countenanced by Christians.

The three propositions being established, the conclusion is inevitable. Are the friends of the theatre prepared to assert the third? Doubtful. If not, are they battling for an ideal institution, existing only in their imagination? If so, all I have to say is, that an attempt to inaugurate sanctified theatres by patronizing present ones, seems akin to the policy of putting "new wine into old bottles." AUSTIN.

"Indagator" on H. W. Beecher—A String of Syllogisms.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

NUMBER ONE.

Major—"Amusements are necessary to moral health.

Minor—The theatre is the most amusing of amusements.

Conclusion—Therefore, the theatre ought to be countenanced by all Christians"—or, more correctly stated, is necessary to moral health.

NUMBER TWO.

Major—Stimulants, i. e., substance containing stimulue, are necessary to physical health.

Minor—Alcohol is the most stimulating of stimulants.

Conclusion—Therefore, alcohol should be drank by all.

NUMBER THREE.

Major—Food is necessary to animal life.

Minor—Lambs' tails are the richest kind of food.

Conclusion—Therefore, lambs' tails should be eaten by all.

NUMBER FOUR.

Major—Syllogisms establish sound conclusions.

Minor—The above are syllogisms.

Conclusion—Therefore, all men ought to go to the theatre, drink whisky, and eat lambs' tails.

NUMBER FIVE.

Major—Men of gumption reason correctly.

Minor—The writer [grant] and "Indagator" are men of gumption.

Conclusion—Therefore, the theatre is a glorious institution—Mr. BEECHER to the contrary notwithstanding.

If any doubt the correctness of our reasoning, we would refer them to WHATELY on "Undistributed Middle." COMMON SENSE.

Marketing by Weight.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I read, with much satisfaction, your article in Saturday's TIMES, "Selling Potatoes by Weight." The law for the benefit of all, especially the poor, ought to be strictly enforced, if it is constitutional.

Eggs should be sold by weight. There is one-half difference in the size of eggs and a poor woman, who has three or five children to feed, may buy a dozen of eggs, and get only half the weight of the next dozen bought by a rich man. Let us see to it, that eggs are sold by weight.

People make a mistake in paying too much for potatoes. There is more nourishment in one bushel of good white beans, than in five bushels of potatoes; and what is better than bean soup, or more palatable than good, old-fashioned "bean porridge?" The "Age of Beans" should be revived, as well for economy as for health. POLE.

Coroner's Inquests.

SUICIDE OF A STRANGER.—An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner GAMBLE at the Fourth Ward Station house, upon the body of an unknown man who died the previous evening at No. 4 James street, from some corrosive poison which he took a short time before. He called at the house No 4 James-street, which is a lodging house, about 6 o'clock Saturday evening, and asked to be accommodated with lodgings. The landlord replied that he was full and could not accommodate him. The stranger then said, "I am sorry—I am very sick," and turned to go out. Just as he stepped upon the step he staggered and fell, as if in a fit. A physician was sent for, who, on arriving in a few moments afterwards, pronounced the man to be dead. The body was removed to the Fourth Ward Police Station-house. Dr. O. HANLON made a post mortem examination of the body. A white powder was found within the mouth, and within the stomach was a large quantity of the same material. The stomach was greatly corroded and presented a very singular appearance. The Doctor was of opinion that the deceased came to his death by taking corrosive poison. The verdict rendered by the Jury was "Suicide by taking corrosive poison." The deceased was about 55 years of age, five feet eight inches high, gray hair, and whiskers all round the face. He was plainly but not poorly clad.

BODY FOUND.—The body of JOHN MEREDITH, who had been missing for about a month, was found on Saturday, in the East River, at the foot of Cortlandt-street. Coroner GAMBLE held an inquest upon the body. Verdict, "Supposed drowning." Mr. MEREDITH was a native of Ireland, and about 54 years of age.

ARREST OF BURGLARS.—Henry Scott alias "Scotty," and Thomas Healy, alias "Irish Tom," were captured on Saturday night by officers Healy and Dunn of the Seventeenth Ward Police for a burglary committed on last Thursday night, when they entered the premises of Wm. Hefner, No. 157 Lndlow-street, and stole therefrom two gold watches one silver watch, a gold chain, finger rings and some articles of wearing apparel. They were seen by Mr. Heiner to leave his house. He gave an alarm, but the fellow escaped and eluded arrest until Saturday. They were taken yesterday, before Justice WOOD, who committed them for trial.

The semi-annual meeting of the New-York State Temperance Society will be held at Albany on the 16th and 17th of June.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.—IN BUYING such an article as a sewing machine the truest economy is to buy the best. They who purchase SINGER'S machines always get what they want, and use them with satisfaction and profit; while they who buy any of the cheaper and inferior machines in the market are sure to suffer disappointment, vexation and loss.
J. W. SINGER & CO.,
No 323 Broadway.

CARPETING.—ROYAL VELVET, 10s. TO 12s per yard; Brussels, 7s. 6d. to 9s.; Tapestry Ingrain 4s to 5s. 6d.; oil cloths, 8 yards wide, for rooms or halls from 3s. to 10s. the yard. Also, 1,000 pieces Common Ingrain Carpeting from auction, from 2s. to 3s. 6d. the yard; Gold Window Shades, Canton Matting, &c.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

Transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (8th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURG, FORT WAYNE & CHICAGO RAILROAD CO., PITTSBURG, Saturday, March 20.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THIS Company are prepared to issue their new Stock, in exchange for that of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies, upon the terms, and in the manner, prescribed in the Articles of Consolidation, viz:

Ohio and Pennsylvania, Interest to July 1, 1856, and 20 per cent premium.

Ohio and Indiana, Interest to July 1, 1856, at par.

Fort Wayne and Chicago, Interest to July 1, 1856, and 6 per cent premium.

Stockholders in either of the old Companies, who may have assigned any portion of their stock, previous, or subsequent, to the consolidation, (Aug. 1, 1856,) without having had such stock transferred on the books of the old Companies and parties holding the certificates for such stock, are notified that this Company will not recognize the transfer of such assigned Stock, as the full shares of the Interest to July 1, 1856, and premium, have been credited to the original holders. Scrip certificates will be issued to such original holders, in cases where fractional amounts of interest and premiums on the old stock exist.

T. D. MESSLER, Secretary.

CAUTION—TO CAPITALISTS, CONVEYANCERS AND THE PUBLIC.—The public are cautioned against certain mortgages on property in the city of Philadelphia, described as a certain tract or parcel of marsh or crippled land, situate on the west side of the Schuylkill River, north of Market-st. Bridge, formerly in the township of Blockley, and now in the XXIVth Ward of the city of Philadelphia. The undersigned, who executed those mortgages, never had any valid title to the premises, and received no consideration for the mortgages in question. He has been imposed upon, and the whole affair is an imposture, well understood in Philadelphia. New-York capitalists are warned against them.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over 300 certificates of its virtue, all within 30 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula. A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from 5 to 8 years, tea spoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

NEW AND IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN THE SCIENCE OF MEDICINE—THIESEMAR—Nous are genuine unless the engravings of the Seals of the Patent Office of England, the Seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Vienna, are fixed upon each wrapper; and around each case.

Sold by DR. H. A. BARROW—Member of the Imperial College of Vienna, and Royal College of Surgeons, London, who may be personally consulted at his residence, No. 157 Prince-st., (few blocks west of Broadway,) New-York, from 11 o'clock in the morning till 2, and from 4 o'clock till 8 in the evening, (Sundays excepted.)

THIESEMAR No. 1.—Is the remedy of general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c.: all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

THIESEMAR No. 2.—Entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copavia and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

THIESEMAR No. 3.—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately, the English physician treats with mercury to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

THIESEMAR Nos. 1, 2 and 3, are prepared in

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

ANOTHER HOMICIDE.—A long-shore laborer named Peter Ward died yesterday at the New York Hospital, from injuries received on Saturday evening on board the schooner William Smith, at Pier No. 5 North River. Ward was at work on board the vessel named, when he got into some dispute with Thos. Fisher, the mate. Blows with the fist were exchanged, when Fisher picked from the deck a handspike, with which he struck Ward on the head a blow so powerful as to fracture his skull. Fisher was immediately arrested by Officer Corven, of the First Ward Police, and conveyed before Justice Osborne, who committed him. Soon afterwards he was released on bail, the magistrate believing Ward's injuries not to be of a fatal character. When notice of Ward's death was given, it was sought again to arrest Fisher, but the police did not succeed in finding him yesterday, and it is believed that he has fled the City. Ward was about 30 years of age. He leaves a wife and several children.

ARRESTS FOR VIOLATING CITY ORDINANCES.—Lieut Bennett and officers Brainard and Jones arrested, on Saturday, Joseph Witt and Samuel Leis, two filthy-looking customers, who were violating City ordinances in taking large quantities of very offensive butchers' offal to some other docks than that located at the foot of Forty-fifth-street, as provided by the ordinances regulating nuisances of this kind. Officers Mulligan and Bringer also arrested Batts and Peter Eglaff for the same offence. They were taken before Justice Osborne and fined $10 each. The Eglaffs paid the fines imposed Witt and Leis were committed in default of paying theirs.

The Police Justices have recently given unmistakable evidence of their determination to cooperate with the City Inspector in the enforcement of the ordinances relating to the public health.

ARRESTED FOR PASSING COUNTERFEIT BANK NOTES.—A man named Mathew Conlen was brought before Justice Wood, at the Essex Market Police Court, on Saturday, for passing $20 counterfeit bills on the North Bank of Boston. It appears that on Friday night the accused entered the store of Thomas Brown, No 135 First avenue, and purchased half a gallon of sherry wine, tendering in payment one of the $20 bills, and received back $18. He then went to the liquor store of Daniel Casey, No 156 Avenue A, and repeated the operation. Casey doubted the genuineness of the bill, but gave $18 in change, and then followed accused, who, after proceeding a short distance, emptied out the wine, and then entered the store of James Cuskley, corner of Thirteenth-street and Avenue A. Casey procured the assistance of Officer Farrel, and caused the arrest of Conlon, who was in the act of passing another of the bad bills. Conlon was committed to answer.

A young man named Frederick Walder is in the Tombs awaiting examination on a charge of passing a counterfeit $5 bill on the Exchange Bank of Hartford, Me., to Robert Bainbridge, of Beekman-street. A counterfeit $10 bill on the Tradesmen's Bank was also found on the person of the accused.

ALBANY OFFICERS IN NEW YORK—ATTEMPTED RESCUE OF A PRISONER FROM THEM.—The Albany Evening Journal of Saturday says: Within a few days several counterfeit bills were passed upon sundry citizens by two young men well known to the Police. Officers Wilson and Dumsery went to New-York in pursuit of them, and with the aid of Sergeant Smith succeeded to finding out the head quarters of one of them, Michael Farrell. They found him in the Ocean House, kept by the Widow Burns, in Reade-street, a short distance below Greenwich. The mounted Smith and Dumsery laid hands upon him he showed fight, and before they got him out of the house a gang of thieves and rowdies, who congregate there, came to his aid and attempted to rescue him. After getting into the street, the crowd became so large and the demonstration so violent that the officers thought that a rescue would be inevitable. A general mêlée ensued, in which the widow participated. She attempted to tear the eyes out of Dumsery, and it was not until Sergeant Smith gave her a "tap on the head," that she released her hold of Dumsery's finger, which she had in her mouth. A general fight then ensued, the fugitive for a time having got the best of the officers, but after a run over two blocks, a slight blow from one of officers' sticks arrested his progress. Our officers express their obligations to Captain Carpenter, and the officers under him, for the attention and aid they received at their hands. Farrell was safely brought to this city this morning and committed to jail for examination, which will take place this afternoon.

THE JEWELRY STORE ROBBERY IN BOSTON.—In relation to the extensive theft upon a Boston jewelry store by a porter named Haley, whose arrest in this City by officer Bowyer we mentioned on Saturday, the Boston Evening Journal says:

Messrs J nes, Shreeve, Brown & Co., whole-well-known and extensive jewelry establishment is at the corner of Washing on and Summer streets, have, within a short time, discovered that they have been, for a year or two past, systematically robbed of property, such as gold watches, gold chains, clocks and other articles of jewelry. How large the amount is they have not ascertained, but the probability is that the value of property taken is quite large. The dishonest party is named Jame s Haley, who, for three years past, and until within a short time, has been in their employ as a porter. He resided in Washington Village.

Haley has a wife of intemperate habits, and this fact, with other circumstances, led his employers to commiserate his unfortunate situation, and to occasionally make him presents of money to help him along in the world. They had missed property from time to time, but though at last they had some doubts of Haley, they had no proofs of dishonesty upon his part. They, however, discharged him. A few days since the wife of Haley was arrested for drunkenness, and while in the lock-up she dropped such hints in regard to her husband as led the Police to search his house. They found in it quite a number of valuable articles of jewelry, which were identified by his former employers as their property.

Upon searching for Haley, however, it was found that he had decamped, after drawing from a Bank a sum of money, the fruit, it is supposed, of his depredations. He was traced to New York City and arrested there at the request of the Boston Police, by officer Bowyer, and a valuable watch found upon him, which had been taken from the store of his employers. Officer Heath proceeded to New York with a requisition from the Governor of Massachusetts, and will bring Haley back to this city for trial.

Haley was returned to Boston on Saturday.

SHOCKING CHARGE.—An Irish laborer named Edward O'Connor, aged 35 years, was committed to prison yesterday by Justice Woodin a charge of attempting to commit a rape on his own daughter, aged 13 years. The charge against the accused was made by his own wife.

LONG ISLAND.

VIOLENCE.—Two individuals, named MICHAEL TRAPPEL and ARCHIBALD MULLEN, while both were a little inebriated, had a little "argument" at the corner of Water and Fulton streets, Brooklyn, on Friday night. TRAPPEL thought he could whip anybody, particularly MULLEN, so MULLEN gave him a blow on the temple, as much as to say, I am your man. The blow was a heavy one, and caused TRAPPEL to fall over and bump his head upon the sidewalk; the head, being very full, cracked, and he was carried into the Franklin House, when death came to his relief at 6 o'clock the next morning—having died, according to the medical testimony, of concussion of the brain.

Coroner REDDING and a Jury are sitting upon the body, and it is expected will be able to render a verdict this evening. In the meantime the Coroner, to satisfy the public appetite for horrible things, has issued his warrant for the arrest of MULLEN, to await the verdict of the Jury.

THE MISSING MR. HENDRICKSON.—The advertisement concerning the missing Mr. HENDRICKSON sets forth that he was last seen on Friday, the 8th, driving his cows eastward from the Jamaica first toll-gate. Mr. J. H. LOCKWOOD, clerk of the steamboat Croton, which plies between New-York and Glen Cove, assures us that on Saturday, the 9th inst., Mr. HENDRICKSON came on board the Croton at Glenwood, L. I., and took passage in her to New-York. He says, moreover, that at Glenwood he was informed that Mr. H. sold his cows at Jericho. This may direct parties searching for the missing man to turn their search away from the Williamsburg Road towards New York City.

SUNDAY CARS IN BROOKLYN.—Sunday railroad travel was duly initiated yesterday. The cars on each of the several routes under control of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, were run every 30 minutes from Fulton Ferry, and as each car left the station, every seat and every available standing place was occupied. So far as money can make it so, the experiment is a success.

CHIEF OF POLICE.—The rumor that the Brooklyn Chief of Police had signified his intention to obey the orders of the new Police Commissioners is not correct. Individually he favors the bill, but officially he is still on the fence, Micawber-like, waiting for something to turn up.

☞ Some, if not all of the Police magistrates in Brooklyn, intend to enforce the provisions of the new Excise Law, as regards the duties relative to intoxicated persons, on and after the 25th inst.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. WM. LEWIS, of Cooperstown, had one of his shoulders dislocated on Friday evening last, by being thrown from a wagon in Brooklyn. The accident was caused by some portion of the harness breaking.

BROOKLYN (E. D.) DISPENSARY.—During April 356 patients were treated at this institution for the following:

Diseases.—Injuries, 22; minor surgery, 35; nervous, 21; abdomen, 59; skin, 26; rheumatism, 8; eye and ear, 12; abscess, 9; heart, lungs and throat, 64; urinary, 2; fevers, 8; vaccinated, 70.

Nativity.—United States, 137; Ireland, 176; England, 7; Germany, 15; France, 1.

Patients under 1 year	26
Patients between 1 and 5 years	63
Patients between 5 and 10 years	41
Patients between 10 and 30 years	165
Patients above 30	101

To whom 571 prescriptions were gratuitously dispensed.

BROOKLYN (W. D.) DISPENSARY.—Five hundred and twenty patients were prescribed for at this institution during the last month, for the following:

Diseases.—Of females, 40; children, 70; skin and vaccination, 61; head and digestive organs, 55; heart and lungs, 86; eye and ear, 40; surgical 137.

Nativity.—United States, 131; other countries, principally from Ireland, 337.

1,883 prescriptions were gratuitously dispensed.

INTERESTING TO BEEF EATERS.—Several Germans were arrested on Saturday, by the Sixth District Police, Brooklyn, while engaged in preparing diseased meat for market. The established fine for such an offence, in that district, being only $25, it is not to be wondered at that the police occasionally stumble upon the operators.

FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—A carpenter's shop, owned by the WM. VAN VOORHIES estate and slaughter-house, owned by Mr. METCALF, all located in the vicinity of the corner of Franklin and Park avenues were destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. The loss is variously estimated from nothing up to $1,000

NEW-JERSEY.

TRIAL OF BERGEN RIOTERS.—DAVID COLEMAN, JAMES DONNELLY and TIMOTHY CAUGHLAN, three of those who were arrested in the 14th of February last for participating in the riots on the tunnel of the New York and Erie Railroad at Bergen Hill, and who were indicted for the same a week ago, were placed on trial on Friday afternoon in the Hudson County Court of Oyer and Terminer, Chief Justice GREENE presiding. J. D. LITTELL, District-Attorney, appeared for the prosecution, E. B. WAKEMAN for DONNELLY, and E. R. V. WRIGHT for COLEMAN and CAUGHLAN. The testimony was much the same as that published at the time of the riot.

During the trial witnesses were produced who testified that Mr. LAYTON, the Keeper of the County Jail, had negotiated with them on the subject of allowing the prisoners to escape from jail for a consideration. Other witnesses were produced who testified that they were present at the time of the alleged negotiation, and no conversation of the kind took place. Mr. LAYTON was an important witness for the prosecution, he being present at the time and aiding in making arrests. Mr. LAYTON has signified his intention to have those witnesses arrested on the charge of perjury. The prisoners were convicted.

MONDAY, May 17—A. M.

The Foreign Trade of the port of New-York for the past week amounts, in the Importation of Foreign Merchandise, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper, to $4,619,010, as against $4,133,313 the week ending May 15 last year. The General Import list of the week again includes a very large sum in Sugar and Molasses, 22 039,417, the heaviest amount ever entered in a single week. The Export list of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods amounts to $1,488,715, against $1,196,759 same week last year. The Export of Specie for the week was $1,609,378 to Europe, and $318,350, principally Spanish Doubloons, to the West Indies, together $1,927,728, as against $1,564 415 the same week last May. The receipts of Gold from California, as manifested, were $1,707,725, and of Spanish Coin from Europe, $214,195. The Sub-Treasury held on Saturday afternoon Specie balances to the amount of $13,778,646, against $14,329,454 at the close of the previous week. Altogether, the Specie movements of the week have been unusually active and varied, resulting, as far as known, $645,000 in favor of the Bank reserve, although this may not be apparent on the official average this afternoon, the heaviest outgo being early in the week, while the California Bullion did not reach Bank until Thursday. The interior Gold exchanges are again understood to have been in favor of the city. The Bank reserves as averaged last Monday, was $12,011,491. The Money Market ruled, with the exception of the single day before the sailing of Wednesday's steamer, quite easy, both at call and on strictly prime paper. General trade is not only inactive, but the Custom Duties unusually light, while the employment of money thus far to carry Stocks is much below the Summer average. Foreign Exchange has felt the liberal remittances made by the leading Bankers for a week or two past in Bullion, and the rates are not such as to stimulate such remittances beyond the movement of last season. London, 109¼@109¾; Paris, 5.18¾@5.17½. The last news from Europe is calculated to increase the export of Breadstuffs, although local speculation, stimulated by exaggerated reports of the short supplies to come from the West, have kept prices here above the Foreign limits.

According to the official Custom House record of the Foreign Trade at New-York for the calendar month of April, and our summary, by months, from the beginning of the current fiscal year, 1st July, 1856, to the 1st inst., which we published a few days since, the Import of Foreign Merchandise at this port for the ten months (exclusive of foreign coin and bullion,)

Amounted to	$187,106,000
Add two weeks in May	9,824,617
Total to date	$196,930,617
Against same time in 1856	169,114,639
Increase to date	$27,815,978

By the same tables the Exports of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, including Foreign goods reexported—

Amounted to	$69,106,000
Add two weeks in May	3,182,575
Total to date	$72,288,575
Against same time in 1856	67,580,237
Increase to date	$4,708,338

By the same tables the Export of Specie to the 1st inst, was made | $33,115,000
Add two weeks in May | 2,509,296
Total to date | $35,714,296
Against same time in 1856 | 17,236,115
Increase to date | $18,478,181
Increase as above in Produce | 4,708,338
Increase of all exports | $23,186,519

The Stock Exchange through the week manifested no general activity, though a good deal of interest attached to the dealings in three or four prominent Road Stocks; and this was particularly observable at the close on Saturday afternoon, when it was almost impossible to keep the run of the very rapid fluctuations in Cleveland and Toledo, Michigan Southern, Illinois Central and Reading. The transactions and bids of which were latest advised, were, in Michigan Southern, 69¾@70, sales for cash; 69¾ subsequently bid, with offers to sell, at the option of the seller, 60 days, at 67¾ ₱ cent. In Cleveland and Toledo, 69@69¼ sales. In Illinois Central, 138¾ sales, and in Reading 79⅝ bid. The prominent general changes through the week were nearly as follows:

New-York Central	86¾@86@86½
New York and Erie	41½@42@42½
Cleveland and Toledo	69¾@67¾@68¾@69¾@69
Michigan Southern	64@65.@65¾@70@69½

The Stock Exchange Board have reopened the subject of the privileges attaching, on the 20th inst., to outstanding contracts in Southern Michigan. After two days' discussion, no definite result was arrived at. But as the Railway Company have met a Committee from the Board in a spirit of accommodation, and agreed on Saturday afternoon to open regular transfer books for the Scrip (or partially paid-up) shares of the new stock, the presumption is, the previous order of the Stock Board in regard to money payments on the new stock, in advance of the final settlement or maturity of contracts, will now be rescinded. By the aid of such transfers, the scrip can be delivered in such sums and at such time as will accommodate the full settlement of the original contract. Meanwhile, the rumored nature of some of the discussions at the Board, and the uncertainty in which they seemed to leave the convenience, if not the privileges of the buyer, have induced some outside parties to call in their options, in order to have the stock in their own name by the 20th inst.

An election for Officers of the Treverton Coal and Railroad Company was held in Philadelphia on the 5th instant. GEORGE W. BEEBEE was elected President, and the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year:

Jas. L Morris.	Jas. T. Sputter.
Jos. R Curtis.	Geo. J. Pumpelly.
John S. Williams.	L. S Suarez.
Jonathan Thorne.	Oliver Slare, Jr.
Thos. S. Gibbes,	John F Butterworth.
Thos. Robins.	Chas. H. Rogers.

Mr. JAMES L. MORRIS has been appointed General Superintendant by the new Board and the affairs of the concern altogether are now under first-rate auspices.

The following is a comparative statement of the exports hence of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, for the week, and the corresponding week of last year:

	1856. Quantity	1856. Value.	1857. Quantity.	1857. Value.
Cotton, bales	8,169	$165,865	3,925	$277,494

Miscellaneous		703,702		890,047
Total for the week		$1,196,759		$1,488,715

* These items were included in miscellaneous goods, in our export statement every week of last year. Hence, we cannot furnish comparative figures, in detail, this year. Next year we shall be enabled to do so regularly, by keeping up the record as now arranged through the current year.

FOREIGN TRADE OF THE UNITED STATES—TWO FISCAL YEARS.

	1856. Actual.	1857. Estimated.	Increase.
Goods imported	$310,452,810	$380,000,000	$49,547 690
Specie imported	4,207,532	15,000,000	10 792,468
Total	$314,639,942	$375,000,000	$60,360,058
Domestic produce exported	$266,488,061	$295,000,000	$28,561 949
Foreign Goods	14,781 883	18,00 ,000	3,218,618
Foreign Specie	1 597,196	12,000,000	10,402 804
American Gold	44 148 279	65,000,000	20,851.721
Total	$326,984,908	$390,000 000	$63,035,092
Gross trade of 1856 in Imports	$314,939,942
And in all Exports	326 984 908
Resulting balance in favor United States	$12,324,966
Gross Import trade of 1857, estim'd	$375,000 000
Gross Exports, estimated at	390,000,000
Resulting balance in favor of United States	$15 000,000

The above estimate of the trade of 1857 is based upon well-understood data for nine or ten of the twelve months of the official year, to close on the 30th proximo. It is not materially different from a similar estimate made at an earlier period of the year, and confirmed by the general course of trade since. We repeat the figures in juxtaposition with the actual results of last year, with a view to correct a remarkable series of mistakes just fallen into by an influential cotemporary, the New-York Tribune: 1. In stating the probable Import movement of the year only at $300,000,000, a difference of seventy five millions from any probable result. 2. In stating the Export movement exclusive of Specie, at $225,000,000, or all told, $255,000,000, an error of one hundred and thirty five millions, according to the above estimate, and even seventy millions behind the trade of 1856. 3. In placing our ability to export American Gold, the product of California, at $30,000,000, whereas it was $44,000,000 last year, and will reach sixty or $65,000,000 this year.

The stockholders in the Michigan Southern Company who desire to subscribe will recollect that they are not limited in their subscriptions to 40 ₱ cent. They are entitled absolutely (and if they apply for it on or before the 20th inst.) will receive, in any event, guaranteed stock to the extent of 40 ₱ cent. of the total amount of the general stock which may stand in their names on the books at the close of business on the 20th May. But every stockholder is at liberty to subscribe for all that he desires, and any surplus which remains, after giving the 40 ₱ cent. to all stockholders who apply for it, will be divided pro rata among other stockholders who apply for more than their proportion. Stockholders should see that their stock stands in their own names upon the books on the 20th inst., and they should apply in time for such portion of the new stock as they may desire to have, without reference to their pro rata shares. It is now evident that no one except stockholders, who may be such on the 20th inst., can receive any part of this new stock. The subscriptions on Saturday afternoon amounted to $4,011,200. The book remains open until 3 o'clock on Wednesday.

A new Fire Insurance Company has been organized, and offices established at No. 40 Wall-street, and No. 4 Montague-place, Brooklyn, under the style of the Mechanics' Fire Insurance Company of Brooklyn. The capital is $150,000, and in the Board of Trustees we find the names of Mr. SLOAN, of the Hudson River Railroad; Mr. VAIL, of the Bank of Commerce; Mr. WHITEHOUSE and Mr. BAYLISS, of the Stock Exchange, and several well-known City merchants.

The foregoing figures are compiled from the annual report for the year 1856. The Company earned during the year, net, from the Transportation Account and Sales of Coal, $558,346, which paid 7 ₱ cent. on the Funded Debt and Capital Stock, as these items then stood, ($10 ,483 of such interest being incurred for and carried to the construction of the Southern Division, not then completed,) and also the rent of the Warren and Cayuga feeders; besides placing $51,267 to the credit of the Renewal Fund. The line is an important one to this City, as connecting New-York by rail directly with the Northern Coal fields of Pennsylvania, and its projectors have gone through with their work with an energy equal to the physical difficulties to be overcome, and against the most formidable financial discouragements. The great body of the stockholders have continued steady to their support, receiving 7 ₱ cent. interest on their payments, after the plan so successfully pursued by the Pennsylvania Central before its completion.

From the Evening Post.

HEAVY SUGAR SPECULATION.—"It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." The high price of sugar has already yielded a fortune to those dealers who were in a situation to take advantage of it, and among them may be mentioned the houses of E. D. MORGAN & Co., and of SPOFFORD & TILESTON. The latter firm, we are informed, sent an order for ten thousand tons of Manila sugar, a part of which has already arrived. The outlay for this venture was about $800,000, and the profits are expected to exceed $250 000.

We have reason to state that the largest portion of the adventure of Messrs. SPOFFORD & TILESTON, in Manila Sugars, will go direct to London. The speculations, however, on this, as well as the English markets, are undoubtedly large, exceeding a similar movement last Summer, but involving less disturbance to the discount market, as much of the Sugar from Havana is held for wealthy Cuban parties. The successive profitable seasons of 1856 and 1857 have largely advanced the value of the Sugar estates of the Island, a single one of which has recently changed hands at two millions of dollars.

Cincinnati Money and Stock Markets.

From the Circulars of Hooven & Holmes.

The Stock market opened early in the week with a very languid feeling, and a tendency to lower prices. On yesterday and to-day, however, the demand has been more decided, and at the close prices are firmer, and in some instances slightly better. The extraordinary cold and great backwardness of the Spring is, no doubt, affecting business unfavorably, and curtailing the receipts of railroads, both in freights and passengers.

Little Miami shares sold early in the week at 95, a decline of 1 ₱ cent.; but subsequent sales show an improvement of ¾ ₱ cent., with one small sale at 96, which is the highest price obtained in many months for this favorite stock. Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton shares have also declined 1 ₱ cent., with sales at 68, closing with a very firm feeling and an indisposition to sell at less than 69. Indianapolis and Cincinnati shares have been very quiet; no transaction of moment has come under our observation; the earnings of the road for April were $44,500, which is slightly in advance of the same month last year; this, when there has been a marked falling off in the receipts of many of the leading western roads, as compared with the corresponding month of last year, is doing remarkably well.

The earnings of the Mad River and Lake Erie Railroad for April show a large and really astonishing increase over the corresponding month of 1857. For April, 1857, they were, from all sources.....$50,810
For April, 1856.....39,734

Increase, (28 ₱ cent.).....$11,076

This is made up of an increase in freight receipts of nearly $13,000, and incidentals of $2,200, while in the passenger receipts there is a falling off of over $4,000.

In Ohio and Mississippi Shares we report sales of 350 shares at 11¾@12. The opening passenger business of this road is, we understand, much more promising than was anticipated, and gives decided indications that the expectations of its friends will be fully realized. For Marietta and Cincinnati Shares there is some inquiry, but the stock is generally held above the views of buyers. We note one sale of 200 shares at 19, 60 days. There is also more inquiry for Covington and Lexington, with sale at 20.

In Bonds the movement has been less active than last week; prices are, however, without change.

Money is slightly easier, and negotiations are made with less difficulty, and at rather easier rates.

Exchange on New-York is steady at ¼ to ½ ₱ cent.

The United States Mail steamship Arago, Captain LINES, from Havre and Southampton, arrived at this port last evening.

The Arago brings 193 passengers, the usual mails, $800,000 in specie, and 300 tons of merchandise. Amongst the passengers are Mr. O. JENNINGS WISE, Secretary of Legation, and Mr. CRAIN, Vice-Consul from Paris; Mr. CAMILLE DOLLFUS, Secretary to the French Legation at Washington; Major W. J. JENNER, Capt. W. WARNER and Lieut. W. H. PALMER, of the British Army.

The Canadian screw steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Liverpool on the 6th inst., arrived at Quebec on Sunday morning. By these arrivals we receive four days' later news from Europe.

The screw steamship City of Manchester, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool on the morning of the 6th inst.

The U. S. Mail steamship Washington, from New-York, arrived at Southampton on the 3d inst., landed her mails and passengers, and proceeded on her voyage to Bremen.

The Royal Mail steamship Niagara, from Boston, via Halifax, arrived at Liverpool on the 4th inst.

In Great Britain, the speech from the Throne was looked forward to with much interest. It is said that if there is not in it a very distinct pledge of a Reform bill, Mr. ROEBUCK will move an amendment to it. It will probably be carried.

The French Journals profess to know about Lord MALMESBURY's instructions respecting China, and say he will demand a renewal of the Treaties, with the extension of the privilege to three other ports besides the five to which they already claim admittance, and also the establishment of English Military Ports in all cities where English Consuls or Consular Agents reside, and the reërections of the Forts at Canton, Shanghae and Hong Kong.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE continues to be feted at Paris.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 4th of May, says:

"Baron GROS, who has been appointed to proceed on an extraordinary mission to China, was received this morning at a private audience by the Emperor. I am informed that the steam-frigate Impetueuse is, together with the frigate Audacieuse, to be dispatched to reinforce the French fleet in the China Seas. The report that a Vice-Admiral is to be sent to China to take command of the French fleet in those seas is confirmed. The two candidates having the best chance of the appointment are Admiral BRUAT and Maritime Prefect at Toulon, and Admiral ROMAIN DESFOSSES."

There are more rumors of discovered conspiracies in Spain.

Generals SANTIAGO, MENDUE and GARRIDO had been designated to command the expedition against Mexico, and left for Cadiz to embark for Cuba.

The text of the Queen's speech respecting Mexico reads thus:

The diplomatic relations with the Mexican Republic have been interrupted by diplomatic circumstances; but I hope the interruption will be but temporary. The Mexican Government and nation have already begun to prove that they will not consent to countenance these acts, as contrary to justice as to humanity, by allowing them to go unpunished; and that they will not oblige Spain, to whom they are united by so many bonds, to exact a reparation for such outrages.

The Queen of Spain is said to be in the fourth month of her pregnancy, and as that is the period at which she has had more than one miscarriage, her physicians have ordered her to observe the strictest rules, not allowing her to leave the Palace.

The Ministerial journal Le Pays contains the following paragraph:

"A private telegraphic dispatch received at London announces that the treaty of peace concluded between Great Britain and Persia had not been ratified by the Court of Teheran. We know from private information that this news is inaccurate. The text of the treaty, on account of the state of the roads, could not arrive at Teheran before the 15th or 20th of April, and, as after 35 days at least are required to go from the capital of Persia to the first telegraphic station, it is physically impossible that the reply of the Court of Teheran could be known at this moment."

The Dispute Between the United States and New-Granada—The Threatened Occupation of the Isthmus.

From the London Times, May 6.

It would be affectation not to own some sort of uneasiness at the news that the United States are going to carry it with a high hand over the miserable State of New-Granada. The old cock does not like to see the young cock strutting and crowing so near his own dunghill. But, though we care little for New-Granada or Central America in this country, and have other things to think of, there is abundant provocation to instinctive jealousy. First, there is one of the most important points in the world apparently involved in the affair, that Bimaris Corinthus of the New World, Panama, more important than the Isthmus of Suez, or any other great meeting-point of nations. It seems to be marked by nature for the common property of mankind, as much as the oceans which it so slightly dissevers. It is true that to all appearance it may be hundreds of years before we shall ever make much use of the Isthmus, and during all that time the United States will be more concerned to invite than to obstruct our passage. But there is the apparent natural right; and in this case it is secured and embodied in a treaty, about which there happens to have been some controversy. Then we have in this country a rather exaggerated idea of Brother JONATHAN's disposition to take the law into his own hands. The most outrageous incidents and the most offensive speeches are they that come quickest and are most repeated in this country. We have heard of Lynch law; we have read Uncle Tom; our diners-out have all of them a few bits of "stump" oratory to amuse the ladies with; and so we have a prevailing idea that the will of a Yankee is his only law. Yet the more we know of the Americans the more satisfied are we of their resemblance to ourselves. They are, perhaps, a little more fiery, a little more independent, for climate and circumstance will tell upon them; but they are the "governing classes of the United States are the very near descendants—the grandchildren or the great grandchildren—of our own yeomanry, and inherit the same strong elements of their character.

Compared with the great interests of humanity, any jealousy we might feel of American progress is, we frankly admit, a petty consideration. It certainly is for the interest of humanity that civilization, in the common sense of that word, comprising order, security of life and property, hospitality to strangers, and permanent institutions, should prevail over disorder, anarchy, continual revolution, and mutual massacre, and the general state of things described in almost every letter from Central, and a great part of South America. The mongrel races that people those regions combine the vices of barbarism with those of civilization, and under the names, and exteriors, and political pretensions of the Spanish Hidalgo or Republican, are, in fact, as turbulent, cruel, and intractable as the races supplanted by their forefathers. But no country ever had peace in which were various races that refused to coalesce, and there is wanting that essential condition to order in Central America. What changes may be effected by the new element now introducing itself time only can show; but, as things now are, there cannot be peace and order in Central America, nor will there be till a stronger hand, a more vital principle of order, comes in. No doubt that will be supplied by the United States. It is true—and here we are involuntarily reverting to our first misgivings—we in this country neither know nor can learn the rights of the quarrel between the States and Granada. The Americans allege a conspiracy, but nothing is more unlikely than a concerted scheme by the population of a weak State to get up an inexpiable feud with one infinitely stronger. It had all the look of ill feeling, accident and passion, like an Irish faction fight, only fought out with knives and rifles instead of clubs and stones. But it is not our business to decide, or to form any opinion as to the origin of the quarrel. What we have to consider rather is the bearing of the affair on the general interests of humanity. Now, between such people as the citizens of the United States and the mixed population of Granada, the former in the apparently weak position of strangers and travelers, yet each representing, in his own person, the whole power and genius of a mighty commonwealth, and the latter really contemptible, but in possession of the spot, there could not but be continual ruptures. It is only a question of time. If the outbreak was not this year it would be the next. Of course, it would be far better that the State of Granada should be strong enough to keep its people in order, and to prevent them from taking a tumultuous revenge for personal insults; but if every collision between resident and traveler is to be followed by a rising of the whole population, then Granada becomes a mere mine of explosive ingredients, which it is dangerous to walk over. A traveler may answer for himself, but he cannot answer for the 500 travelers who may be with him at the port, or on the passage, and the world at large has the right to demand some security that one of its great thoroughfares shall not be made a scene of mutual carnage every time a drunken traveler misconducts himself.

But, in fact, neither the United States, nor England, nor any other Government has so much voice in these changes as we are apt to assign to them. The change will take place, and all that statesmen and philanthropists can do reaches only to the time and the manner. A vast population—Anglo-Saxon we call it, for want of a better name, but much more British than American—is pouring into these regions, and acquiring that strength which is inseparable from superiority of numbers and breed. Nothing will prevent them from gaining the ascendancy over the debased races that decay, languish, quarrel and destroy one another in one of the finest countries as well as most commanding situations in the world. There they are, and, though the gold discoveries of Australia have diverted from California and the routes thereto the great European influx with which they were threatened, still the "Anglo-Saxon" element is rapidly increasing in Central America and growing to its invariable political development. Whatever the Government of the United States does in these regions will be better than the work of adventurers, which, at the best, will be only a broken limb badly set, and will require some day another and more painful operation. The only point at present involved in this quarrel is the country immediately about the Isthmus. The Government of Washington will consult its own peace—at all events, its resources—by advancing as little as possible southwards into the State of Granada—a vast mountainous region directly under the Equator. We presume that, at the utmost, it will confine its ambition to the perfect security of its route to the Pacific States. Time may or may not call it or tempt it to the path of PIZARRO and into the heart of that southern continent, which has never yet known repose. But for the present the States can do little more, and can desire little more, than to substitute their own authorities for those which have been found ineffectual at the Isthmus. Even if we frequented the Isthmus much more than we do, we should have but small reason to regret the change, and can only desire that it should take place as quietly as possible.

The Dispute between Spain and Mexico—Favorable Chances of a Settlement.

Madrid (April 30) Correspondence of the London Times.

A London paper lately announced the arrival at Madrid of Señor BARRERA, attached to the Mexican Legation at Paris, with dispatches relating to the dispute between Spain and Mexico. The Epoca adopted this information as its own; it has been copied into most of the Madrid papers, and undue importance has been given to it. Señor BARRERA certainly passed through here, now two or three weeks ago, but he had no official mission whatever, and was merely on his way to Andalusia, on private business relating to an inheritance. I am glad to say, however, that the chances of an amicable adjustment of the difficulty referred to become daily stronger. It is probable that Señor LAFRAGUA will leave Paris for Madrid as soon as the next mail from Mexico arrives—that is to say, on the 2d or 3d of May. I do not imagine that he awaits by that mail permission to come here, although it is expected that the contents of the despatches he will receive will rather strengthen him in his present intention. He and Marshal SERRANO appear to have been mutually well pleased with each other, and with the results of their interviews at Paris, and, unless something unexpected supervene, there can be but little doubt of a satisfactory agreement being come to. Marshal SERRANO was to arrive at Madrid in the course of last night, and his personal communications to his Government will doubtless forward matters a step.

The Opening of the Exhibition of Art Treasures at Manchester.

From the London Times, May 6.

Manchester was yesterday the scene of an event almost unique in the history of art in England, or perhaps in the world. An Exhibition of Art Treasures, never before equaled for extent and importance, was opened with an éclat to which nothing but the presence of the sovereign herself could have added. The consort of Her Majesty presided over the ceremony, which was witnessed by a large and distinguished assembly, comprising several Cabinet Ministers, the representatives of various foreign countries, many of our native nobility and gentry, the corporate authorities of some of our principal cities, and thousands of the inhabitants of the important and populous district of which Manchester is the centre. The weather was most propitious, and the arrangements both within and without the Exhibition were faultless. It was a day, in short, of marked success, and one of which the city of Manchester may be proud.

The preparations which had been made for the ceremony within the building were of the simplest kind. The great central hall consists of a nave and two side aisles, and is intersected near its western extremity by the transept. A row of tall and slender columns separates the nave from each of the aisles, and the pillars are joined at the top by light and open girders, which carry the semi-circular roof of the nave. The side walls are hung with portraits of all the principal personages in English history and biography. Below them, on the floor, are arranged in handsome cases the multitude of objects in ivory, wood, bronze and the precious metals, which form the general museum of art. In front of the columns, and within the nave itself, on either side are placed a double row of statues, extending the entire length of the hall from the principal entrance to the transept, and leaving a broad passage or avenue in the centre. Near the transept the beautiful and elaborate suits of armor, from the Meyrick and other collections, are arranged in tasteful and appropriate groups. Beyond the transept the seats of the orchestra rise one over the other to a considerable height above the floor, terminating in a grand organ constructed by Messrs. KIRTLAND & JARDINE, the elegant form and elaborate decoration of which fitly complete the view. For the proceedings of yesterday a dais was erected in the transept immediately in front of the orchestra. It was octagonal in form, raised six steps from the floor, and covered with red cloth. On the top was a square piece of rich tapestry, and there stood the chair of State in crimson velvet and gold used by Prince ALBERT during the ceremony. A tall Venetian mast rose on either side, from the point of which depended a banner, made in the one case of yellow and in the other of blue silk, and bearing the arms respectively of England and Gotha, with the mottoes, "Dieu et mon droit," and "Treu und Fest." The Union Jack was displayed at various points in and near the transept, while at the back of the dais were seen the banners of different countries, with the names of great painters emblazoned on them. Behind the chair of state, and nearly on the same level with it, a number of benches, covered with green cloth and decorated with fringes, were arranged in a semi-circle and reserved for the use of the more distinguished among the spectators. For the accommodation of the mass the whole of the central hall, with the exception of a passage in the centre, the galleries round the transept, and the two limbs of the transept itself, was furnished with rows of benches and chairs. A broad strip of scarlet cloth ran up the centre of the great hall and heightened the effect of the white marble statues on either hand throwing them out in beautiful relief. 11 o'clock was the time fixed for opening the doors to the public, but long before that hour all the entrances were besieged by a large number of the rank, fashion, and beauty of Manchester and its vicinity. The doors were opened gently to avoid a rush, and with oft-reiterated cautions from the inside for every one to take plenty of time. To such advice, of course, no one paid the slightest regard. There was a good deal of pushing, and ladies scarcely got that room to which they seemed to think their capacious skirts entitled them. Some insisted on trying to move the turnstiles the wrong way, while others in their anxiety to get good places would not go right, no matter what amount of pains were taken to guide them in their course. But after the first rush all went as smoothly as could be wished, and showed the arrangements to have been well planned and executed. From the moment the doors were opened the steady influx of visitors never ceased or slackened. Among the occupants of the green benches behind the dais were many members of both Houses of Parliament. Lord BROUGHTON wore the uniform of a Lord-Lieutenant, and Lord WROTTESLEY was also in uniform. The Marquis of CLANRICARDE and Earl POWIS were also present. The Marquis of STAFFORD, the Earl of BURLINGTON, Lord ELCHO, Mr. MANOLES, Mr. GROGAN, Mr. HANKEY, Mr. KERSHAW, Mr. HINDLEY, and Mr. BERESFORD HOPE represented the House of Commons. The American, Belgian and Haytien Ministers were the only members of the corps diplomatique present. The Lord Mayors of London and Dublin, the former accompanied by Aldermen COPELAND, SALOMONS and CUBITT, and by Sheriffs MECHI and KEARS, were there in their robes of office. The Corporation of Manchester took a prominent part in the proceedings of the day. The Mayor of Salford, wearing a plain but exceedingly massive gold chain round his neck, was a spectator of the ceremony. So also was the Lord Provost of Edinburg. The corporate authorities in their crimson robes, and attended by their servants in gorgeous liveries, formed, indeed, not the least brilliant part of the spectacle. At 1 o'clock the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, accompanied by his staff, entered the building, and after that hour but few visitors of note arrived. The palace was crowded in every nook, and it may well be supposed that the scene was most animated and magnificent. Many of the gentlemen were in uniform or court dress, while SOLOMON in all his glory was not arrayed with more taste and splendor than some of the ladies. Their dresses of the richest stuffs vied with the colors of the rainbow in variety and brilliancy, making the ornaments of the walls look mean and dull by comparison. The elegant proportions of the building itself, its chaste and beautiful decorations, the masterpieces of art scattered in rich profusion on every hand, the presence of 10,000 persons gaily attired, and the display of silken banners and standards, combined to form a picture such as has rarely been witnessed even in the metropolis.

The Burdell Murder—Eckel's Trial Postponed to October.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

Before Judge Davies.

Mr. Eckel and his counsel, Messrs. Stafford and Graham, were in waiting yesterday morning, long before the opening of the Circuit Court, which took place shortly after 10 o'clock. One or two short cases on that calender were disposed of, after which Mr. District-Attorney HALL entered the room, and the Court of Oyer and Terminer was immediately opened by Mr. Berthoff, the crier.

The Court—Mr. District Attorney, have you anything further to bring before the Court of Oyer and Terminer?

Mr. Hall—No, Sir, nothing this term. I have simply to state, that circumstances have induced me to lay over the indictment pending against Mr. Eckel, and which was postponed until this morning, until the October term. My reasons for such a course I do not wish to state at present. At the October term I shall either try the case, or move for a nolle prosequi, as may then appear most proper.

Mr. Graham—The only question, your HONOR, is as to the course the Court and the District-Attorney will take in regard to Mr. Eckel. He has been in jail four months, and it is hardly fair that he should now go out into the community with a crime of this nature hanging over his head.

The Court intimated that he could not interfere with the District-Attorney in the course that officer intended to pursue.

Mr. Graham—The Court and District-Attorney, Sir, can concur in the course they can pursue with regard to the rights of Mr. Eckel; he is here awaiting his trial in pursuance of his agreement, and it is not fair that it should now be put off until the Fall. The prosecuting officer says now that he has not sufficient evidence against my client to press for a conviction.

Mr. Hall—I have not said that, your Honor.

Mr. Graham—Then, Sir, if there be legal evidence against Mr. Eckel, I insist on an immediate trial of the case. He cannot go out and pursue his business with such an accusation remaining hanging over him, he being entirely innocent of the crime for which he is here to answer. What I would suggest to the District-Attorney is that he now nol. pros. this indictment, and renew it in the Fall if he deem proper. My client can then go out among his fellow-men without this stain upon him. We cannot compel him to adopt this course, but your Honor can order an immediate trial of this indictment: and I appeal to the humanity of the District-Attorney if this would not be the proper course. We had notice that this case would not be tried this morning, and are not prepared to go on with it, but we will be ready to try it next Monday, if your Honor pleases.

The District-Attorney—I am willing to abide the eloquent animadversions of my learned friend, but cannot give any public explanation of my reasons for adopting this course. If my learned friend will come to my office, I think I shall be able to satisfy him of its propriety.

Mr. Graham—I had no intention to animadvert upon the conduct of the learned District Attorney. There is an effort on the part of the public press to intimidate this officer in the performance of his duty, and I call upon your Honor now to sustain him herein.

The Court—Certainly, Sir, that is what I intend to do.

Mr. Graham—Your Honor will permit me to speak in behalf of a party who has been suffering in prison for four months. I have to say that it is cruel to let this man go out with the accusation that his hands are stained with the blood of a fellow being. Your Honor should then strike off his fetters and let him go free.

The Court—He goes out on his own recognizance.

Mr. Graham—That is not enough, your HONOR. He should now go out without any stain on his character, leaving the prosecution the right to renew this indictment hereafter, should it be deemed proper; every presumption is in favor of his innocence. The District-Attorney says he is not ready to try the case now, but we know what that means. It means that he is not ready to satisfy the public.

The Court—I cannot permit remarks of this nature, Mr. Graham; they are not proper.

Mr. Graham—I do not intend them as reflecting on the conduct of the District Attorney.

The Court—I believe you do not, Sir; still they are not proper and may mislead the public.

Mr. Graham—I wish the Court, Sir, to share the responsibility with him in disposing of this matter. In The Court—I do take the responsibility, Sir, postponing the case.

Mr. Graham—Then, Sir, I have a duty to perform to my client. I now demand a legal reason why the District Attorney wishes this case postponed.

The Court—There is no necessity, Sir; I will not take the matter out of the hands of the District-Attorney. I shall postpone the case until the October term.

Mr. Graham—Without any excuse, Sir?

The Court—Yes, Sir.

Mr. Graham—Then, Sir, I have another duty to perform, and that is, to respectfully protest against the action of the Court.

The Court then adjourned sine die.

INTERESTING FROM MEXICO.

Preparations for the Spanish Invasion—New Phase of the Church Struggle—The Invasion of Sonora—General Crabbe's Proclamation—Proclamation of Gov. Pesquiera—Orders from the Minister of War to Gen. Yanez—The Fillibusters to be Slaughtered.

We have received files of journals from Mexico City to the 26th of April, and from Vera Cruz to the 1st inst.

In reference to the threatened Spanish invasion the Progreso of Vera Cruz says, that preparations for defence have a long time been in progress, and that the invaders will not find them unprepared. It does not think it prudent to give publicity to the details, but it assures its readers, on reliable authority, that the day of trial will find them, so far as material defences are concerned, prepared to meet the aggressor.

THE CHURCH VERSUS THE STATE.

In the Capital the great struggle between the civil and ecclesiastical powers, has taken an entirely new turn, the Archbishop, to the surprise of everybody, having left President COMONFORT far behind in the work of the Church Reform. The occasion was a decree of the Government which revived an ancient law, providing in certain cases for religious services to the poor free of charge. So far from resisting it, the Archbishop immediately issued a formal circular letter, not only confirming the law, but in effect making the priesthood henceforth dependent upon voluntary contributions, instead of compulsory dues, imposed by the civil authority. Omitting the preamble, which seems to breathe a heautiful Christian spirit, we give only the decrees in substance:

1. That you neither refuse nor cause the faithful to wait for the administration of the sacraments, nor other customary offices of the church.

2. That you exact nothing whatever from those who have recourse to your ministry.

3. That you content yourselves with what is voluntarily offered to you.

4. That, without using other means, you give the faithful manuscript copies of this letter, certified by your signature, in order to make them acquainted with it.

5. That in the place for the law, you shall put up a copy in the frame, transcribing it also in the book of Diocesan Acts.

I likewise warn and pray you, in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, that you neither begin nor encourage any conversation upon this law, nor upon any other political question, and much less still that you should not touch upon such matter in the pulpit.

Comments on this circular are as numerous as the point of view from which observation is made. Some pretend to see in it a treacherous insincerity, others think the real opinions of the Archbishop have been misunderstood. The Extraordinary thinks the former; nevertheless, it commends the circular and expresses the hope that President COMONFORT will not be ontdone by the Archbishop in good works, but will cut the Government entirely free from the Church.

The circular, however, has created a rebellion in the Church. The curates in a body have refused to obey its commands, and have resigned their charges to avoid complying with it.

THE SONORA INVASION.

L'Estandarte comments, in a lengthy article, on the invasion of Sonora, and believes that the measures adopted by the Government will be sufficient to frustrate the designs of the fillibusters. It denounces those Mexicans as domestic traitors who are encouraging the enemies of their country.

The same journal publishes two documents—the proclamation of General CRABBE, addressed to the Prefect of the district of Altar, dated March 26, and the answer of Gen. NORIEGA, Commander in-Chief of Sonora, in the form of an address to the garrison of Guaymas, under date of April 2.

In the first Gen. CRABBE declares that he came comformably to the laws of colonization in Mexico given upon the positive information of the most influential citizens of Sonora, without the least design of offending anybody, or of entering into any political or private intrigues. If he was armed and provided with munitions, it was for no other reason but because the Americans, or rather all the civilized people, do not march without arms; besides, he had to traverse the part of the country where the Apaches were continually committing all kinds of depredations. He speaks with great indignation of the rumor generally spread of the wells having been poisoned by order of the Government, and the meanest and most cowardly measures being resorted to for extirpating him and his followers. After rendering the Prefect personally responsible for whatever insults may be committed against him, he concludes with the declaration, that notwithstanding the hostile preparations set forth against him, he is resolved to march to the point where, long time since, he intended to go, and that he is only waiting for the rest of the men who are to accompany him. "I am the Chief," he says, "and my intention is to act as I shall judge it the fittest, conformable to natural law and to the instinct of self-preservation."

The address of the Mexican General to his soldiers begins with qualifying the American immigrants as pirates and banditti, who come to take forced possession of the port of Guaymas and the principal cities of the province. He gives them notice of Governor PESQUIERA having already marched to the frontier in order to repel them, and he concludes with a solemn appeal to their patriotism, and loyalty in defence of the liberty and independence of the country against a band of contemptible pirates, who, without any political profession, wish to usurp their dearest interests.

L'Estandarte, in addition to the above, publishes a proclamation addressed by Gov. PESQUIERA, on the 30th of March, to the free inhabitants of Sonora, and an official communication, under date of April 22, from the Minister of War to General YANEZ, General-in-Chief of the forces of the West.

Governor PESQUIERA, in his proclamation, announces that the declaration of war by the invaders could not be more explicit. "There is only one answer to make to them," he says; "march to meet them! Let there be no mercy shown, no generous sentiment felt for these rascals! Let him die like a wild beast, who, treading beneath his feet the rights of nations, and despising law and all civil institutions, dares to invoke the law of Nature as his only guide, and summons brute force to his aid!"

Governor PESQUIERA then appeals to the patriotism of the Sonorans, and urges them to seize this opportunity to complete a sincere reconciliation.

The communication from the Minister of War to M. YANEZ, approves of the determination taken by the latter to repair in person to the scene of hostilities, after having dispatched, as an advance guard, a force under the command of General CADENA, with artillery and munitions of war. It recognizes the patriotism of the present Government of Sonora, whose activity and decision it praises, and then adds:

"I have seasonably made known to your Excellency, that orders have been issued for the march to your aid from Guadalajara, of a sufficient force, to be followed soon by another force now organizing in Mexico. To-day, dispatches are again sent by express to the Commandant of Jalisco, directing him to forward to Sonora, without any delay, a battalion of Rifles, the 300 recruits which are ready for the same destination, and the Artillery and munitions which have been prepared in anticipation of these events. The Government, pursuaded that these reinforcements should arrive as soon as possible, has also sent to the Commandant an order for $13,000, so that the march may not be delayed, and instructions have been given him, as there may be difficulty in obtaining ships at San Blas, to make further efforts to procure them in order that the troops may embark at that port for Guaymas, and, if this is impossible, to march the men to Mazatlan, where they may obtain means of transportation. In order that your Excellency may count on the resources necessary for the support of the troops and other expences, I transmit you, herewith, orders addressed to the customs officers of Mazatlan, Guaymas, and La Paz, so that they may place the products of the said customs at the disposition of your Excellency. The Supreme Government grants to your Excellency all necessary powers to act with perfect liberty according to the exigencies of the case, well persuaded that your tact and discretion will indicate to you, on every occasion, the path which will best serve the great interests confided to your patriotism."

The Trait d'Union of the 25th of April, says: It must be confessed that if the Supreme Government has been a little tardy in adopting preventive measures, it has at least done all that is humanly possible to institute repressive measures. We await with great impatience for the next news from Sonora.

Brigham Young Still at Salt Lake City.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH TERRITORY, Thursday, March 5, 1857.

Yesterday, as we suppose, JAMES BUCHANAN was inaugurated President of the United States, and entered upon the discharge of his high functions as chief magistrate of the Nation. To-day, a trembling band of American citizens, here in this remote quarter of American dominion, vibrate anxiously between hope and distrust as we wonder whether Utah will be deemed by him to be included in the country wherein he has sworn to maintain the Constitution and the laws—whether he will practically regard our peace, prosperity and lives worth an effort for their preservation against lawless violence. Looking back upon the history of the past seven years, and the course of the National Administrations during that time, what wonder that we have little confidence in the future. FILLMORE laid the foundation of the Mormon treason which has now seized fast hold of the Government of Utah, by appointing BRIGHAM YOUNG to the Governorship, and placing various other responsible offices in the Territory in the hands of equally unscrupulous adherents of the Mormon theocracy. Thus he secured a deceptive peace for awhile, akin to the dread silence of Nature just before the burst of a Summer tempest. General PIERCE continued and developed the evil, by teaching the Mormon leaders that they were safe from all danger of punishment for their crimes, and treating the groans and complaints of their suffering victims with criminal indifference. He knew full well that we were utterly debarred from all the protection nominally conferred by the Constitution—that while the forms of law had been maintained in some measure, their spirit was utterly disregarded by the Mormon appointees of the Federal Government to whom was committed their execution.

Thus the foundations of justice were sapped; thus the very Courts and all the paraphernalia of justice became merely the medium and opportunity for the most unjust oppression, and to cover up crimes which, in any other quarter of the civilized world, would not be tolerated for an hour. We remonstrated against such conduct; but our Mormon officials laughed in our faces, adding insult to our grievous wrongs. We appealed from them to Washington, presenting incontestable evidence that it was idle to hope for justice in Utah,—and were coldly repulsed,—were turned away from the door of the Executive Mansion, much as would be the pestilence-infected pauper, in the fear that his contact might be contagion. The Government seemed to feel that if they listened to us at all, they would be compelled to take the responsibility of righting our wrongs; and so they closed their eyes and their ears against the complaints and the evidence laid before them. Do you doubt the humiliating story, and ask an incident in illustration? I refer you to a single case. When BRIDGER had been robbed and despoiled of his property in 1853, he sought redress at Washington. All the aggravated circumstances of this Mormon outrage upon him were truthfully detailed,—and the impossibility of obtaining redress by legal process was set forth in terms which should have been convincing. Attorney-General CALEB CUSHING looked over the case at his leisure, and then coolly referred the stricken citizen back to the Courts of Utah! And thus the matter rests to this hour. But I must proceed with my narrative of facts.

ARAPEEN, the Chief of the Pah-Utah Indians, has been in the City recently. While here he was very assiduous in endeavors to ascertain what the Mormons were going to fight the Americans for. He said they had been urging him to join them in such a war, but declared that he had refused absolutely to have anything to do with it. There is much food for meditation and conjecture in these statements of the friendly chief, taken in connection with movements known to be contemplated by the Mormons who seek his alliance. BRIGHAM YOUNG, HEBER KIMBALL, and other heads of the Church propose to leave here in April for a trip to the North. They take with them between two and three hundred men, the names of a large list of whom were read off publicly in the Tabernacle on Sunday, the 21st ult. Where they are going or with what design is a profound mystery. Some say they are about to leave the country entirely, and settle in the British possessions; but I can see no reason to put any faith in so improbable a rumor. The British Possessions present no such eligible location as that the Mormons now occupy, and their removal would involve an immense expenditure and loss of property such as they can ill afford to sustain. Besides, they could not hope for the toleration and indifference at the hands of the British Government which they have enjoyed under the flag of the Union. Another rumor is that they go to Bitter Root Valley, in Washington Territory, to establish there a new "stake." Still another suggestion is, that BRIGHAM is going on a tour among the Northern Indians, to excite them against the Gentile whites, and induce them to join the Mormons in a war against the Government forces, should any be sent out against them. My own impressions favor the latter view, although it is not improbable that the founding of a colony in Bitter Root Valley is a part of the programme. The only clue we have to their proposed route is a letter from BRIGHAM shown by ARAPEEN, in which the former invites the Chief to accompany him on his tour, stating that he will pass through the country of the Bonnacks, the Nez Perces, and the Flatheads.

There has been a great deal of activity lately in that mystery of mysteries, the "Endowment House," and hundreds of the new converts have passed through the "degrees," and taken the fearful Mormon oath in which they swear fealty to the Prophet and eternal enmity to the Government of the United States. As a large proportion of these new converts are ignorant proselyted foreigners, just arrived from the Old World, you may suppose that this oath is sworn with a will, and without mental reservation. The ceremony of initiation is generally concluded by the "sealing" of one or more women to every male; and on one day not long since fifty females were thus taken as "spirituals." Unappropriated women are becoming scarce in the Territory, and the polygamous monsters of the Mormon Church are beginning to compel the merest children to their wicked embraces. It was only a few days ago that two little girls, between 10 and 11 years of age, were "sealed" to old men. It is a very common occurrence for girls of 14 to be taken as wives. One object seems to be to get these children into the horrible system of polygamy before they are old enough to think for themselves, or the natural delicacy of their sex shall be aroused and rebel against it.

Another doctrine, almost too disgusting to be mentioned, is beginning to be agitated, and its promulgation is seriously contemplated. Monstrous as it may appear, I am assured on good authority that it has already found practical application to considerable extent, although not yet publicly promulgated. This is the doctrine and the theory on which it is based. One of the leading tenets of Mormonism prescribes the duty of "raising up a Kingdom to God;" and as Missionaries, absent from their families while engaged in the labor of making proselytes in other countries, cannot fulfill their duty in this regard, it is held that their places at home ought in duty to be supplied by others. It is proposed, therefore, to appoint proxies in all such cases, who shall act the part of husbands for the wives of the absent missionaries. This shameful doctrine, of course, is founded on the "revelations of inspiration." So say the leaders; but it will be readily understood that the "inspiration" consists of the depraved will of BRIGHAM YOUNG and his associates, who had looked with evil eyes upon the wives of absent brethren; so the cloak of religious duty is made to cover a new depth of Mormon infamy.

BRIGHAM YOUNG is as thorough a despot over this deluded people as ever held the sceptre. Let me relate an incident to illustrate the arbitrary power which he exercises even in the most minute details of the affairs of his subjects. A marriage, even, without his sanction, is considered of no validity. A young man named ORSON MILES had been paying his addresses to a very amiable and pretty young lady named WHITNEY, with whom he formed an engagement of marriage more than a year ago. Not long since MILES went to BRIGHAM, as in duty bound, to ask his consent to the marriage, which was unhesitatingly granted. Soon after MILES had left the royal presence, a man from one of the southern settlements entered BRIGHAM's office, and asked if he knew where he could get another wife. The cold-hearted villain told him that he would give him Miss WHITNEY. Being reminded by the applicant that she was already engaged, BRIGHAM declared that MILES should not have her, and if she did not become this applicant's wife he would give her to some one else. Subsequently MILES met at the young lady's house a pliant tool of BRIGHAM's, named FERGUSON, (the same creature who figured conspicuously in the dissolution of the United States Court,) who was endeavoring to induce Miss WHITNEY to join his stock of "spirituals." MILES agreed with FERGUSON to submit the question of possession to the young lady's own decision, and she at once gave her preference to her bethrothed. The next morning BRIGHAM sent for her, and told her that she must have either FERGUSON or an old man who was then sitting by FERGUSON's side in the room. With a degree of courage that even men rarely evince here in the presence of our tyrant, Miss WHITNEY replied that she would have nobody but MILES. BRIGHAM immediately ordered MILES on a mission to the Sandwich Islands: if he refuses to go he will be excommunicated, and in constant danger of his life. How the affair will terminate remains to be seen. In all probability the poor girl's only refuge from dishonor is in a suicide

HOWARD, who was stripped by the church of all or nearly all his property, some time last Summer. Subsequently he confessed his sins, resumed the Mormon faith, was rebaptized into the Church, and now wants another wife. Mr. SUTHERLAND started for the States on business for this HOWARD, very much disaffected towards Mormonism when he left. His wife, who remained here, has never been a Mormon, but has constantly rejected its teachings and doctrines. She was very anxious that her husband should not return to Utah, and wrote to him in the States after he left, begging him not to come back, and stating that she would join him there. It is doubtful whether he ever received the letter, for it is well known that all such documents not in the Mormon interest, if sent through the mail never reach their destination. When she received tidings of his death she was overwhelmed with grief. Some of the old Procuresses (I can use no milder term) called the next day, and attempted to console her by telling her that he was an apostate, and had met the fate that all apostates must expect,—that his friends ought to rejoice, for his blood had been shed as an atonement for his sins; and he was thereby saved from eternal perdition. She was furthermore exhorted to give herself no uneasiness, and assured that she could find another and better husband in the Church. Such language in the hour of her sorrow nearly crazed the poor woman. She was consoling herself, however, with the thought that she had a friend in Mr. HOWARD, but soon found that this last resort had failed her. HOWARD did not hesitate to assist the Mormons in robbing her of what little property her husband had left, and added the last drop to her cup of wretchedness by importuning her to become one of his spiritual wives. Among the influences brought to bear to obtain her consent to this proposition, was that of the Bishop of the Ward who came to her, ioquired her means of subsistence, and then significantly advised her to marry HOWARD. Nor did her persecution end here.

She had some business with a gentleman (not a Mormon)—recently a merchant in St. Louis, and now connected with the firm of GILBERT & GERRISH, of this place—relative to some of her husband's affairs, and was under the necessity of visiting his store several times. The other day he carried her a distance of several blocks in a sleigh to call on Mrs. BARNEY, and from there to her house. The next day the "teachers" of the Ward (underoverseers) called upon her and forbade her going out with or receiving visits from Gentiles, intimating that if she failed to comply she could not remain in the Ward. The object of this and similar measures was to reduce her to despairing subjugation, and to such extremity as might force her to consent to be "sealed" to HOWARD or some other member of the church, although she has never been herself a member. Failing to intimidate her and to effect their purposes, the next step was to traduce her character, brand her with opprobrious epithets, and so endeavor to make life a burden except at the price of infamy already demanded. The poor woman is quite destitute, and those who have dared afford her shelter have been robbed and abused, and their houses have been fired. She is thousands of miles from her relatives, without means of communicating with them, and those who would befriend her here know that they do it at the risk of their own ruin. What wonder that she is nearly crazed with her troubles! We are truly realizing a "reign of terror," for the best friends dare not perform a friend's offices, and the father is compelled to refuse sanctuary to his child who has fallen under the displeasure of the authorities of the church.

Some two or three weeks ago I met, by accident, a very interesting girl, apparently 16 years of age. I was informed not long afterwards that BRIGHAM YOUNG had sent for the girl's father, directing him to come at a specified time to his office. He went, and found with BRIGHAM a man by the name of MCRAY, who has several wives already. BRIGHAM said to the father: "You have two daughters; what are their ages?" The father replied that one was 19 and the other 16 years of age. YOUNG then told him that he must give the eldest to MCRAY. The father, not daring to give a flat refusal, put them off by saying he believed she was engaged. Subsequently HEBER C. KIMBALL, who stands next to YOUNG in the Priesthood, offered a yoke of oxen and wagon for the girl. This purchasing of young girls from their parents is not uncommon here and if, in such cases, the father refuses either to give or sell the girl to some one of the band, he will soon be cut off from the Church, and become a target for every species of outrage and oppression. This MCRAY to whom I have allnded, is the Territorial Marshal.

One can scarcely help pausing here for a moment to admire the economy and advantages which Mormonism enjoys. The untntored savage when he becomes enamored of some dusky maiden marks the strength of his devotion by the number of horses he ties up at the lodge of her father. The horses stand tied until a family consultation is held, in which the girl has a voice and her preferences or prejudices are respected. If the proposals are acceptable the horses are turned loose in the drove of the father: if rejected they are simply cast loose to run at large, with their halters dangling from their necks. It is not uncommon for an Indian suitor who is deeply impressed by the charms of his inamorata, to tie up five, ten and sometimes twenty of his best horses as an offering. Nor is he allowed by his tribe to murmur or become refractory if his proposals are rejected. Bnt "the aocointed of the Lord," the "second Seer and Revelator" seems to have placed a lower estimate on the value of a wife, and with less Christian forbearance and patience than the Indian, is ready to resort to coercive measures to secure the object on which his blighting passion falls. A yoke of oxen and a second hand wagon are worth about $120 here. Raising women for sale would seem to be a poor business in Utah. The trade must be better in Georgia and Circassia among the Mohammedans. The Mormon leaders are very anxious to get fast hold of the young girl to whom I have alluded, for fear of losing her, as she visits a family not in the church, and her Mormonism is thus endangered. In Ward meeting on the evening of 25th of January, the speaker declared that if she did not cease visiting the Gentiles she should have her throat cut,—and that if her father would not be her executioner somebody else should!

The Mormons have been for some time past endeavoring to induce a little orphan girl who is living with Mr. DODSON, the United States Marshal, to leave his house and protection. Her parents died on the plains on the way out here, and she was brought through by the Mormons, who paid themselves by stripping her of everything, even to her chemiso, and leaving her not an article of clothing save an old calico gown all in rags. In this sole garment she was taken into Mr. DODSON'S family, who have clothed her well and taken care of her for nearly three years. She is now about 15 years of age, and is coveted for a "spiritual" by half a dozen sensual vagabonds. Mr. DODSON forbids their coming upon his premises, threatening to shoot the first one who attempts it. Thus far the various attempts to inveigle her away have failed of success.

On the night of the 20th of December last the office of the Clerk of the United States Supreme Court, which was also the office of the United States Circuit Court, was broken open and robbed of all the records, books and papers of every kind, together with the libraries of Judge STILES and T. S. WILLIAMS, containing some nine hundred volumes. These were all thrown into the vault of a privy in an adjoining yard, after which they were covered with straw, shingles and other combustibles, and the whole were burned and utterly destroyed. This was the first step taken towards the breaking up of the United States Courts. The city authorities and Governor YOUNG take not the least notice of the affair, while the citizens chuckle over it as a clever trick.

The following statement will give you an idea of the hazards of business here at this time. A Mr. HOCKADAY, formerly of Independence, Mo., is the proprietor of a valuable tannery in this city. When he left for the States some months since on a business trip, he constitnted Mr. DODSON his agent to attend to all of his business here, and left a German named TOUSIG in the tannery as foreman. HOCKADAY, let me premise, had excited the ill-will of the Mormons by his frank, out-spoken denunciation of wrongs perpetrated upon defenceless women, and upon men who were unable to resist the overpowering force brought against them whenever Mormon hate or cupidity wanted a victim. Soon after he left this place some of the leading men in Mormondom called on TOUSIG, and endeavored to induce him to commence a suit against HOCKADAY in his absence, assuring him that if he would follow their directions they would enable him to obtain absolnte possession and ownership of the tannery. The property, they suggested, was too valuable for any d—d Gentile to have in this territory; that they were determined to break HOCKADAY up, and that his return never need be feared, for if he should ever attempt it he would be killed.

TOUSIG replied that he had no claim against HOCKADAY, with whom he had a written agreement which set forth the conditions on which he was employed, and of which HOCKADAY had a copy. They rejoined that they knew where HOCKADAY'S copy was, and would see that it was destroyed. Finally they threatened TOUSIG'S life if he should refuse to comply. Nevertheless he rejected their base overtures, which were several times repeated. In the meantime he requested Mr. DODSON to get him an assistant. DODSON wrote to HOCKADAY, who sent a man ont from the States. When the man reached here Mr. D. sent him down to the tannery to go to work; but TOUSIG refnsed to permit him, locking the tools up in a small room on the place, and pocketing the key. The bribes and threats of his brother Mormons had at last corrupted TOUSIG, and he was now prepared to aid them in their nefarious scheme. DODSON thereupon consulted with THOS. S. WILLIAMS, his lawyer, (a dissenting Mormon, as will be remembered,) who advised him to go to the tannery and set the man at work, and to break open the room and take the keys by force if TOUSIG refused to deliver them, and so obtain the necessary tools. He followed the advice, being aided in obtaining possession of the tools by the workman and a friend. All thsee were immediately arrested by a Mormon officer, who, with the notorious BILL HICKMAN and some of his Danite gang were lying in walt. Lawyer WILLIAMS was also arrested for giving the professional advice under which his client had acted!

The Probate Court was at once convened, a Grand Jury was summoned, and the next day all the parties were indicted and pnt upon their trial for honsebreaking. All were found guilty, of course, "according to order," and fined in snms varying from $600 to $800. Everybody will see that the Probate Court could have no shadow of jurisdiction over criminal offences, and tbet this entire jndicial proceeding was a solemn farce, and the grossest possible usurpation. The defendants immediately applied for an appeal to the United States Court, as they would have had the right even were their arrest and trial perfectly regular. This was peremptorily refused, the Judge telling them they should not he permlited to appeal from his decision, and that it was an insult to the Court to ask it. There upon he immediately issued execution against the parties. It happened that the United States Court, Jndge STILES sltting, met the next week, when the parties applied for a writ of error, obtained it, and had the entire proceedings carried before that tribunal for examination. The final hearing of the case was postponed until February, TOUSIG takiog full possession of the tannery in the meantime. During the trial there were frequent exhibitions of angry feeling. The Jndge and attorney—who were both Mormons, although the Jndge is a dissenter—were denounced as Apostates, and furious threats were uttered against them. The acting District-Attorney for the Territory declared openly that Judge STILES dared not decide against the Probate Court, that he had pledged himself to BRIGHAM and the Legislature last Winter that he would not do so. The Judge denied having made any such pledges. While the trial was progressing, WILLIAMS, the Attorney, was appealed to by every tie of Mormondom (he was formerly a member of the Church) to abandon his Gentile clients to their fate. He was told that if he would not interfere they could "easily clean out the d—d Gentiles," and was finally promised a large sum of money if he would thus betray them into the hands of the enemy. WILLIAMS' spirit and pride had become fully aroused, and he spurned their proposals with disdain.

Having failed in that quarter, the Mormons then approached the Judge, and attempted to bribe him by offers of large pecuniary reward to sustain the decisions of the Probate Court. It was an important point for them to gain, and they looked beyond this individual case to the vital principle to be settled in its decision—hence thier importnnity. If the decisions of the Prebate Court should be sustained, then they could at will strip an American citizen or an offending Mormon of all he possessed, and even send him to the Penitentiary or the gallows, and yet be protected by the flimsy veil of legal forms. All efforts to corrupt STILES and WILLIAMS failed, and both were cut off from the Mormon Church in consequence, and have been continually subject to annoyance, insult and such outrages as I have heretofore described, ever since. The destruction of the books and records of the Court probably grew ont of this affair, and attempts have been repeatedly made to fire the dwellings of the gentlemen thus offending against Mormon discipline. You may judge from this affair—which I have narrated with snch minuteness of detail—what protection to life and property is afforded in Utah; and from it you can estimate the efficiency of the remedies provided us by "the administration of justice" through the Courts of the country. And yet it was to Courts sitting under snch circumstances that the late Administration mockingly referred us to obtain redress against wrongs just as flagrant as those now narrated! In the fall of 1855 an exciting case was to be tried before Chief Justice KINNEY; but just before the case was reached on the docket the records of the Court were stolen and kept ont of reach for several days. The Mormon thieves finding, however, that the absence of the records was likely to prejndice their case instead of defeating its presont settlement, took measures to restore them, and they were thrown through the window of the Court-room during the night time, and found on the floor in the morning considerably injured and defaced. Judge STILES is the only United States Jndge remaining in the Territory; and I do not see how he can hope to prolong his life except by speedy flight. Indeed, by the time this reaches you it is not improbable that he will be far on his way to the States.

But I weary of these sickening details, although what I have given you is only an inkling of what we suffer here. I know you will find it hard to believe that, living under the flag of the Union, we can be subject to such tyranny and oppression; but God knows that I have given you a simple nnvarnished tale, and that it is quite impossible to convey to you an adequate idea of the whole system of wrong which we suffer, made np as it is of daily and countless annoyances,—outrages which sensitive men and women feel none the less keenly because they are too petty for narration, or too cunningly devised to be easily exposed. Let me close with an earnest appeal: "Come over and help us!" I fear, alas! that no aid can be afforded now by the Govsrnment ere it is too late for very many of us; but there is a rising generation here, comprising many an innocent and as yet unpolluted young girl who may be saved from degradation and a life of wretchedness. In any event there is time to avenge our deaths if we should fall, and to wipe out the foul blnt which the Theocracy that rules these plains has fixed upon the National escntcheon. I will write again should I have opportunity. UTAH.

ALL QUIET IN THE TERRITORY—BRIGHAM YOUNG AT SALT LAKE CITY.

ST LOUIS, Monday, May 18.

The overland Utah mail has arrived here with Salt Lake City dates of the 2d April.

The Territory was quiet.

Preparations were making to send a large number of missionaries to all parts of the world.

The accounts of the movements of BRIGHAM YOUNG do not accord with those received via California. He seemed to possess the entire confidence of the people, and was planning a pleasure excursion to the Mormon settlement at Salmon River.

For some unknown cause, the Mormons at St. Bernardin and surrounding settlements, have been summoned to Salt Lake City.

The Cheyennes were becoming bold and defiant. A trader, arrived from Fort Laramie, reported that the Indians acknowsidged a loss of sixty warriors sent to commit depredations on the California road, in consequence of which they have made prisoners of sixteen traders, and have sent one hundred warriors to the road to avenge the loss.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Decisions in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

CHARTER PARTY—CHARTER MONEY WHEN PAYABLE—MASTER.

William Cannon et al. vs. Francis Vose et al.—This was a libel filed by the owners of the schooner Excelsior to recover from the defendants an alleged balance of $650 upon a charter of the brig to them for a voyage to Port-au-Prince and back for the sum of $1,400, of which one-half was by the charter to be "considered earned and due on discharge of outward cargo, but payable by the charterers in New-York except what might be required for disbursements in Hayti to the amount of $150." The one-half of the charter money was admitted to have been received, and $150 of the other half. The respondents set up that the master of the brig allowed her to be seized for debts incurred for her at Port au-Prince, and they advanced money there to free the vessel to the amount of $511 10, and the balance, $188 90, they paid after suit brought. The question was whether what they had paid at Port-au-Prince was to be credited upon the charter money beyond the $150 specified in the charter.

Ordered, That it be referred to a Commissioner to ascertain whether the sum of money paid by the respondents to the master of the vessel at Port-au-Prince, or upon his draft at that place, or paid the libelants since the commencement of the suit, satisfies in full the $700 payable on the charter-party, together with costs of suit due at the time of payment thereof.

For libelants, Messrs. Platt, Gerard and Buckley; for respondents, Messrs. Benedict, Burr and Benedict.

SALVAGE—DERELICT—DISTRIBUTION.

John Ahsbike et al. vs. The Sloop Trusty and her Cargo.—This is a motion for an order of distribution of the proceeds of salved property among the respective salvors. No party appeared to content the suit for salvage, and a decree was therefore rendered by default. The salvors demand the allotment of the entire property to them as compensation for bringing it in. This is against the general principles of salvage rewards, which contemplate a division of the property saved between its owner and those who have preserved it and restored it to him. It may, however, happen that the expense of rescuing and restoring the property equals its entire value, or so nearly so that the surplus is an inadequate reward to the salvors for their risk and labor. In that case, it is competent to the Court to devote the whole property to the satisfaction of the charges incurred in rescuing it. The misfortune of the owner, however, is never to be lost sight of in the anxiety to do full justice to the merits of the salvors.

The owners of the Trusty and her cargo bought her in at the auction sale under the decree of condemnation in this cause at the sum of $1,800, and the net proceeds deposited in Court were $1,468 80.

The schooner William A. Spofford, which was employed in making the salvage, was worth at the time $8,000, and her cargo $12,000. Her owner expended in making the salvage and keeping the wreck after it was brought in $115 75. She was manned by a crew of nine men and a master, bound from Florida to New-York with a full cargo of cedar wood on board. She fell in with the Trusty Dec. 28, 1856, some 300 miles from New York, totally abandoned and partly stripped. The weather was rough and the sea had. The wreck was manned and worked into New-York, arriving on Jan. 1, 1857. The position of the wreck, the state of the weather and season of the year were all unfavorable to saving her, but she was worked in by judicious and persevering exertions without any special hazard other than supplying some equipments from the salving vessel and two men to navigate the wreck, and being exposed to extra labor on both vessels.

I think the largest allowance ordinarily made for salvage in case of derelict is the proper sum to be awarded in this instance. I shall decree that the libelants recover one moiety of the net proceeds of the wreck, after payment of the taxable costs. I accept the plan of distribution amongst the salvors proposed by the libelants, and direct the sum in Court, after deducting the costs of suit, to be divided into fourteen equal parts, one-half of which is to be paid to the owner of the Spofford, three parts to the mate who took charge of the wreck, and two parts to the seamen who went on board with him, and aided in navigating her into New-York, one part to the master of the Spofford, and a moiety of one part to each of the remainder of the crew.

For libelants, Mr. Sandford. For claimant, Mr. Jennes.

TOWING CONTRACT—DAMAGE TO VESSEL TOWED.

George W. Patten et al. vs. The Steamer Illinois.—This was a libel filed by the owners of the canal boat J. W. Williams, to recover the damages occasioned to the boat by a collision, while being towed by the Illinois from Albany to New-York, "at the risk of master and owners of the boat towed," which collision the libelant alleged to have been occasioned by negligence on the part of the steamboat.

Held by the Court—That the exact manner in which the injury was incurred is not proved. That it is unimportant whether the colliding object was an associated boat or the steamer herself, if the injury was caused by the fault of the steamer. That no other fault in the navigation of the steamer is proved than that it was attempted to put her in motion after she had been checked in the fog to avoid another tug at anchor.

That this does not render the injury, if so received, one inflicted by any wrongful and positive act of the steamer. She was not steered against the boat, nor did she drag her upon herself or any other one, or draw any other against her.

That the injury was occasioned by the inattention of those in charge of the tow.

Libel dismissed with costs.

For libelant, Mr. Shufeldt; for claimants, Mr. Van Santvoord.

LIEN FOR SUPPLIES—BEHTARING.

Mathias Clickener et al. vs. The Sloop Revenge.—This was a libel filed to recover for repairs and supplies furnished to the vessel in this port.

The merits of the case were not gone into, as the case fell within the rule of decision laid down by the United States Supreme Court at the last term, in the case of Platt vs. Reed, and the Court, as was done in several other similar cases, allowed a rehearing of the case, if the parties desired, otherwise the libel must be dismissed.

For libelant, Mr. Donohue; for claimant, Mr. McMahon.

COMMISSIONER'S REPORT—ALTERNATIVE DAMAGES.

Jedediah Chapman et al. vs. The Steamboat Empire State.—In this case, which was brought to recover damages for a collision, a decree was rendered for the libelant, with a reference to the Commissioner to ascertain the damages.

The Commissioner, on the request of the proctors for the respective parties, drew up his report, estimating the damages in two ways. First, on the supposition that the libelant had the right to abandon his vessel; and, second, in case he was bound to repair. The matter then came up on exceptions to the report.

By the Court—There is no foundation in the report of the Commissioner upon which the Court can act in determining the amount of damages. The report must be absolute as to the sum found payable, and cannot be in the alternative. The decree of condemnation gives no direction or authority for a conditional report. For libelant, Mr. Haskett. For claimant, Mr. Lord.

SALVAGE—VESSEL CARRIED OFF BY ICE.

Martin Denning vs. The sloop James P. Wilde.—This was a libel filed by the owner of the steamboat Sarah B. Brown, to secure compensation for alleged salvage services rendered to the sloop. The sloop, being worth about $1,900, was lying at a dock in the East River on the Brooklyn side and was swept away by a field of ice coming by on the flood tide, and from into the field with no one on board. She was carried over near the piers on the New York side and was in danger of being crushed against them, but was rescued by the steam tug and carried to a place of safety. The service occupied about seven hours. The owner of the sloop offered the libelant $50 for the service, which he refused, but was willing to take $200. Deems that libelant is entitled to a like with costs.

For libelant, Mr. McMahon; for claimant, Mr. Haskett.

SUPPLIES—SAILING ON SHARES—MASTER'S REPRESENTATIONS—OWNERSHIP.

Charles Harriman vs. Sewell V. Dodge.—The libel in this case was filed to recover $51 83 for an anchor, supplied by the libelant to the Sloop Exchange, in May, 1854. The vessel had belonged to one Kingsland, as the libelant knew, having dealt with him as such owner. In November, 1853, Kingsland conveyed her to the respondent to secure his indebtedness to him. The anchor was ordered by McGee, the master, who was sailing the vessel on shares and who was appointed master by Kingsland in the Spring of 1854. In July, 1854, the vessel was conveyed to one Thompson at Kingsland's request. McGee, when he bought the anchor, said Dodge owned the vessel. The sale was in effect for cash, though delivered without exacting immediate payment.

Both parties resided in the City of New-York.

Held by the Court—That the libelant gives no proof of such exigency as would give him a lien upon the vessel for the anchor, under the ruling in the case of Pratt vs. Reed, recently decided in the United States Supreme Court.

That no obligation against the vessel having been created by the sale, the vendor cannot sustain an action against her owner for the supplies, because of his ownership, without proving that the purchase was his personal act or made by his authorized agent.

That if McGee did tell the libelant he was authorized by the respondent to buy the anchor no authority for that declaration is shown, as he was appointed master by Kingsland, and sailed her on shares with Kingsland, and Kingsland testifies that he never authorized him to make such statements. On the contrary, the testimony goes clearly to prove that the respondent only held a mortgage interest in the sloop and that the title was all the time in Kingsland.

That there is, accordingly, no foundation in law or fact for the action.

Libel dismissed with costs.

For libelant, Mr. McMahon; for respondent, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue.

MOTION TO SET ASIDE SALE—PRACTICE—PARTIES.

Jesse H. Freeman et al. vs. The Steam Propeller Albany.—In this case the propeller was libeled for wages by one Johnson, and her owners not appearing, she was ordered to be sold by default, and was accordingly sold by the Marshal at auction for $2,000. Some time elapsed before the sale was completed, but after the money had been paid and the bill of sale given, the present application was made to set aside the sale because of irregularity in carrying the decree of sale into execution and gross inadequacy of price accepted on the sale, and fraudulent and covinous acts and purposes in procuring the condemnation and sale of the vessel.

Held by the Court—That the allegations upon which the application is founded are strongly contradicted, and the Court would not consider it consistent with a safe administration of justice to set aside the sale, upon the evidence, if this proceeding were otherwise unexceptionable.

But that the proceeding is wholly irregular. The proceeding is neither by nor against any party interested in the subject of it, or between whom any effective decree could be made, whatever may be the merits of the case. The motion is not entitled or made in the cause in which the decree was rendered and the sale made, nor does it appear that the promovents in this matter were parties or privies to that action. They have, therefore, no legal capacity to invoke these proceedings to review a judgment, by summary motion in another case.

Motion denied with costs.

For the motion, Mr. Laforge. In opposition, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue.

COLLISION.

William Price vs. The steamboat George Law.—The libel in this case was filed by the owner of the sloop Mars, to recover damages for a collision between her and the steamboat, on the 25th of June, 1855, off Throgg's Point.

Held by the Court—That the steamboat was guilty of no inattention or misconduct conducing to the accident. She was pursuing a regular course, out of danger of contact with the libelant's vessel, when the latter abruptly and unnecessarily was veered off her own course under the wheels of the steamer,—so suddenly that, although the latter instantly made the proper exertions to avoid her, the collision took place. The negligence or fault was wholly on the side of the libelant

Libel dismissed with costs.

For libelant, Mr. Haskett: for claimant, Mr. McMahon.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—May 18.

The General Term was yesterday adjourned without transacting any business. The examination of candidates for admission to practice at the bar, has been postponed until Thursday at 3 o'clock.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

DECISIONS.

Billeborrow vs. Titus, &c.—A reference cannot be allowed. Judgment for defendant in each case, with costs.

Steele vs. Lawrence—Attachment set aside without costs.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM

Before Hon. Justice Hoffman.

PRACTICE—APPEAL FROM ADJUSTMENT—COSTS OF APPEAL, ETC.

Esther Payne vs. Joseph S. Ridgway, impl'd &c.—This action was commenced in 1855, to recover possession of a pension certificate. The complaint alleged that the certificate of the plaintiff, a pensioner under the Act of Feb. 3, 1853, was detained from her unjustly by the defendant Ridgway, and another, and that the certificate was of value, and claiming damages for its detention. The defendant Ridgway, answered separately, setting up that he retained the certificate under a lien for services as attorney. To this answer the plaintiff put in a demurrer, which was argued at Special Term, and judgment final rendered for plaintiff in March, 1856. Costs thereon were adjusted by the clerk, on due notice, without objection by the defendant as to the right of the plaintiff to costs, and were inserted in the record of judgment, which was duly entered up and execution thereon issued.

From that judgment, an appeal was taken by the defendant, Ridgway, to General Term, the usual undertaking being given for costs of appeal. The appeal was argued, but no question was raised on the argument as to the right to costs. Judgment of affirmance was rendered by General Term. Costs of appeal were duly noticed for adjustment. Upon adjustment thereof the defendant first raised the objection that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs, as this action was to recover the possession of personal property, and there had been no determination of value or assessment of damages under section 304 of the code. The clerk disregarded this objection, and costs of appeal were duly adjusted by him. Judgment for such cost was entered up in November last. Subsequently, the defendant moved for a readjustment of such costs by the Court, and to set the judgment aside for irregularity. The motion was granted, only so far as to open the adjustment, allowing the defendant to state, in writing, his objections to the "adjustment, or any items of the same."

Readjustment was accordingly made before Mr. Justice HOFFMAN. A preliminary objection, taken on behalf of the plaintiff, that adjustment of costs upon judgment final could be made only by the clerk, and therefore adjustment by the Court was a nullity, and that the Court, or a judge thereof, could make readjustment, if at all, only by way of appeal from the clerk, was overruled—his Honor holding that the Court, or a judge, had the right to make adjustment of costs, and had full control of the subject matter of costs.

Upon readjustment of costs, the objection was then again urged by the defendant, that, as there had been no determination of value or assessment of damages in the action, the plaintiff, under section 304 of the code, was not entitled to costs. To this it was answered that costs followed, as of course, judgment of affirmance at General Term; that his honor could not go behind the record awarding costs upon judgment at Special Term to examine how that award was made, but was bound to assume, as the defendant had not objected, or appealed from that award or adjustment, that it was duly made; and that defendant, by his course, had waived the determination of value and assessment of damages required by section 304 of the code, as they were rights of, and for his benefit, as the defendant, which he could waive.

The question as to plaintiff's right to costs was disposed of by an order granted May 5, inst., that "the costs as included in the bill of costs on appeal adjusted be allowed," &c., "the judgment to stand for that amount."

Mr. Devereux for the plaintiff; Mr. D. P. Hall for the defendant.

Before Hon. Justice Bosworth.

Jenny Gray vs. Fanny Lessington.—On filing an undertaking in the sum of $250, with two sureties, to be approved of by a justice of this City, on two days' notice to defendant's attorney, all proceedings on the judgment appealed from shall be stayed, pending the appeal.

Henry P. Pierson, Receiver, &c., vs. Robert C. Rathbone, et al.—Judgment for defendants. Complaint dismissed, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff personally.

Before Hon. Justice Duer.

Fall vs. Scully—Demurrer to complaint allowed, with liberty to plaintiffs to amend on payment of costs.

Burriston vs. The Panama Railroad Company.—Motion granted, without costs.

Dykers vs. The New York and New Haven Railroad Company.—Motion denied, without costs.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Sandy.

John Huber vs. Thomas Lewis—Motion to dismiss complaint granted.

Joseph Soria vs. George Bliss.—Motion to vacate order of arrest, denied.

Before Judge Daly.

J. Maria Farina vs. William Depew.—Judgment for plaintiff on the demand with costs.

William Raquei vs. Martin Lewis.—Motion granted.

John F. Callen vs. John W. Lalson.—Motion for attachment denied without costs.

David M. Meliss vs. Thomas B. Peddie.—Motion for an injunction denied.

The ice from Lake Erie is running in large quantities, and on the 10th inst., formed an immense bridge just below the cataract, on which men crossed the river.

JAMES PYLE'S DIETETIC SALERATUS is acknowledged by all who try it, the purest and best article in use. It is entirely free from the caustic impurities of common saleratus, so destructive to the digestive organs, while, for making Biscuit, Cake, and all kinds of Pastry, admirably light it excels the best baking soda, and requires less shortening to produce the desired richness. Parents who regard their children's health should use no other.
It is sold at all the groceries, in one pound, half pound and quarter pound packages, with the name of JAMES PYLE thereon, without which none is genuine.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the arrival of the Arago at this port, and the Anglo Saxon at Quebec, we receive four days later news from Europe. The speech from the Throne had not been delivered to the British Parliament, and, consequently, no business of importance had been yet transacted. The opposition has marshalled its forces under the banner of Reform, and Mr. ROEBUCK will attack the address, if it does not offer a distinct pledge of a Reform bill. It is not probable, however that Lord PALMERSTON will allow his opponents any such advantage. The Manchester Art-Treasures Exhibition was opened on the 5th of May, with great ceremony and eclat by Prince ALBERT. An immense concourse of spectators was present. Lord ELGIN had left Marseilles for the scene of his future labors. The Emperor of the French has appointed Baron GROS as his Minister Plenipotentiary to China.

It is reported from Spain that the hopes of a reconciliation with Mexico are more encouraging. The Queen's speech indicates as much. The Swiss Journals, in defiance of diplomatic etiquette and to the disgust of the Moniteur, have published the text of the treaty for the settlement of the Neufchâtel question. We gave the substance of this document in our Saturday's impression.

We present this morning another exceedingly interesting chapter from our Salt Lake correspondence, replete with graphic narrative of startling facts transpiring in that remote section of our country, showing that unmitigated treason, murder, arson, robbery and fiendish debauch, are every-day incidents of Mormon life, and that not an effort is made to check the perpetration of any of these terrible crimes. Our correspondent's statement completely sets at rest the rumor of BRIGHAM YOUNG's flight—for at a date considerably later than that of the Carson Valley rumor, the Prophet was still at Great Salt Lake City, organizing a secret expedition to somewhere in the North, for some purpose unknown to the Gentile world, and this fact is still further corroborated by a dispatch from St. Louis which we publish elsewhere. His negotiation with the Chief PAH-UTAH for his cooperation in the plans of the expedition, fully explain the statement that he had been treating with the Indians for safe conduct out of the country. Women were becoming scarce in the Territory, and the Mormons consequently are resorting to merest children to replenish their harems; while the most fiendish oppression is resorted to for the purpose of forcing reluctant females to become the "spirituals" of Mormon Turks. A new doctrine had been practically introduced in the Mormon creed, and was expected soon to be promulgated—to wit, that proxies for filling proxies to supply the place of husbands to wives of Missionaries absent on foreign service, so that "the duty of raising up a Kingdom to the Lord" may not fail of performance during their absence. But we refer to the letter for details of more than usual interest, none of which, we are sure, will be omitted by the reader who commences their perusal.

We have received our exchanges from the City of Mexico to the 26th of April and from Vera Cruz to the 1st of May. The most stringent measures had been taken to annihilate the Sonora filibusters—so stringent, indeed, as to lend a probability to the report received by telegraph that Col. CRABAE, the commander of the party and sixty others, had been captured, and shot. Gov. PESQUEIRA, in his proclamation to the citizens of Sonora, tells them to show the invaders no mercy, and the War Department has exercised great energy in despatching a formidable body of troops to the scene of anticipated hostilities. The Archbishop, in his last circular, completely succumbs to the law, and recommends obedience to the Constitution. Opinions vary as to whether his Grace is sincere or not in his new character of pacificator. It is stated that preparations for defence have been for some time progressing in Vera Cruz, and that a Spanish fleet, whenever it appears in Mexican waters, will meet with a stubborn resistance.

The Columbia, S. C., Times, of May 15, states that "news was received in that city the day before that Hon. A. P. BUTLER lies dangerously ill from a sudden and alarming attack of sickness, and that but little hope of his recovery is entertained."

A dispatch from St. Louis states that the Kansas United States District has entered a nolle prosequi in all the treason trials pending. The cases of Gov. ROBINSON and others, arraigned for usurpation of office, will be determined in a similar manner.

JOHN J. ECKEL appeared in Court yesterday, and through his counsel demanded a trial on the indictment for the murder of Dr. BURDELL. The District-Attorney said that for reasons which he could not state in open Court, he was unwilling to proceed with the trial, and accordingly moved that it be laid over until the October term, when he intended to enter a nolle prosequi. Mr. ECKEL's counsel represented the hardship of thus sending his client out under suspicion of murder, without giving him a trial which should determine the question of his guilt or innocence. But the Court granted the motion of the District-Attorney, against the protest and earnest remonstrance of Mr. ECKEL's counsel.

Yesterday the old Police Commissioners (Mayor WOOD and Judge RUSSELL) met and deposed Captain CARPENTER, of the Fifth Ward, because he had openly announced to his men that he should obey the orders of the new Commission alone, and put Lieut. HORRIGAN in his place. There was great excitement at the Fifth Ward Station-house, where, later in the day, both Captains assumed the control, but nothing serious came of it all. In Brooklyn, Mr. FOLKS issued his orders as "Deputy Superintendent," acknowledging himself as subject to the new Commission. Mayor POWELL issued orders in contradiction, and so the matter stands there.

There are pretty positive statements in circulation to the effect that the owners of the lease of Coney Island have made direct offers to the Commissioners of Quarantine to cede to them that place for hospital purposes. It is said, too, that the town of Gravesend is ready to surrender the jurisdiction of the place, and to withdraw all further objections to its use for the purposes of Quarantine. We cannot affirm that these statements are reliable.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday elected Supervisor STEERS, President of the Board for the remainder of the term. They also voted to allow the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police, five men and no more; and directed the Clerk to inform the Commissioners of their action.

Another communication was received by the Board of Supervisors from the Commissioners of Excise, asking apartments for their accommodation. The Board refused to hear it read and laid it on the table. The Commissioners intend to meet this morning at 9½ o'clock, A. M., in one of the Common Pleas Court rooms, if they are allowed. Commissioner HAWES has resigned.

Two communications were received by the Board of Aldermen last evening, from the Mayor. The first recommending an appropriation for the purchase of the Arsenal located within the Central Park; and the second, forwarding a resolution passed by the Grand Jury, in favor of offering a reward for the discovery of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL.

The Board of Councilmen adjourned yesterday for want of a quorum.

Sixteen members of Dr. GEO. B. CHEEVER's Church, last week, invited him to resign his pastoral charge over the Church of the Puritans in this City, disliking his course on the matter of the Supreme Court Dred Scott decision. Last night there was a meeting of his church and congregation, which resulted in an unanimous vote sustaining Dr. CHEEVER. The parties who signed the letter, asking the Doctor to resign, were among the audience, and either voted with the majority or kept silence.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting last evening at the Mercantile Library of members of the Association favoring the election for officers of the ensuing year of the ticket headed by R. A. BACHIA for Vice President. Mr. H. S. SMITH made the principal speech. Strong resolutions were passed declaring the present management as very bad and the general condition of the association as deplorable.

The second trial of THOMAS DENINY for arson was commenced in General Sessions yesterday, and the whole panel of jurors was exhausted before a jury could be obtained. A fresh panel was summoned for this morning.

Filibusterism on the two Sides of the Globe—A Contrast.

Nineteen years ago an English gentlemen born in India and familiar with the people of the East, conceived the idea of establishing himself among the natives of Borneo, for the purpose of organizing them into a nation and teaching them how to be their own masters. He was one of those rare men whom an idea torments into action, and his project was first published to the world by the fact of its achievement. He asked no help of his own Government; he appealed neither to the lust of dominion nor to the greed of gold among his countrymen. He quietly invested his paternal fortune in the necessary preparations for his enterprise, embarked a small but trained and resolute crew of followers, upon a swift and well-armed yacht, and sailed to the Indian Archipelago. Sarawak, his point of destination, was the centre of a population of Dyaks, an intelligent, capable, civilizable race, upon whose gradual decay and threatened extinction the heroic adventurer, JAMES BROOKE, had looked with an intense and sympathizing interest for many years. They were menaced by foes of all sorts. Piratical tribes of their own kindred swarmed along their shores, to the ruin of their commerce; despotic sovereigns crushed out their industry by excessive and barbaric taxation; while the colonial representatives of England, France and Holland were continually making mercenary love to them and their possessions.

BROOKE appeared among them in the character of a deliverer. He undertook to chase the pirates from their rivers, to instruct their rulers in the first principles of civilized government and themselves in the practice of enlightened labor. His self-imposed mission was, as will be seen, a very singular one, and demanded for its successful fulfillment the highest qualities alike of head and of heart; the sagacious benevolence of a Manco Capac; the persevering faith of a Columbus, the military skill of a Cortes, and the magnanimous gallantry of a Raleigh. The assumption of such a task marked the man as a true modern hero; chivalric, adventurous, enterprising, honorable and humane. His scheme was the scheme of a man of genius, who felt within himself the movement of a fiery life and of a soaring capacity which could not settle quietly down within the narrow circle of a country gentleman's existence in parceled and prosperous England.

Boldly as the scheme was conceived, its execution has equaled all the promise of the inception. JAMES BROOKE found at Sarawak some 1,500 souls dwelling in huts built of logs and poles, and living in terror of their lives. Scarcely a mouth was suffered to pass over their devoted heads unmarked by a descent of the river robbers, by the flames of burning huts, and the shrieks of the unhappy Dyaks, decapitated on the logs which had formed their own thresholds. Foreign ships were deterred from these else inviting shores, partly by the fear of these insufferable scourges of the sea, and partly by the growing poverty of a people so constantly and so terribly afflicted. A quarter of a century has not yet passed away, and the village has grown to a well-built town of twenty thousand inhabitants. Prosperous settlements have been multiplied in the interior, and along the coasts, now freed from ravage by the almost complete annihilation of the recusant pirate tribes, and by the reclamation of the rest to habits of orderly industry. This wonderful change has not been effected without infinite pains and trouble. BROOKE, elevated to the rank of a Rajah by the Sultan of Borneo, has been obliged to contend not merely with the savage foes of his adopted people and with the vices of their rulers, but with all sorts of misrepresentation and injustice from his own countrymen. He has been forced to defend himself by words from charges of self-seeking, and avarice, and vulgar ambition, which his deeds should have sufficed to refute before the present age, as they will suffice to refute such charges before all coming generations of men. The grasping colonists of Holland, on the one hand, have assailed him as an agent of England for the extension of her Eastern empire; while the English masters of India have heaped obloquy upon him, on the other, for his steady refusal to subject his people to the British sway. Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified, he has kept on his way, welding ever more and more firmly together the scattered remnants of the Dyak population, and content in the ever-brightening spectacle of a people redeemed from desolation by his devotion, courage and skill.

Upon the head of this truly Christian prince and his people a storm of war has suddenly burst. The Chinese colonists admitted by the Dyaks to settlements within their territory have turned upon their hosts in rebellion. This emergency has not been unforeseen by the Rajah. Fifteen years ago he wrote to a friend in England that the Chinese were anxious to make arrangements with him for reducing the Dyaks and Malays to a servile state; but that he would know how to protect his people from their insidious and avaricious projects. Their plot, however, has been so long in maturing that the Rajah and the natives seem to have been taken somewhat unawares by its first explosion, and the foray of the Chinese was a saturnalia of blood and fire. But the immediate consequences vindicated completely the wisdom of the Rajah's rule, and the confidence which his people repose in him. His Dyaks rallied at once at the call of their beloved chief, whose personal escape from murder was but one of a hundred incidents in his singular career which point him out as a true hero of romance, and the same steamer which brings to Western Christendom the news of the Chinese invasion brings also the tidings of the swift and terrible retaliation which followed so closely upon it, that the fearful outbreak seems to have passed over the little nation of Sarawak like a whirlwind.

Almost at the same time, when this tempest broke over the dominion of the Dyaks on the further East, the fury of a similar storm swept away the last defences of an adventurer who had established himself in a country of the furthest West. The coincidence of the tidings which have just reached us from Sarawak and from Nicaragua, is too striking for us to let slip the opportunity of dwelling upon the instructive differences between the career of Sir JAMES BROOKE and that of General WILLIAM WALKER.

Hardly a year has elapsed since WILLIAM WALKER landed in Central America with a small band of followers, for the avowed purpose of aiding the democratic party in Nicaragua to establish in that country a sound republican régime. Had the Californian adventurer been worthy of his position and of its opportunities, he might have written his name in history side by side with that of his heroic contemporary, the deliverer of Sarawak.

A more conspicuous field of action was offered to him—a cause not less noble invited his devotion. But he had neither the capacity to avail himself of the resources before him, nor the character to conceive of the great aims it was in his power to accomplish. Rajah BROOKE won the Dyaks to his allegiance by treating them frankly, cordially, justly—by making their cause his own—by calling out their own energies. He satisfied them that he came to them not to conquer them for England, but to civilize them for their own sakes; and upon this rock of their confidence he founded a power which has withstood the severest assaults. General WALKER, on the contrary, repelled the Spaniards of Nicaragua by his treachery, his cruelty, his open contempt of themselves and of their rights. He treated them as a conquered people, and betrayed at once his purpose of governing them, not for their own sakes, but for the sake of a treasonable faction in a foreign nation, of whose purposes he avowed himself by his acts to be the tool. In his dealings with his own foreign followers, not less than in his relations with the native population of Nicaragua, he continually revealed at once the weakness of his intellect and the narrowness of his sentiments.

The instinctive sympathy which all true Americans at first felt for a man of their own race whom they supposed to be gallantly striving to vindicate the principles of American liberty, and the splendor of American enterprise in the heart of a foreign country, had gradually given way before the overpowering conviction that the fancied hero was, after all, but a paltry and inefficient filibuster, and if the consummation of his ruin awakens one thrill of regret in his native land, that thrill is given to the ruin of the brave men whom he deluded to their destruction, and to the American name which he tarnished, and not to his own fate, which we can only feel to have been too well deserved and but too long delayed. The people whom he scorned have trampled him in the dust; the race which he refused to elevate has prostrated him and his beyond recovery.

Upon the records of our race which will preserve the memory of the Rajah of Sarawak as an immortal lesson of the true success which ever attends honesty, nobleness, and enduring ability, the name of the invader of Nicaragua will be inscribed in warning of the dismal destiny decreed by Heaven to pretentious incompetency and heartless selfishness, usurping the offices and assuming the insignia of virtue, heroism and genius.

The Condition of the Streets.

Some fortnight or three weeks since, the public were notified that the City Inspector, Mr. MORTON, (upon whom, under the new charter, devolve the duties formerly intrusted to Mr. EBLING,) had demanded and received from the Mayor the assistance of a body of policemen who would thenceforth parade the streets daily, in citizens' clothes, and report all violations of the law, whether on the part of owners of houses or of contractors. It was also understood that if any of the contractors failed to do their duty, the cleaning of their respective districts would be undertaken by workmen employed by Mr. MORTON himself, the expense of doing so to be charged, as the ordinance requires, to the delinquent contractors. A statement was moreover made that the action of the street-sweeping machines of Mr. SMITH, upon which Mr. REYNOLDS is said to rely to fulfill his agreement at the comparatively low rate of $99,000 a year for eleven wards, had been tried by the City Inspector in Brooklyn, and that its performance had been eminently successful. Under these circumstances the patient public have waited, made inquiries, received answers, waited patiently again, and are still waiting, and, from appearances, are likely to wait before they see any improvement in the state of the thoroughfares, or get any satisfaction.

If we are correctly informed, security was given for the proper performance of his duty by the contractor for thirteen of the Wards of the City, by two very respectable gentlemen, who were engaged in starting, under act of Feb. 17, 1848, authorizing the formation of Corporations for manufacturing purposes, a so-called the "Metropolitan Sanitary Association." Their correct conception was that the City might be cleaned by machinery at very little expense, and they were persuaded that, in due time, the removal of offal, refuse, garbage and ashes, might be rendered a source of considerable revenue and profit to the City. They proposed to commence operations by using the machines which were invented some time ago by Mr. ROBERT A. SMITH, these to be superseded by still better and more efficacious machinery, recently patented by the same gentleman, as soon as they could be manufactured. Unfortunately, difficulties arose, almost as soon as the contracts were signed by the City authorities, between the new Association and Mr. SMITH, the latter refusing to permit the use of his machines until the terms of the bargain which had been made with him were definitely settled. These difficulties have continued until within a very few days; and, in connection with deplorable neglect on the part of some of Mr. REYNOLDS' employes, and a certain degree of unpropitiousness in the weather, have constituted very nearly the sum total of obstacles to the cleanliness of three-fourths of the City. The other fourth is under the charge of other contractors, none of whom evince more than a fair average of energy and efficiency. Mr. BUSH, who has the care of the Sixteenth Ward, is beginning to prove an exception—at least he has cleaned some streets well, and it is to be hoped may continue to do so.

We are told that Mr. REYNOLDS and his friends of the Sanitary Association completed their arrangements with Mr. SMITH, last week; that the machines are now in their possession; and that the rainy weather of the last four days is all that has prevented their going into operation. It is promised that the streets of the sixteen Wards in which they are to be used, shall be put in perfect order, "without delay," and that the public will henceforth have no cause to censure and much to praise. This promise has been so often reiterated and broken that it must be received with a certain degree of distrust; still we hope it may be fulfilled. If not, there are another set of assurances, made by Mr. MORTON, and it will be necessary to fall back upon these. If he, too, proves neglectful, it is to be hoped that Mr. FLAGG will cut off the supplies, or that there may be a revolution, for our citizens have wallowed in the mud long enough.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.—It is a curious evidence of the intimate relations which still exist, and which ever must exist between England and the United States, that the choice of a new Speaker of the House of Commons, though not of the slightest political importance to the people of this country, is made the subject of an earnest discussion by some of our cotemporaries, some of whom do not regard Mr. DENISON as specially fitted for the post he has been elected to fill, while others think him a marvelously proper person. Mr. DENISON himself, if he should happen to read any of the articles in the American papers about himself, must be greatly amused, if not edified, to discover that he is so well known in a country which he visited some thirty years ago. The Boston Courier defends the Honorable gentleman with great warmth and earnestness against the imputation of a New-York paper as to his unfitness for the place. The Courier states that Mr. DENISON was a special favorite with Mr. WEBSTER, who enjoyed his acquaintance when he was in England, and always spoke of him with warmth and in the highest terms of commendation. It is hardly worth while for us to enter into a discussion of this sort, on this side of the Ocean; Lord PALMERSTON and the House of Commons ought to be allowed the privilege of choosing a Speaker for the House of Commons, and we may safely trust to their knowing better whom to select than we could possibly. For our own part we are quite satisfied with Mr. DENISON, as we should have been with Mr. BAINES, though we must confess that if we had been consulted in the matter we would have preferred the latter gentleman, because his father was an editor and printer.

CAUSE OF THE COLD WEATHER.—It is the general opinion among well-informed quidnuncs that the extremely cold spell of weather we are now enjoying is caused by the comet; and it becomes a rather alarming and interesting question if the weather is so cold before the comet comes within discernible distance of us, what the state of the thermometer will be when the comet whisks its tail over our planet. Professor PEIRCE, of Cambridge, in whose astronomical ability we have great confidence, has already informed us that he knows of no comet whose presence may be expected this Summer, it is true; but there must be some good cause for such very exceptional, as well as exceptionable, weather as we have had since the "blooming month of May" came in. In the lamented absence of the public's old friend, E. M., from the daily papers, it may be suggested that the cold weather is caused by the great quantities of snow and ice which accumulated to the north of us during the past severe Winter, and to the prevalence of the winds from that quarter. But we may look for a change of temperature very soon.

THE LATE GEORGE STEERS.—We find the following paragraph in the Boston Courier:

"The late GEORGE STEERS, of New-York, left his family utterly penniless, and a subscription for their behalf is suggested."

A subscription may have been suggested in behalf of Mr. STEERS' family, for aught we know to the contrary; but it is not true that he left his family utterly penniless. On the contrary, he left them in comfortable circumstances, and if they receive what he was entitled to from Government they will be amply provided for. Mr. STEERS received no pay for his services in modeling and superintending the construction of the Niagara, beyond the salary of a naval constructor, during the time he was employed. But if that ship's performances should be equal to what he anticipated, we have no doubt that Congress will award his widow something beyond the small salary which he was allowed for his services. The model of the ship, we believe, is the property of his family, but it should be the property of the Naval Department.

Individual Enterprise.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

It was fortunate for Mr. HENRY GRINNELL that he happened not to be the owner of a newspaper, or his liberality in sending a vessel to look for Sir JOHN FRANKLIN would have subjected him to more scornful contempt than he has received praise for his humanity. Instead of being applauded, he would have been abused, and his generosity would only have been called "an advertising dodge," at least by his "cotemporaries." Newspaper people do not seem to be conscious that, in their readiness to impute sinister motives to any of their cotemporaries who attempt to perform a public service, they lower the character of their own calling, and inflict an injury upon themselves. A few years ago the London Times was successful, by its own hired agents, in detecting and bringing to punishment some rogues who had attempted a gigantic plan for swindling the mercantile community; but the other members of the British press did not accuse it of an "advertising dodge;" and the merchants of London, to show their appreciation of the services rendered by the Times, placed a tablet in the Royal Exchange recording the history of the affair, besides raising a large sum of money as a testimonial of their gratitude, which the proprietors of the Times appropriated to the noble purpose of founding a scholarship at one of the Universities. If such a thing had been done by a newspaper here, it would have provoked a storm of sneers from all the other papers.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Dallas-Clarendon Treaty.

Interesting Items of News from the Capital.

The Diplomatic Appointments—The Revenue Cutter Contract—Changes in the Patent Office—The Tehuantepec Route, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, May 18.

You will have seen in the Philadelphia North American, from its Washington correspondent, an interesting letter concerning the interview said to have been held by Lord NAPIER with the President, concerning the rejection of the Central American Treaty. I am enabled to confirm its statements as correct. The information was derived by the North American's correspondent from Hon. REVERDY JOHNSON, for whom the President sent immediately after the interview with the British Minister.

The conduct of Lord NAPIER in ignoring the Secretary of State, and transacting business directly with the President might, under ordinary circumstances appear strange, and even a slight; but it was not so intended, nor has it been so received. It is simply a fulfillment of the fixed determination of Mr. BUCHANAN to oversee individually the whole business of the foreign relations of the Government,—a resolution which no one will condemn in view of the advanced age of Mr. CASS. It may be added to what Mr. HARVEY has stated in his letter, that whenever the ratification of the treaty between Great Britain and Honduras shall be received, the obstacle to the completion of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty, including all the emendments of the Senate, will have been removed, and Lord NAPIER will be enabled, in the name of his Government to reopen negotiations.

Much has appeared in some of the New-York papers in relation to a supposed correspondence to relation to the Senate amendments, between Mr. DALLAS and Lord CLARENDON. No such correspondence as ever taken place, nor had a single line been written, up to the last date, by either of the two parties, on the subject. General CASS has given his personal views, respecting the matter, to those who have approached him, and these have been rehashed in different shapes; but their value can only be measured by the degree of confidence which he may be supposed to repose in those with whom he has, for the time, been speaking.

Mr. T. F. MEAGHER is, I learn, an applicant for the post of Minister to Venezuela. It is now occupied by Mr. EAMES, who is the brother in law of MEAGHER's partner in business in your City.

The account, as given in the Herald of this morning, of Gov. WALKER's introductory manifesto to the people of Kansas, is utterly false, from beginning to end. Please request your readers to cut out the parts of the manifesto quoted by the Herald's correspondent, and to compare them with the document in question, when it really appears.

A PERSONAL EXPLANATION CONCERNING MR. SICKLES.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, May 17.

The statement which appeared in the New-York Herald some few days since, charging Hon DANIEL E. SICKLES with "aiding and abetting the passage of the Black Republican" laws, permit me to say, through the columns of your paper, is untrue. Mr. SICKLES voted against all of the said laws, and denounced them all, except the license law, which all the Democratic members of the Senate supported. This latter was regarded in Albany as a triumph over the Prohibitory law party, the whole of the members of which, in the Senate, voted against it, while the license law men sustained it. So far as Wood is concerned, SICKLES was the only man in the Senate who tried to save him for his term under the new charter. His speeches against the City Hall bill, the Port Warden's bill, the Pier bill, &c., were the most decided of the session. As for the Police bill, he acted under the advice and instructions of the Democratic Captains—Messrs. LEONARD and WITTER—who were charged with the care of the subject. The present corps of officers and men were saved by his exertions, and are his friends. He worked with the Committee of the Senate until he secured this object, and procured some thirty or forty amendments to the bill—among others, a section providing a place for the detention of witnesses (bound over to appear) separate and apart from those accused or convicted of crime—a measure which the papers of the State, the Courts and Grand Juries have urged for years. THE BRITISH MINISTER AND THE DALLAS-CLARENDON TREATY.

From the Philadelphia North American.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 15, 1857.

Lord NAPIER had a formal interview with the President yesterday, which lasted nearly two hours, in reference to the Dallas-Clarendon treaty. He read Lord CLARENDON's dispatch to him on the subject. That dispatch sets forth that the exclusive ground for rejecting the treaty, by the British Government, was the non-confirmation of the Convention between Honduras and Great Britain. All the other amendments made by the Senate, except that qualifying the article in regard to Honduras were accepted in their entirety and without reservation by the British Cabinet. There is, therefore, no misunderstanding as to the alleged or real point of difficulty.

Lord NAPIER, endeavored, with much earnestness, to impress the President with the belief that no other than friendly feelings were entertained toward the Administration or the country by the Ministry, and cited expressions from Lord CLARENDON's dispatch, as justifying this language. In conclusion, he proposed to institute a new negotiation, founded upon the conditional acquiescence of Honduras. This suggestion was properly and promptly declined by the President, and there the matter rests for the present.

Without any disposition to irritate the feeling on either side, or to say a word which might by possibility be construed into a willingness to provoke alienation, it must be very evident to everybody who has followed the progress of these Central American negotiations, that the reason assigned by the British Government is utterly below the dignity and importance of the occasion, beside being inconsistent with the recent professions toward the United States. When the Central American question became seriously involved, after the departure of Mr. BUCHANAN from London, this arrangement with Honduras was suggested as a mode of extricating England from the embarrassing position which she then held of occupying Ruatan in contravention of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. It does not matter who suggested the idea. Being proposed, the tacit assent of the United States was given through Mr. DALLAS, and a Special Minister, now or recently here, was sent from Honduras to conduct the negotiations, which were the necessary foundation of the treaty subsequently concluded between Lord CLARENDON and Mr. DALLAS, and which was ratified six weeks ago by the Senate, with certain amendments. Without that preliminary step there would have been no treaty, and could have been none; for a practical and insuperable difficulty stood in the way as long as England occupied Ruatan, and we asserted the just construction of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, as only maintained by Mr. BUCHANAN. The arrangement with Honduras at best was a mere makeshift, or a convenient mode of escape. In the estimation of England, Honduras is nobody except so far as it may be used as an instrument for a purpose. When Mr. CRAMPTON and Mr. WEBSTER, in 1852, patched up a bargain to settle these troubles, they quietly signified to Nicaragua, that unless she consented to their terms she would be crushed between the upper and nether millstone. And such would have been the result, but for the timely warning of the North American, in disclosing the obnoxious grounds of that so called adjustment.

It is a bold and insulting piece of effrontery to trifle with the Government upon any such contemptible pretext as has been offered. Honduras answers the end, but there are other and more real reasons below the surface, which I may take the liberty of investigating hereafter at length. No one is deceived or misled by the cause which is put forth, because its truthfulness is falsified on the very face of the allegation. The world knows that Honduras dare not, if she were inclined, refuse to ratify a treaty made under circumstances such as now exist, and therefore, it is not harsh to suppose there is an unavowed motive under the rose.

There is no reason to apprehend any difficulty between the two Governments, resulting from this temporary interruption. Lord PALMERSTON miscalculates his strength if he supposes the British people will go to extremities to support him in any willful aggression on the United States, or uphold any such bad faith as he has just exhibited. He was rebuked, and had to retreat in the Crampton affair, and his attempted revenge will find no better favor in a new appeal to the public, if it should have to be made. We stand now upon the downright interpretation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and will see who can stand there longest and best, in the judgment of mankind.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, May 17, 1857.

The President has taken into consideration some of the applications for diplomatic offices. But he appears to be reluctant to displace the incumbents and at the same time disappoint all applicants but one—and that one perhaps the least deserving of all.

Mr. FORNEY has changed his mind about foreign employment, and will accept a small place, rather than drudge at the editorial desk. He has not made a vast fortune, as was alleged, by his connection with the late Administration. President PIERCE did not aid his friends much in their speculations, though he had the credit of doing it in some instances. Three candidates for foreign missions have presented themselves from New-Jersey, in the place of Gov. VROOM, who is to return from his post at Berlin. No one yet has been presented from New-Jersey who would make good his place, for he filled the place in a respectable manner.

The appointment of Appraisers was brought nearly to a conclusion last night. Most of the appointments were telegraphed yesterday.

The Secretary of the Treasury, with all the aid he can call around him, is unable to decide upon the offers for the Revenue Cutter contract. It is difficult to decide among twenty models and specifications which is the best. The fortunate bidder whose model may be selected will thus acquire a reputation, and hence the competition for the contract.

Dr. GALE, who yesterday resigned his office as Examiner of the Patent Office, has held that office for some years, with reputation. It was alleged against him that he was in some way concerned in the establisment of a school here for the education of female colored teachers. He was, I believe, appointed a Director of this intended Institution, which Ex-Mayor LENOX recently demolished. He tendered his resignation when he found that he would be removed. Mr. MOSS, another Examiner, who resigned yesterday, was to have been removed. Three others are to be removed from the Patent Office, on account of alleged political reasons. One of these was complained of by the Vice-President, who demanded his removal.

Judge MASON, the Commissioner of Patents, is said to be indignant at this interference with his assistants, without consulting him. But whether he has remonstrated against it I have not heard.

Secretary THOMPSON has, it is said, determined to remove a number of clerks from bureaus in his Department.

The Postmaster-General entertains a proposition from the Tehuantepec Company to give them a mail contract, and constitute their road a post route, which he has authority to do under the act of 1845. But he objects that it would be detrimental to the interests of the Panama Railroad Company, which had invested sixteen millions of dollars in that transit. X. Y. Z.

Trouble in the Church of the Puritans—Rev. Dr. Cheever's.

On Sunday last Dr. CHEEVER stated in his pulpit that he had received a letter, signed by sixteen members of his church, including three deacons, requesting him to resign the pastoral charge. This step, which has been some little time in contemplation, was taken in consequence of the dissatisfaction felt by these parties, in common with some other members of the church, at the course lately taken by Dr. CHEEVER, in preaching what they considered to be political sermons—referring, of course, to his discourses previous to the late election, and on the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case. The letter sent to the reverend gentleman was as follows:

NEW-YORK, Monday, April 27, 1857.

REV. G. B. CHEEVER, D. D.:

Dear Sir—The undersigned, members of the Church and congregation of the Church of the Puritans, after a prayerful consideration of the condition of the Church, and of its relations to yourself, are painfully convinced that the spiritual interests both of the pastor and people, as well as the stability and prosperity of the Society will be promoted by a dissolution of our connection.

It is not without extreme reluctance, therefore, that we now suggest to you the expediency of a tender of your resignation of the pastorate. By the adoption of this course, pleasant recollections of our Christian fellowship will be maintained. A dissolution which seems to us inevitable, will lose its sting. The intercourse of the future, as Providence may permit it, will be free from painful memories of the past.

We do not dwell on the reasons which impel us to the suggestions we make. It is sufficient that the infirmities and diversities of human nature often indicate separation as the rule of peace, when an enforced union could but result in growing alienation of heart.

That you may not, however, attribute our suggestion to the wrong cause, we assure you that we all sympathize in your views of the freedom of the pulpit, and the duty as well as the right of its ministers, at proper times and occasions, to discuss before them properly all questions affecting or involving moral truth.

Ever invoking for you and yours the blessing of the Great Head of the church, and with fervent prayers for your growing influence for good, so long as the Master shall spare you to work in the vineyard,

We remain, dear Sir, your friends and brethren,

ALBERT CHESEBRO,	J. B. JOHNSON,
JOHN N. BRADLEY,	J. LINSLEY,
L. J. BACON,	R. N. HAVENS,
S. T. HYDE,	L. S. MATHER,
STEPHEN PAUL,	CHAS. TAYLOR,
L. S. COWLES,	F. J. OWEN,
O. R. WOOD,	RICHD. BROWN,
DANL. HODGMAN,	S. CONOVER JR.,
E. M. KINGSLEY,	WM. WAY,
A. DWIGHT,	C. H. ISHAM,
H. A. HURLBUT,	J. WALTER CAMP.

The excitement which followed the aforesaid announcement was great. Dr. CHEEVER himself took the prompt step of calling a business meeting last night in the lecture room of the church. The room was filled to overflowing by an audience, full one half of which was ladies. Very many gentlemen stood, unable to obtain seats.

After prayer by Rev. J. P. WARREN, now a member of this church, Dr. CHEEVER rose and said that the question before them relative to his resignation as pastor of that church was attempted to be thrown upon the church, whereas it was really not addressed to the church but to the conscience. For himself he was prepared to maintain the position he had taken; he had never doubted his position, he did not doubt it now, and he left in their hands to act upon it as they saw fit. He presumed before they proceeded to action it would be necessary to appoint a chairman. W. C. GILMAN, Esq., was unanimously appointed to that position, and Mr. J. W. CAMP acted as secretary.

The first speaker was Gen. MATHER. He trusted that the audience would, with the calmness due to the occasion, devote their serious attention to the object of the meeting.

The Secretary then read the letter addressed to Dr. CHEEVER requesting his resignation.

After this reading, Gen. MATHER desired to know if it was strictly a business meeting. He had no disposition to delay the business for which the meeting was called, but would direct the attention of the Chair to the Standing Rules of the Church, where in the third paragraph of the fourth section it was prescribed that notice of a formal meeting should be given by the Clerk from the pulpit; and that a business meeting could only be summoned by the Clerk. As this had not been done in this instance he denied the legality of the meeting and protested against it, because not convened in accordance with the standing rules of the Church.

Mr. CHARLES ABERNETHY offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That our Pastor, Rev. Dr. CHEEVER, has our entire and undiminished confidence and affection, and we hereby express our desire and determination that he continue in his present position as Pastor of this church.

The resolution was immediately seconded, it was said, not by a member of the Church. Some dispute arising from this cause, it was seconded by three or four members at once. The adoption of the resolution was then moved, when Mr. MCNAB arose and said he wished to speak a few words in relation to the communication received by Dr. CHEEVER. Ought he to pass it over in silence?

Mr. ELISHA M. WILCOX presented the following resolution as an amendment or substitute:

Resolved, That Christian charity, the peace of this Church, and the development of truth, all require that the signers of this letter produced by Dr. CHEEVER be requested to present to him a written statement of the reasons which, in their judgment, call for a dissolution of the present pastoral relation; and in case Dr. CHEEVER should not regard the same when presented as requiring such dissolution, that he be and hereby is requested to unite with said signers in calling at an early day a council, according to Congregational usage, to which all matters of dissatisfaction concerning the relation of pastors and people may be submitted.

Mr. SETH B. HUNT moved that the two resolutions should be put to the vote of the meeting. This, however, was not done for a considerable time, a long discussion ensuing.

Mr. FREDERICK W. KING entered his protest against the amendment. If it were adopted it would only prolong a painful controversy, and he was strenuously opposed to having the seeds of discord sown in their midst. There was no use in delaying this controversy.

worry, and was the time to settle it. He then said that the majority of those present had come to sustain their pastor. It was a question that ought to be settled by the Church members, not by a Council, and there was no need for further deliberations.

Mr. SETH B. HUNT again rose and said that he entirely concurred with the last speaker. He did not think it was a question to be met by legal quibbles, but a difference did exist in the Church concerning the course recently adopted by Dr. CHEEVER, as stated in the letter sent to him. The Church was in no condition to ask advice either from a Council or from outside members. He thought that action should be taken upon the difficulty at once. The first resolution was intended to bring the question to a straight issue, and protract it as they might, it would come to that in the end. He trusted, therefore, that the amendment would be rejected. Dr. CHEEVER was no stranger to them; they all attended his Church, and they either approved or disapproved of him. They could therefore express their opinions without debate or delay.

Mr. H. B. FAY was entirely opposed to the action of those members who had addressed a letter to Dr CHEEVER. He would not admit the right of any congregation to tell their pastor to leave them in such a summary manner. He would not see the propriety of the amendment or substitute offered by Brother WILCOX. The resolution was good, and amounted simply to this; that the meeting did not approve of the suggestion offered to Dr. CHEEVER by the signers of that communication. It, in short, said to the world that the members of the Church of the Puritans did not wish their Pastor to leave them.

Dr. PALL also regretted the introduction of the substitute. He thought the question was one which the meeting might at once deal with, whether Dr. CHEEVER was to stay or go.

Mr. E. T. WOOD, one of the deacons of the Church, explained that the origin of the letter sent to Dr. CHEEVER was in a meeting of gentlemen who came together to see what was the cause of the difference in that Church.

Mr. HALSTEAD demanded if the speaker was in order; the Chairman replied that he was.

Mr. WOOD resumed: The letter sent to Dr. CHEEVER was intended in a kind and Christian spirit, as an indication of the views of a portion of his church-members respecting some of his late proceedings. The sending of the letter, be acknowledged, was informal, and would not be recognized in council. He trusted that the amendment offered by Mr. WILCOX would prevail, inasmuch as the gentlemen who had signed the letter had done it with the most sincere intentions.

Mr. KINGSLEY, another deacon of the Church, trusted that the amendment would prevail as it would lead to harmony in the Church.

Mr. CHESTER objected very strenuously to throwing Dr. CHESTER over to the mercies of the signers of the letter, and divesting the Church of all authority in the matter.

Mr. JOEL HACKMAN thought that the letter to Dr. CHEEVER was not so much out of order as had been talked about. If the deacons of the church, or any number of members wish their pastor to resign, they could do so. If he did not attend to their request then an ulterior course might be pursued. He still thought, however, that in the present instance a wrong course had been pursued, and that a Council of the Church ought to have been called.

After some apposite remarks in favor of the first resolution, and been officered by Rev. Mr. WARREN, of Connecticut, and Professor THOMPSON had expressed his ignorance from the tenor of the letter sent to Dr. CHEEVER, of the difficulties between the signers and the Pastor, the amendment was put by the Chair by Ayes and Noes, it being previously stated that only male members could vote—an announcement that seemed to give great disappointment to the ladies. The Noes carried it by sound of voice, but as this was not satisfactory to the mover of the amendment, those for and against it rose, and were counted. They stood for the amendment 96, against it 48.

On the proposition to submit the original resolution sustaining Dr CHEEVER, considerable debate ensued, and much warmth of feeling was manifested. At length, when the resolution was put, the ayes were loud and numerous, and there was not a single nay. The Chairman announced that the resolution was unanimously adopted. There was no applause followed, but there was a slight and almost general murmur of satisfaction.

The proceedings of the meeting were not yet closed, however. Rev. C. J. WARREN offered a resolution censuring the signers of the letter to Dr. CHEEVER, in terms which amounted almost to an expulsion from membership, whereupon Mr. WOOD, with very great warmth, threatened to quit the church if that resolution passed. It was an insult that he would not submit to, and he would tell that audience that notwithstanding the passing the recent resolutions sustaining Dr. CHEEVER, the troubles of that church had only just begun.

Dr. PALL offered another resolution sustaining Dr. CHEEVER, and suggesting that he should only open his mouth to declare the full counsel of God. And yet another amendment was offered to this, and finally, after much discussion and considerable personality and scurbity, Dr. PALL's resolution was carried.

Before the large audience dispersed Rev Dr. CHEEVER advanced, and in a voice almost inaudible with emotion, and literally in tears, pronounced the benediction.

RESISTANCE TO STATE LEGISLATION.

A CRISIS IN POLICE-MATTERS.

Captain Carpenter Dismissed by the Old Commissioners, but Refuses to Surrender—Deputy-Superintendent Folks Acknowledges the New Board of Brooklyn.

Yesterday, Police matters were rapidly shaping for a crisis. On Saturday night, Captain CARPENTER, of the Fifth Ward, assured his men that he should obey in future the orders of the new Commissioners, and advised them to look to President DRAPER and one Superintendent TALLMADGE as their fountain and source of authority. Lieut. HORRIGAN at once avowed his determination still to obey the orders of the old Commissioners.

Yesterday, in the office of the Chief of Police and all about the City Hall, groups of policemen—officers and privates—were from morning till night discussing the matter.

All the Police Captains except Capt. CARPENTER reported themselves as usual at the Chief's Office during the forenoon. Some hot words were exchanged between Capt. MCKEE, of the Sixteenth Ward, and Capt. LEITS, of the Seventh, the former accusing the latter of conniving to further the ends of the new Commission. The curiosity and anxiety were still further heightened by the failure of the Captain of the Fifth Ward to send in his daily return to Chief MATSELL, and the rumor that he sent it to Superintendent TALLMADGE, to whom also he reported himself ready for such duty as might be designated.

At 11 o'clock Mayor WOOD and Judge RUSSELL, who constitute the old Board of Police Commissioners, (Recorder SMITH having for months refused any connection with them,) met at the Mayor's Office, as a Police Board.

MEETING OF THE OLD POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—The only subject before the Board was the charges of insubordination against Capt. CARPENTER, of the Fifth Ward Police, in refusing to recognize the old Commissioners, and advising his men to transfer their allegiance to the new.

The following is the language and form of the charge and specifications:

POLICE STATION-HOUSE, PATROL DISTRICT No. 5.
May 16, 1857, 8 o'clock P. M.

To Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor of the City of New-York:

SIR: In accordance with the act entitled "An act in relation to the Police of the City of New-York," passed April 13, 1853, charges have this day been made against Daniel Carpenter, a Captain of the Fifth District, for the following cause, to wit:

Charge—INSUBORDINATION.

Specification—That said Carpenter, about seven o'clock, P. M., May 16, inst., declared in the presence of the members of the police department of the Fifth District, all or part of them, that hereafter he would not recognize the authority of Mayor Wood or the old Commissioners, meaning thereby the Recorder and City Judge; but that he would recognize the authority of the new Commissioners of the so-called Metropolitan District Police, and that he would advise the policemen to strictly comply with their rules and regulations, thereby creating insubordination in the Police Department. Witness,

DANIEL D. HORRIGAN,
DANIEL L. FILES.

The following is the affidavit of Lieut Horrigan:

City and County of New-York, ss.—Daniel D. Horrigan being duly sworn, deposes and says, that at sunset roll-call on Sunday, Daniel Carpenter, Captain of the Fifth Ward Patrol District, addressed the sergeants and policemen of said District, and told them that hereafter he would recognize no person as having authority over him but the new Commissioners, and that he would not recognize Mayor Wood or the old Board of Commissioners as having any authority over him, thereby creating insubordination in the Department. He also told them he would supply them with the rules and regulations adopted by the new Commissioners on Monday morning, and that he should expect a strict compliance with them.

DANIEL D. HORRIGAN.

Sworn before me, May 16, 1857, FERNANDO WOOD.

The following affidavit was annexed:

NEW-YORK, Monday, May 18, 1857.

In the matter of complaint against Daniel Carpenter, Captain Fifth District, for insubordination, &c.—David L. Files being duly sworn, deposes and says: He has read the affidavit made by Lieut. Horrigan, and testifies that the facts therein set forth are true of his own knowledge.

DAVID L. FILES

The Board then, after examination, declared Captain Carpenter removed from his office as head of the Fifth Patrol District.

Lieut. Horrigan, who was present, was immediately sworn in as Captain in place of Daniel Carpenter.

David L. Files was appointed 2d Lieutenant to fill the place of Lieut. Horrigan. Wm. L. Mastin continues First Lieut.

Capt. Carpenter was not present yesterday to answer the charge against him.

Below we give the opinion of the Court:

Before the Commissioners of Police, Captain DANIEL CARPENTER, Fifth District,

Charge—INSUBORDINATION.

In this Court it is proven that DANIEL CARPENTER on the evening of May 16, whilst in charge of the Fifth Police District force as Captain, was guilty of wilful insubordination in declaring to his rank and file collected and drawn up in line for the purpose, that he would no longer recognize the authority of his Honor the Mayor, or the Commissioners, with whom the Mayor is associated, and in calling upon the force under his command to follow him in repudiating this authority; that he now recognizes the Board of Commissioners of which SIMEON DRAPER was President, and that on Monday following he, the Captain, would issue new orders, rules and regulations emanating from that Board, and he would expect every man under his command to obey them.

In view of this testimony, uncontradicted, it is adjudged that said Carpenter has been guilty of insubordination and conduct calculated to bring the authority of the Police Commissioners and the Head of this Department into contempt; and that he, the said Carpenter, is unworthy to be continued in his command as a Captain of the Police of this City, and he is hereby dismissed from his position as such.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.
A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge.

NEW-YORK, Monday, May 18, 1857.

THE NEW COMMISSIONERS met yesterday, as usual and continued in session nearly all day. They transacted a large amount of routine business, and almost concluded to lease apartments in Bleecker, near Wooster-street, for the use of the Commission and their Superintendent. The letter addressed by Mayor Wood to President Draper, which was published in the TIMES of Monday, was read and discussed, and a premonitory note from Mr. Draper, in reply drawn up. This note will be found among the proceedings of the Old Commissioners, given above. But the great question under discussion, was that caused by the action of Capt. H. Carpenter, and the subsequent dismissal of that officer by Mayor Wood. Superintendent Tallmadge was sent for, as was also Capt. Carpenter, and a plan of operations agreed upon. It was agreed that Capt. Carpenter should retain his ground, ignore his dismissal by the Old Commissioners, act in his Station-house as he had hitherto, and not leave his post nor the Station-house unless forcibly expelled. Later in the day Commissioners Draper and Nye visited the Fifth Ward Station house and had a private consultation with Capt. Carpenter.

The newly-appointed Police captain of the Fifth Ward, Horrigan, having expressed his intention to assume the duties of captain at the 7 o'clock roll-call, and Captain Carpenter having full as firmly expressed his determination to exercise his authority as captain on that occasion, trouble was anticipated, and arrangements were made at the City Hall to maintain what is there considered "the law." The Mayor remained in his office, and several aids hurried to and fro. Chief Metsell remained in his office below, and notice was sent by telegraph to several station houses to keep their reserve in readiness to march at a moment's warning. The "Broadway Squad," under command of Sergeant Stephen P. Munn, had meanwhile been sent to the Fifth Ward Station-house, where, in a back room, they took up their quarters.

As the hour of 7 o'clock approached the excitement heightened. Crowds of citizens made aware of the position of affairs, gathered about the Fifth Ward Station house, awaiting the result. Within the Station-house, behind the desk sat side by side Captain Carpenter, Lieutenant alias Captain Horrigan and Lieutenant Martin. Horrigan, however, occupied the middle seat and had the roll-book before him. A moment or so before 7 o'clock, Captain Carpenter said, "I am Captain here, and I want all who do not belong in this Station-house to retire," whereupon several persons left the house. "Funderstand," continued the Captain, "that there are a number of officers in the other room who do not belong in this Station-house. I want them to retire, as I consider myself competent to discharge the duties of my own station-house without any outside assistance." Some conversation was then had between Carpenter, Horrigan and Martin as to who should call the roll "I shall do that duty as Captain of this Station-house," said Mr. Horrigan. "And so will I," answered Mr. Martin, taking up the rattle. "Call the men, Lieut. Martin," said Captain Carpenter, and Lieut. Martin sprang the rattle loud and long, and in answer to the call the men assigned for post and the Broadway reserve hastened from the inner rooms and ranged themselves in front of the Captain's desk.

"I want these strange men [pointing to Sergeant MUNN's squad] to leave this Station-house, as I do not wish to be browbeaten here," said Capt. Carpenter. He continued: "I am a law-abiding citizen, and want to obey the law, and will obey it."

Sergeant Munn's squad remained stationary and silent, until Mr. Horrigan, addressing Sergeant Munn, said: "Sergeant, I think you had better leave. Ex-Captain Carpenter desires it, as he appears to be under the impression that you have been sent here to browbeat him. I may as well inform you, and the Ex-Captain also, that I too am a law abiding citizen. And I do not think that there is any necessity for your remaining. You will please retire."

"With great pleasure," replied Sergeant Munn, "for I assure you it is not the most agreeable of duties to remain here, under such circumstances. As I have received no orders, and as you both desire my absence, I shall retire."

The Sergeant then retired out of doors, but he kept his men in position in the street, in anticipation of any call that might be made upon him to maintain the public peace.

The Station-house having thus been cleared of all outsiders, the newly-appointed Captain Horrigan took up his pen, and proceeded to call the roll, which he did without interruption, all the men answering to their names.

When he had finished, Captain Carpenter arose and addressed the men. He told them that he was still their Captain, and that he should expect every man to do his duty under his orders, as hereto fore. "You have no business," he said, "to question the legality of my orders. I am your Captain, and it is your business to obey my orders. I believe in the law and in the constitution, and shall act in the maintenance of both as becomes a good citizen. It is said that Mayor Wood has dismissed me from my position as Police Captain of this Ward. I do not recognize the Mayor's right to do anything of the sort. I shall go on obeying the law, and shall expect that you will assist me in the performance of our mutual duties as you have heretofore. Let none of you be deceived or seduced into any disobeyment of my orders, for you may rest assured that every man who refuses to obey all proper orders from me, as Captain, shall be surely dismissed from the Department."

When Captain Carpenter had concluded, Captain Horrigan arose and spoke to the men. He said that "he was fully as sincere in his devotion to the laws as ex-Captain Carpenter, and would act with as much vigor and determination in support of both. I am your Captain," he continued, "and for the future I shall expect you to obey my orders as such. Captain Carpenter was dismissed this day by the Police Commissioners, and I have been appointed in his place. I will read to you the charge upon which the ex-Captain was dismissed."

Horrigan then read the specifications against Captain Carpenter, and the act of dismissal given above, after which he resumed his remarks, reiterating his love of law and order, and his determination to continue, until farther advised, to act as Captain. In conclusion, he assured the men one and all that whoever of them should refuse to obey his orders would be instantly dismissed.

The patrolmen were then marched away to their respective beats, the anxious crowd who thronged about the doors, slowly dispersed, the Broadway squad were dismissed, and comparative quiet resumed its sphere.

Soon afterwards Captains Carpenter and Horrigan retired for a while—the former into his private room, with a friend, and the latter to rest—the Station house remaining in charge meanwhile of Mr. Files, who was appointed by the old Commissioners Second Lieutenant, in place of Horrigan, promoted.

At 9 o'clock last evening, Captains Carpenter and Horrigan sat side by side in the Station—one enjoying himself with a pinch of snuff, and the other busily engaged in taking down the names of lodgers and prisoners for his morning's return.

The new Police Commissioners appointed several Police Clerks at their meeting yesterday. They will meet on Wednesday at 10 o'clock A. M., for the trial of policemen, against whom charges have been preferred. Among those to be tried are Chief MATSELL, Lieut. or Capt. Horrigan, of the Fifth Ward, and a few others less known.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors met yesterday afternoon, Supervisor JOHN CLANCY in the Chair. The first business done was as follows:

Whereas, By the 6th section of the act passed April 15, 1857, entitled "An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof," the Board of Supervisors are authorized to increase or decrease the number of patrolmen for this County, who are to act under the jurisdiction of the Board of Commissioners thereby created, and

Whereas, the constitutionality of this law is in the course of being decided by the Courts; and

Whereas, The peace and good government of this City demand that no patrol force shall be organized by the Commissioners appointed under the said act of April 15, 1857, until a final decision is obtained as to their legal and constitutional rights, to act as such; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, until the further action of the Board of Supervisors, the quota of patrolmen for this County allowed to the Board of Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police District, shall be five men, and no more.

Resolved, That nothing in these resolutions shall be construed to interfere with the Municipal Police as organized and existing under laws passed previous to the year 1857.

Mr. BLEAT thought it strange that this County should have but five policemen.

Mr. MONEHAN thought that under the new act five were enough.

Mr. TOOKER consider the Board insane, and that the evidence of its insanity was the fact that such a resolution was entertained. He believed the course proposed in the resolution would be ruinous to the City. It would impair its credit, and prevent those from taking City bonds who would otherwise have purchased them.

The resolutions were then adopted by a vote of 10 to 6

The Board then proceeded to the election of a President, in place of the Mayor, resigned.

Supervisor JACKSON was elected on the first ballot.

Mr. JACKSON declined the honor, while he thanked the Board for their preference.

Another ballot was taken, when Supervisor STEERS was elected.

He was not present, therefore the Board proceeded to other business without delay.

The following was passed unanimously:

Resolved That the Comptroller be and he is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrant in favor of the widow of THOMAS J. OAKLEY, late Chief Justice of the Superior Court, for the whole of his salary up to January 1, 1858.

The following were adopted:

Resolved, That the Clerk of this Board be directed to notify the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police of the action of this Board in relation to the force allowed them.

Resolved, That the Tax Commissioners be requested to inform this Board by what authority they have given to HARVEY HART, a private individual, who is in no way connected with their office or the City Government, a part of the public office occupied by them, for the transaction of his private business.

The following communication from the Excise Commissioners, was laid on the table. The Board refused to hear it read:

NEW YORK, Thursday, May 14, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Supervisors of the County of New York:

The undersigned beg leave to state that they have been duly appointed Commissioners of Excise for the City and County of New-York, under the Act of the Legislature of the State of New York, passed 15th April, 1857, entitled an Act "to suppress Intemperance &c.," and that they are required by the said law to meet in the place where the County Courts are required to be held, on the third Tuesday of May in each year, and on such other days as a majority of the Commissioners shall appoint, for the purpose of granting licenses. They therefore respectfully petition your honorable body to assign to them ample accommodations in the City Hall for the purpose aforesaid, and for the security of the books and papers connected with their office.

WM. J. HASKETT,
One of the Commissioners of Excise.

By order of the Board.
The Board then adjourned to Thursday next.

Police Matters in Brooklyn.

On Saturday last Mr. Tallmadge, Superintendent of Police, visited Brooklyn and notified the Chief of the Brooklyn Police of his official character and the object of his visit, which was to bring the Police force of Brooklyn under the operation of the Metropolitan Police Bill, copies of which were transmitted, together with copies of the Rules and Regulations adopted by the Board of Commissioners.

Mr. Folk, the Chief of Police, was prepared to act under orders, and on Monday issued the following order to each of the Police captains:

OFFICE OF DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT,
BROOKLYN, Monday, May 18, 1857.

To Inspector

SIR: You will please to read to your men the rules and regulations of the Metropolitan Police, as furnished by the "Superintendent" through me.

JOHN S. FOLK, Deputy Superintendent.

(With this communication was inclosed a copy of the rules and regulations and of the Metropolitan Police Law.)

This order occasioned considerable fluttering. A majority of the Police force undoubtedly are disposed to act under the new law, but are taking time to consider. The Captains of Police are about equally divided; all but the Captain of the Second District will probably give in their adhesion to-morrow. They will act upon the principle that it is the safest course.

Mayor Powell hearing of the Superintendent's manifesto, attempted to check-mate it by issuing the following:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, CITY HALL, BROOKLYN,
May 18 1857.

To the Captains of the several Police Districts:

Having been informed that the Chief of Police, under the title of Deputy Superintendent, (an officer not recognized by the Charter of the City of Brooklyn,) has issued instructions to you to read to your men the rules and regulations of the Commissioners appointed under the Metropolitan Police act, it becomes my duty, as Chief Executive officer of the city, in view of the action of the Common Council in relation to said act, to require you to abstain from complying with the order above referred to, or with any other order purporting to be issued by any person under said title of Deputy Superintendent, or by virtue of the act referred to.

The validity of the Metropolitan Police Act will not be recognized for the purpose of affirmative action until the question of its constitutionality shall have been judicially settled, or until such action shall be compelled by some judicial proceeding.

SAMUEL S. POWELL, Mayor.

The Police certainly have not any too much respect for the Mayor's order, and, with one exception, it is understood will not obey any order interfering with the new law.

Last evening Mayor Powel sent the following communication to the Common Council:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, CITY HALL,
BROOKLYN, Monday, May 18, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: The following order (a copy of which I inclose) has been issued by the Chief of Police to the Captains of the respective Districts of the City, under the title of Inspectors; and inasmuch as that order was issued without consultation with me, as the Chief Executive Officer of the City, I have countermanded the same, and instructed the Captains of the Districts to refuse obedience to any such order or directions. I also inclose a copy of my order to the Captains of Police. You will take such action in the matter as the nature of the case may demand.

Respectfully submitted,

SAMUEL S. POWELL, Mayor.

Alderman Kalbfleisch said that he regretted that a Committee of Conference had not been appointed to devise means to meet these exigencies.

Aldermen Van Brunt moved that the communication, together with the requisition of the Commissioners presented at the last meeting, be referred to a Special Committee of five, to report to the Board at its next meeting.

Aldermen FOWLER moved the following as a amendment:

Resolved, That this Common Council approve of the order issued by his Honor the Mayor to the various Police Captains, and that his Honor the Mayor be requested to take such further steps as will insure to the proposed protection of the property of the city of Brooklyn.

A lengthy discussion followed, not particularly interesting; but the more intelligent members contended that the law was a bad one, but as long as it was a law de facto it should be obeyed.

Upon a vote being taken upon Alderman FOWLER's amendment, it was lost—Ayes, 15; Nays, 17.

Alderman DELVECCHIO moved then to lay the matter on the table. Lost—Ayes, 15; Nays, 17.

The vote was taken on Aldermen VAN BRUNT's resolution, with the following result:

AYES—Aldermen Russell, Lowber, Pierson, Clarke, Van Brunt Speder, Welsh, Vail, Woolon, Wilson, Snyder, Preston, Ralphs, Walter, Snyder, Behols, Jenkins —17.

NAYS—Aldermen Fowler, Dorlan, Doherty, Delvecchio, Hudson, Rowe, Bogert, Oliver, Shaw, Fithian, Kennedy, McMahon, Colohan, Palmer, Kalbfleisch—15.

The Chair appointed the following Committee under this resolution: Aldermen Van Brunt, Clark, Lowber, Rowe, Wilson.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE.

—At the conclusion of the business relative to the Mayor's communication, Alderman KALBFLEISCH offered the following:

Resolved, That it be referred to the Police Committee to report forthwith how far the Chief of Police has compromised his position as Chief, and report what steps they deem necessary to take on the matter.

Alderman VAN BRUNT objected to the resolution as not in order.

Alderman KALBFLEISCH moved to suspend the rules.

Alderman VAN BRUNT hoped the rules would not suspended—the Chief of Police was not now under the control of the Common Council.

The motion to suspend the rules was lost. Ayes, 17; Nays, 15; the rules requiring a two-third vote.

The Excise Commissioners.

Messrs. WM. JAY HASKETT and JOHN KERR, two of the Excise Commissioners, met yesterday at 1 P. M. at Mr. HASKETT's office, in Centre-street. As the meeting was for the purpose of making final arrangements for entering to-day upon the duties of their office in accordance with the law under which they are appointed, the two Commissioners in attendance waited full half an hour for Mr. HAWS, the third Commissioner, when they received the announcement that Mr. HAWS had resigned his place as Commissioner, and would act no farther with them. His letter of resignation, it was stated, had been sent to Recorder SMITH, and was thence on its way to Justice INGRAHAM, to be consigned by the latter functionary to Judge DUER. No hint was given of the grounds upon which the resignation was based.

The two Commissioners then proceeded alone to arrange their programme for future operations. The question as to a place for meeting was considered first. They both expressed the decided conviction that not the slightest attention would be paid to this letter sent into the Board of Supervisors [we publish it in the proceedings of the Board] asking to be furnished with a place of meeting. Having previously determined that the Court of Common Pleas comes nearest to the "County Court," where by the act they are required to hold their meetings, they decided, to make the Common Pleas Court No. 1, in the City Hall, their place of meeting. I was agreed to meet here at 9½ o'clock this morning, and to enter at once upon the duties assigned them. Should the Judges upon whom devolves the duty appoint no substitute to fill Mr. HAWS' place they will go on alone. If the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas demand that they yield up the court-room they will quietly do so. That they will be ousted, there is not an doubt, but such ejectment, it was determined, should not debar them from going on with their duties. They finally agreed, therefore, with a view of granting parties an opportunity to present their petitions for licenses, and to give the law under which they act a thorough test, to hire a room and clerk, and let matters take their course.

The Commissioners have prepared blank forms of petitions, which will be ready by Wednesday. On the back of these petitions is printed in full the new Excise law. No applications for license have been received as yet. The Commissioners disagree as to the price to be charged for licenses, which, it will be remembered, is left optional with them. Mr. HASKETT goes in for charging all parties one sum, from the St. Nicholas down to PETE WILLIAMS' dance house at the Five Points. Mr. KERR thinks that the charge should be proportioned to the magnitude, respectability and profit of the respective places where liquor is sold.

KINGS COUNTY LIQUOR DEALERS ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting of this Society yesterday afternoon, the resolution prohibiting members from applying to the Commissioners of Excise for licence, was reconsidered, and rescinded, leaving the matter of application for licence to the discretion of members.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—This establishment was reopened last night, for a short season of three performances, under the direction of Signor MORELLI, a gentleman highly esteemed as an singer, and capable, we suppose, of full development into a manager. Experiments of three nights duration, are seldom of an interesting character, and tend rather to injure art than to benefit it. But in this case Mr. MORELLI offered some features of decided interest, and secured as a result a fine opening attendance.

The opera selected for the occasion was, of course, "Il Trovatore," we say of course, because that of all operas appears to be the one which is least certain to be played to empty benches, and is, therefore, judiciously selected when money is an object. The cast was as follows: Leonora, Mme COSA DE WILHORST; Azucena, Signorina ALDINI; Maurico, Signor CARLO JACOPI; Count, Signor MORELLI; Ferrando, Signor GAETARONI. Of the ladies, Signorina ALDINI is entitled to the most praise. Her scena in the second act was more dramatic than we have heard for some time, and throughout the lady was painstaking and thorough. Mme. WILHORST as Leonora, essayed a rôle altogether too heavy for her voice, but in spite of this circumstance, displayed much of her usual tact and ability in making the most of it.

The performance, however, will not rank with her previous efforts, and for the sake of a voice which at present is not over robust, we would advise her to eschew VERDI, and tread the more flowery paths of DONNIZETTI and BELLINI.

Signor CARLO JACOPI was the feature of the evening. Rumors of his rare abilities have been industriously circulated for some time past, and beery-looking photographs of the young gentleman (who is well-looking) have been exhibited in prominent situations for the admiration of an eager public. We regret to say that Mr. JACOPI has not fulfilled the promise of his friends. His début last night was a fiasco of melancholy completeness. The verdict of the public was uttered with very unwelcome emphasis, but judging from what they heard, it was a just verdict. Mr. JACOPI's voice is of the robusto kind, but hazy and obscure. It appears to be of limited compass, and is sadly in want of equalization, even for purposes of ordinary recitative. We are disposed to make every allowance for the inevitable nervousness of a first appearance, and hope on some future occasion to be able to say something in favor of Mr. JACOPI, which at present we are unable to do. The rôle of Manrico is in some respects favorable to a debutant. In the Serenade he has an opportunity of making an impression on the audience without the trying ordeal of appearing before them. The Serenade itself is not difficult, and is admirably supplied with breathing points, so that a singer of ordinary powers can make much of it. Mr. JACOPI neglected his opportunity, and sang in a way that was fearful as it was wonderful. In the trio of the same act he dispelled what doubts remained concerning his defects. In the duet of the second act he received the verdict of the audience, unwelcome but merited. Mr. JACOPI's career as the first tenor of the Academy of Music is—so far as popularity is concerned—at an end. If he is wise he will return to Italy and prosecute his studies with renewed ardor, or if he desires a compliment, resume his engagement at Her Majesty's Theatre, London, as second tenor. It is more than will be conceded to him in this country for some years.

Signor NICOLAO was the Conductor of the evening, and seemed to understand his business. The orchestra, however, was weak and insufficient. Signor MORELLI was in excellent voice, and in small respects the opera went well.

THE ARSON CASE.

Deniny on his Second Trial—The Freemason Question—No Jury yet Obtained.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Judge Russell.

The Court of General Sessions was crowded yesterday morning to its utmost capacity, the anticipation of the eager spectators being that Thomas Deniny would be tried a second time for arson in the first degree. His case has become, through adventitious circumstances, one of considerable interest. In January last he was tried in this Court for the aforesaid offence. The trial occupied three days, and the Jury failed to agree. Eleven were for conviction, and one for acquittal.

The District-Attorney was prepared to try him again in the April term, but, as our readers will remember, a conspiracy of sundry prisoners in the Tombs to murder the keepers and effect their escape was discovered by Mr. Gray, the Warden, and Deniny was said to be the ringleader. An examination into the circumstances connected with this conspiracy brought to light some interesting details touching Deniny's prior escape from conviction. He had boasted to a fellow prisoner that he would have been convicted at the first trial if he had not been a Freemason. He said that he gave the Masonic sign in Court in presence of the Jury, and that it was recognized by one of the jurors, the one who stood out against the other eleven, for his acquittal. This was the statement made by the man who shared Deniny's cell in the Tombs. We express no opinion as to its truth. Further, this prisoner said that Deniny, having procured, as he was by law entitled to do, a list of the jurors for the March term, from his counsel, received several visits from Lewis Baker, who was tried for the homicide of Poole, and that Baker had interviews with such of the jurors as were Freemasons. But Deniny was not tried in the March term, and the same marking of the jury list, with the same attentions from Mr. Lewis Baker, took place. These alleged circumstances coming to the knowledge of Mr. Gray, in his investigation into the conspiracy to escape, he communicated with the District Attorney, who brought it before the notice of Recorder Smith in court, and the trial was postponed till this term. It has already been twice postponed since the commencement of the term, but yesterday it came off, or rather, it began in earnest.

James T. Brady, Esq., was engaged to defend Deniny, but not being able to attend, Mr. Forsyth, the junior counsel, fetched Richard Busteed, Esq., the Corporation Counsel, who, although he was nearly unacquainted with the case, went into it with spirit. He challenged the whole panel of jurors and only got ten sworn. An additional panel was ordered for this morning. The questions propounded to each juror by Mr. Busteed were, "Have you read the evidence in the former trial of the defendant?" "Have you read in the DAILY TIMES the statement of an attempt on the part of the defendant to tamper with the Jury, because he was a Freemason?" "Have you read an account of his alleged conspiracy to escape from prison and murder the keepers?" "Are you a Know-Nothing?" "Will the circumstance that Deniny was born in Ireland weigh at all with you in giving your verdict?"

The names of the Jury obtained before the panel was exhausted are:

James C. Coleman,	Philip Wolfenstein,
Michael Byrne,	James Benjamin.
Adolph Lubers,	Henry Hamilton,
Anton Iroshin,	Charles McManus,
Simon Kinder.	Joseph F. Schultz.

In the former indictment against the prisoner there were two counts, one charging him with arson in the first degree, and the other in attempting to defraud the Bowery Insurance Company. Yesterday, the latter count was withdrawn from the indictment, and he is to be tried alone for arson in the first degree. The penalty of the crime is death, but it is never enforced. Imprisonment for life, or a long term of years, is substituted.

It was noticeable, yesterday, that the prisoner had a list of all the jurors, and that whenever he objected to a juror, though the latter had sworn that he did not know the prisoner, had never heard of the case, and was totally unbiased, he was peremptorily challenged.

The trial will be resumed to day, and will occupy two days at least. The other proceedings in the Court yesterday were of inferior interest.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

A Daguerreotypist in this City has thought proper in an article in the New-York Dispatch of Sunday last, to allude to the HALLOTYPES in the following words: "He takes more artistic and better likenesses by his new process, which he calls Hallotype than are taken at any other Establishment in New-York. The ordinary Oil-paintings on Canvas are much inferior to his Hallotypes," &c.

The undersigned begs to contradict the above statement by informing the public that the Hallotypes were invented and patented by Prof. JOHN BISHOP HALL, who gave or sold to the above-mentioned Daguerreotypist, as, also, to the undersigned, the right to make the Hallotypes in this City. The public will judge for themselves of the Hallotypes manufactured by the Daguerreotypist and those made at the Photographic Temple of Art of the undersigned.

The undersigned is not surprised at the admission of the Daguerreotypist that his Oil-paintings on Canvas are much inferior to his Hallotypes. The fact is easily explained, viz: The undersigned introduced the Photographic Oil-paintings at the Gallery of the Daguerreotypist some three years since, with the aid of several talented European Artists from his Parisian Establishment. At the expiration of his copartnership he withdrew his artists from the Daguerreotype establishment, No. 349 Broadway, and founded his present Photographic Temple of Art.

The grand secret of the merits of the Photographi Oil-painting on CANVAS consists in the talent of the artist employed to finish it. If the Daguerreotypist has no longer the services of FREDRICKS' corps of Parisian Artists, he shows poor taste in endeavoring to depreciate the merits of these Paintings as made only by

CHARLES D. FREDRICKS, and his corps of Parisian Artists, at his PHOTOGRAPHIC TEMPLE OF ART,

PURE IODINE IN PURE WATER.

ONLY SUBSTITUTE FOR COD-LIVER OIL.

It is astonishing with what delight consumptive people have learned that so palatable a medicine as pure Iodine in pure water is a perfect substitute for that nauseous mixture, cod-liver oil. They were disgusted with the oil, although the iodine it contained in solution always gave them hope of a cure. And then it was necessary to swallow a dozen bottles of the filthy oil in order to absorb one grain of pure iodine. Now, one bottle of iodine dissolved in pure water answers the same purpose, and consumption not only disappears, but scrofula and rheumatism, palsy and fever and ague. In fact, the iodine, in this shape, expels all the elements of disease from the lungs, the liver, the heart and the blood, and bestows a new life on the sinking sufferer. ANDERS' Liquid Iodine, a pure Iodine Water, is sold at $1 a bottle, by ANDERS & FOSDICK, No. 3 Second avenue and No. 842 Broadway; C. H. RING, No. 192, and BARNES & PARK, No. 304 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn, and all druggists.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—This neat and prosperous place of amusement was again filled to overflowing last night, to witness the dramatization of CORE'S new story, "The Wild Knight, or the Unknown Crusader," which was most rapturously applauded throughout, and may be considered one of the most successful "hits" of the season. The revival of the great pantomime of "Asphodel, or the Magic Pen," was also happily received, as was also the comic drama of "A Day in Paris." All three of which will be repeated this evening, when another crowded house may be expected. We would advise our readers to secure their places early in the day.

MONDAY, May 18—P.M.

The steamship Arago, from Havre and Southampton Wednesday, May 6, arrived at this port late this evening. Her financial and market news confirms the telegraphic dispatches from the Anglo-Saxon at Quebec to the same date, received here this forenoon. The London Money market, after the sailing of the Cunarder of the 2d May, appears to have sensibly improved. The English Funds are quoted ⅝@¾ ₰ cent. higher, and the French Bourse sympathized in the advance to the same extent. Consols 93¼@⅜ for money, 93¾ for the June account. The Three per Cent. Rente 69.10 for money, 69.40 for the account. American Stocks are quoted much the same as by the Asia. Later and less favorable accounts from the New York market had been received, without materially affecting the dealings in London. Illinois Central shares were done at 128 sterling, on the quotation of 131¼ Federal money from this market. The Bonds were 90@91; Michigan Central Bonds, 91, sales; Southern Michigan Sinking Fund, ex coupon, 71, sales; Pennsylvania Central Sterling, 92, sales; New-York Central Bonds at previous rates; the shares quoted 81@83 sterling. Grain is quoted higher at London, Liverpool and Marseilles, and the weather cold and unsettled at Paris. We copy an interesting report on the state of trade in France, and also the following from the London Markets, from the London Times and London Daily News:

From the London Times.

MONDAY EVENING, May 4.

The funds to-day have had a better appearance than at any time during the past three or four weeks. The payments consequent upon the 4th of the month have all been well met, and towards the afternoon there was a general improvement in the supply of money. Further heavy liabilities fall due to morrow, and after these shall have been discharged there will be increased ease. The quotation of the rate of exchange from New-York, and the belief that a portion of the £130,000 brought by the Niagara is on English account, together with the fact of the next Mexican mail being expected to bring another large quantity of silver, also contributed to give firmness to the market. Although the £200,000 of gold announced last week by the Ashburton has not yet been delivered, there is still an absence of withdrawals from the Bank, and confidence is therefore felt that all danger is over for the present of a renewed reduction in the stock of bullion, especially as the first change in the wind is likely to bring several new arrivals from Australia. Consols for money opened at the closing quotation of Saturday—92¾ to ⅞, and under the influence of various purchases on the part of the public they steadily improved to 93⅛ to ¼, at which they remained to the official close. After regular hours there were buyers at 93¾. For the 4th of June the last transactions were as 93¾.

TUESDAY EVENING, May 5.

The quotation of gold at Paris is about 6 ₰ mille premium, and the short exchange on London is 25.22½ ₰ £1 sterling. On comparing these rates with the English Mint price of £3 17s. 10½d. ₰ ounce for standard gold, it appears that gold is nearly 4 10ths ₰ cent. dearer in Paris than in London.

The funds have fully maintained the improvement of yesterday, and the market has not lost any of the favorable features which then appeared to have caused its change of tone. Consols for money, which left off last evening at 93¾, were first quoted 93½ to ⅝. From this they went to 93⅝, but 93¾ to ⅞ was again the price at the official close. After regular hours there were buyers at 93⅞. For the June account the last transactions were at 93⅜ to ½.

The foreign Exchanges this afternoon were generally quoted higher, especially as regards France, Holland and Belgium. Even at the advanced quotations there was little disposition to buy Bills.

Amsterdam, three months, 11.19⅝@⅞; do. short, 11.16⅜@11¾; Rotterdam, three months, 11.19⅝@12; Antwerp and Brussels, three months, 25.50@0; Hamburg, three months, 13.8½@⅝; Paris, three months, 25.67½@72½; do. short, 25.25@30; Marseilles, three months, 25.10@5; Frankfort-on-the-Maine, three months, 119⅜@¾.

The Sugar market was rather excited to day. The demand was very active, and resulted in an average advance of no less than 2s. ₰ cwt. Teas is also firmer, and more difficult to buy; and a large business was done in Rice at full prices.

From the London Daily News.

TUESDAY EVENING, May 5.

The funds can scarcely be said to have attained a further improvement to-day, but the tendency was decidedly favorable. The market closed firmly at the full advance of yesterday. But for a considerable sale of Consols for money by the broker who usually acts for the Court of Chancery, a further improvement would probably have been established. The favorable movement of the continental exchanges is viewed with satisfaction, as tending to promote the retention here of at least a portion of the expected supplies of gold. Notwithstanding the misintenance of a high rate of interest on Consols at the settlement now in progress, purchases continue to be effected in anticipation of the deduction of the half yearly dividend, which will take place immediately after the June settlement. In most classes of English and French railway shares an advance took place.

The Official City Bank Averages for the week ending Saturday last, May 16, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank on another page of this paper, present the following changes from the previous statement of Saturday, May 9:

Decrease in Loans	$448,220
Increase in Specie	532,183
Decrease in Circulation	247,491
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	640,658

The statement is highly satisfactory, confirming not only the satisfactory condition of our Gold Exchanges, but the general ease in the Banking movement and the Money Market. The actual Specie reserve with which the business of the new week begins is believed to be $600,000 or $800,000 above the average of last week, as shown on the statement—thus affording the ability to spare $800,000 for the Boston steamer on Wednesday, without disturbance to the average. The interexchanges of last week between the Banks, through the Clearing House, averaged $30,223,587 per day. Including these and the Sub-Treasury statement, the following is the general

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

Sub-Treasury	13,467,755	13,778,645	14,408,112
1856—May 17, Specie in Bank			$12,796,541
In Sub-Treasury			13,467,755
Total reserve in City			$26,264,296
1857—May 16—Specie in Bank			$12,543,674
In Sub-Treasury			13,778,645
Total reserve in City			$26,322,319

There is no change in Money affairs to-day. The business in Foreign Bills for the Boston steamer is thus far moderate, with an ample offering of Sterling within last week's quotation, 109⅛ @109¾ ₰ cent. Francs, 5.18¾@5.17½. The Stock Exchange continues under considerable excitement on three or four of the active Railroad Shares, while on the remainder of the list prices leave off steady and a fraction higher than Saturday. The chief interest in the market attaches to Southern Michigan, Cleveland and Toledo, and Illinois Central, which have fluctuated to-day as follows:

Illinois Central	133¾@133¼	@139
Toledo	69¾@70@67½	seller week. @69¼ cash.
Southern Michigan	69⅛@70⅜@68¾	@69.

The contest on Cleveland and Toledo occasioned a good deal of excitement and some bitterness of feeling in the street. It appears to be among and between the Bears themselves. A firm of jobbers who have been for several months prominent operators against the stock, and who have shown its credit little or no quarter, while bearing down its market value, have made a short corner, it appears, on their confederates in the same line of operations. Having quietly secured the control of the cash stock, while ostensibly putting out large contracts for a decline, they forced their neighbors on Saturday and to-day to make their immediate deliveries at a disadvantage of 2@3 ₰ cent. The list of sales will explain the difference between cash and short options to the seller. We do not know that much sympathy is felt for either party to the contest, but the exhibition to-day will hardly be without its moral. In Southern Michigan the sales were quite large, and, as the close of the new subscription draws nigh, the interest in the common stock increases. Every effort was made at the Second Board to cheapen the price, in anticipation of the deliveries to be made to-morrow and next day. The subscription to the Guaranteed Stock this afternoon amounts to $1,681,000, or an excess of nearly $2,000,000 over the sum total to be awarded before hearing from the Foreign Stockholders. The number of small Stockholders who subscribed to-day is again large, and the probability is that 60,000 or 65,000 common shares will be represented by Wednesday night, thus securing by the 40 ₰ cent. scale $2,400,000, or 00 on this side the Atlantic, and rendering the distribution of the remainder to the large subscribers who have applied in excess of their proportion almost unnecessary. We understand that country applications by mail or telegraph, dated on the 20th, will be cared for, to the extent of 40 ₰ cent. of the common stock, standing in the names of the applicants on the 20th.

To-morrow (Tuesday) the annual election for the Harlem Railroad Board will take place at the office of the Company in Pine-street. As there will be rival tickets presented, stockholders would do well to attend in person and select the best for the true interests of the property. The following names are in circulation, from which thirteen are to be selected. The names in italic are on both tickets—Messrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Daniel Drew, William C. Wetmore, Francis W. Edmonds, Charles W. Sandford, Horace F. Clark, John Alstyne, Allan Campbell, Horace Brooks, Albert Smith, Nathaniel P. Bailey, Albert J. Akin, John Harper, George Law, Henry S. Blatchford, Samuel B. White, A. B. Bayliss.

The Sub-Treasury received, to-day, $115,657; paid out $135,160; and held, at the close, a balance of $13,759,142.

The Board of Brokers to-day rescinded the resolution previously adopted requiring partial payments on the privilege attaching to outstanding contracts in Southern Michigan.

The earnings of the same road in April, 1855, were $506,597 42, or $23,837 02 less than the earnings in April this year. The decrease in the earnings during April, 1857, as compared with those of April, 1856, arises almost entirely out of the falling off in the eastward-bound freight business, which last year was unusually large, owing, in part, to the early opening of navigation on Lake Erie, and to the high price of breadstuffs.

THRILLING NARRATIVE OF FACTS.

MORE MURDERS OF APOSTATES.

THE BAPTISM OF BLOOD.

Mormon Customs and Ceremonies—Wholesale Immoralities—Gloomy Forebodings, &c.

By last night's mails, we received another package from one of our Salt Lake correspondents, inclosing the following interesting letter, which brings the history of events in that distant region down to the 1st of April last:

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH TERRITORY, Wednesday, April 1, 1857.

I avail myself of a safe opportunity to send you the following record of crimes and outrages, and occurrences transpiring here, all of which are within my personal knowledge, or have been derived from sources in which entire confidence may be reposed. Be assured that affairs here are approaching a fearful crisis which cannot be much longer delayed; and I write you now, not only to keep our fellow-citizens advised of the wickedness perpetrated day after day in this God and Government-forsaken country, under the direction of the chief representative of the authorities at Washington—BRIGHAM YOUNG—but also in vindication of the course which the victims of oppression may be driven to pursue in the protection of their lives and property, and redressing our numerous and frightful wrongs. I send accordingly a transcript of my Diary for the last month, with some occasional additions by way of suggestion and comment.

MONDAY, March 9.—The carrier of the Southern mail brings news to-day of an attack on a party which left here a short time since for California, consisting of four men named PETTRO, TOBIN, and two others. They had encamped about 75 miles below Parowan, the last southern settlement on the road to San Bernardino before coming to the new settlement of Los Vegas, where they were waiting for the mail to come up. The place selected for their camp was at the foot of a perpendicular ledge of rocks in the vicinity of some bushes. About 4 o'clock in the morning, the moon shining brightly at the time, the attacking party crept up and fired down on them from the top of the rock. TOBIN was shot through the head the ball entering close under the eye, passing diagonally through the nose and cheek, and lodging in his neck. He was also shot in five other places, and left for dead. The other men escaped into the bushes, one of them, however, having been shot in the back of the neck, and another having had two fingers shot off. When the party returned to the camp they found that TOBIN was alive, and with the assistance of the mail party, who soon overtook them, they carried him along with them. From the reports it is somewhat doubtful whether he recovers.

This TOBIN was Orderly Sergeant in Capt. MORRIS' command, U. S. A., which served as an escort to Capt. GUNNISON, when he was killed on the Plains. After his murder the command wintered at Great Salt Lake City, and during their sojourn in Zion, TOBIN at one and the same time, became imbued with Mormonism and impressed with the charms of ALICE YOUNG, daughter of the Prophet BRIGHAM. He embraced the first object of his adoration, and was led to believe, by the wily prophet, that, in the fullness of time, he would be permitted to embrace the second. After serving out his enlistment he returned here last Spring, brimfull of love and Mormonism, and figured extensively as employe and confident of BRIGHAM, and Professor of the Art of War, drilling recruits to serve in the expected collision between the United States and Mormondom, provided the incoming Administration does not shirk the question as the outgoing one has for the past four years. To return to TOBIN: the current of true love with him, as with all heroes, ran with a ripple, and various reasons are assigned why the fair ALICE took sanctuary in the arms of one HIRAM CLAWSON, where some three or four doves had nestled before her. The gallant TOBIN sought consolation in the arms of a Miss RICH; but even the charms of love and consolatione of religion failed to satisfy his ambitious longings. He found it best to make a journey to California.

In other words, as we say here, "the country became unhealthy for him." Unfortunately, however, he had been a "leetle" too deeply initiated into the mysteries of Mormonism to be permitted to leave the country, after his close intimacy with the Governor of Utah. When the attack was made the party were asleep, rolled in their blankets, and the bandits fired at their heads, but most of the shots were aimed too high. Their boots and shoes being at their heads, under the blankets, deceived the assailants as to their true position, hence their escape. They counted 56 bullet holes in their blankets, and what was quite significant, the balls were from revolvers of the navy size.

The Mormons here, in speaking of this transaction, wink their eyes to each other, and say, "The Indians are very bad on the lower road." There is no doubt but the attack was planned in this City, and that orders were sent from here to execute it. It was said publicly by the Mormons, immediately after the party left the City, that they would not live to get through to California, and reports came in several days in advance of the mail that they had been killed. The bandits thought they had killed TOBIN, and probably spoke of it to some person on their return. The Mormons do not hesitate to publicly proclaim that no apostate shall be permitted to escape from their community "to tell their d—d tales about them." We were disposed to regard these threats as mere expedients to frighten us, but are forced to the conclusion that they intend to carry them into execution.

With the mail that left for the States on the 1st inst., was HORACE S. ELDRIDGE, who has gone to St. Louis to take charge of that "Stake of Zion," and if possible re-light the Luminary, (a Mormon paper,) which was extinguished for want of proper fuel last season.

Just before leaving us he had two young girls (sisters) sealed to him against their will and in spite of their tears and remoustrances. Their father was a bigoted Mormon, and compelled them thus to become concubines to a man who has several women in his harem already. He was too conspicuous a personage in the Church to be prudently thwarted, and the father inclined a deaf ear to their entreaties, and turned them over to a creature whose soul must be insensible to every generous emotion. What else could be expected from a devotee of Mormonism, whose religious belief is that woman should be the passive instruments for the gratification of man's sensual appetites, and who laugh to scorn the idea of her moral or intellectual worth.

FRIDAY, March 13.—Last evening "our peaceful city" was thrown into commotion by an attempt, on the part of some persons high up in the Priesthood, to get away from T. S. WILLIAMS his daughter, who is not yet fourteen years of age. In order that you may comprehend the case, I must give you a short sketch of THOMAS S. WILLIAMS and his family. His father is one of the old Mormons, having been with them from the beginning of their career, and is, moreover, a conspicuous member of the Danite Band. His grandfather, old as he is, has been "sealed" to three young women within the last few weeks. A few days since I met him coming from BRIGHAM'S office, with a young girl, apparently some sixteen or seventeen years old, to whom he had just been "sealed." His son, from his own story, was "whipped into Mormonism when he was only ten years old." The early lessons, thus forcibly inculcated, had their effect, and he has ever since—until within the last few months—been a firm supporter and devoted advocate, fighting their battles and contributing his means most liberally to the Mormon cause, presuming, perhaps, upon his long standing in the Church, and upon the important services he had rendered, he showed too much independence of spirit, for a subservient follower of the immaculate Prophet, and BRIGHAM undertook to check his growing arrogance. The attempt, instead of humbling, only produced an obstinate resistance, which finally led to his expulsion from the Church. They hoped, by these extreme measures, to bring him back to obedience and the Mormon faith, but finding him more incorrigible than ever, they tried, without avail, to coax and bribe him back. Even this failed, and he commenced making preparations to leave the Territory. It had been repeatedly said by Mormons that he would not be permitted to leave here in peace, but we could not see where the obstruction was to come from. The curtain is rising, and we begin to see a little of the play.

WILLIAMS' wife's family, as well as his own, are all Mormons, and their united efforts have been used to compel him to return to the faith; but he says that persecution has made him examine into their religion, and he finds it worse than worthless, and he can never again yield his support or acquiescence to so rank an imposition. Finding him still incorrigible, the next attempt was made upon his wife and children, who were told that they would be eternally damned if they followed the husband and father, and that their only chance for salvation was in abandoning him and being "sealed" to some good man in the church who would "persevere to the end." His wife repelled their advances, and declared her intention of following the fortunes of her husband. Then the grandfather and grandmother, the uncles and aunts of his daughter were employed to seduce her from her father. Appealing to her love for her parents, they represented that they were on the road to hell, and that she could save them if she would consent to be "sealed" to some one in the church. They knew the strong affection of the father for his child, and told her that her parents would not go if she remained, and then they would return to the church and be saved, and that by no other means could they escape perdition. Strong arguments these to a child who has never heard any religion taught but Mormonism. With such sophistry they had almost, if not quite, succeeded in winning this young girl to their schemes before her father was aware of it. The first notice of their villainy came from HEBER C. KIMBALL, (BRIGHAM'S First Counselor,) who met him on the street, and asked or rather demanded his daughter for his son. He told the father that he made the demand in accordance with BRIGHAM'S counsel, (KIMBALL is the same Prophet who, a short time since, offered a wagon and a yoke of cattle for a girl some 17 years old.) This demand struck WILLIAMS like a clap of thunder, and when I saw him a short time after, he was raving like a maniac. He says, justly, that we have no laws to appeal to, as they have been rendered powerless, and our last Court was broken up by an armed mob; and rapine, lust, and slaughter run riot over this maddened and distracted country. Sauve qui peut, is the word of these times in Zion. For the last day or two a body of the Danites have been hovering about WILLIAMS' house, what their object is no one can tell, but it is supposed they design taking the girl by force. WILLIAMS has been an active partisan of Mormonism, and now retributive justice may compel him to drink from his own chalice. His early education in these abominations form his only apology, and he has certainly shown himself worthy of a better career within the last few months, by his exhibition of manliness and affection for his child.

JOSEPH YOUNG, the not over-bright son of BRIGHAM, returned last fall from a mission to England. As the son of the Prophet, he was flattered, caressed and almost worshipped by the faithful abroad, and has returned inflated with vanity near to bursting. He left a young wife behind him when he went, whom he has entirely neglected since his return, except to keep her locked up in his father's seraglio. He has lately been "sealed" to two young women, one of them daughter of one GRANT, a brother of the late JEDEDIAH. She is about seventeen years of age and represented to be very amiable and lovely. She was most bitterly opposed to the marriage and begged and implored her father not to force her into the arms of a man whom she loathed and abhorred; but he was deaf to her entreaties, for the son of the Prophet must be gratified. Since she was "sealed" she refuses to associate with him and walks her room all night, her agony unrelieved by tears, in a state bordering on insanity.

This is the hearty acquiescence that the Utah women give to their prostitution. Women in this community are considered little more than household drudges, or mere toys, to be disposed of as the Prophet dictates. It is vain for them to assert rights which a heartless tyrant disregards—in vain to raise the imploring voice—in vain are their anxious prayers or agonizing tears. All must be sacrificed to the unhallowed appetite or sordid views of a despot. Such has always been woman's condition in heathen countries where polygamy is tolerated. Mormonism rolls back the tide of time and grafts upon this age the principles of by-gone centuries, when the mists of an almost Cimmerian darkness covered the earth; they obliterate all the benign and ameliorating influences of the pure and holy principles of the religion of the cross, by which woman has risen to higher degrees of estimation, until among all truly Christian people she has become the equal and cherished companion of man, and is not his slave.

ALICE YOUNG, the daughter of BRIGHAM, who was last Winter "sealed" to H. C. CLAWSON, a pimp of the Prophet's, who had previously three other wives, a short time since packed up her effects preparatory to leaving her husband; but the storm has blown over, or was stilled by the voice of the Prophet. I am told that CLAWSON now seeks a younger sister to be "sealed" to him. The mother—BRIGHAM'S first wife—is almost beside herself with fear that he will obtain the father's consent to it. "Perfect happiness reigns in all the families in Utah!"

A young woman, who forsook her friends in England and came to this country last Fall, under the delusion that if she could only reach "Zion" her happiness would be completely insured in this world and the next, was taken on her arrival into BRIGHAM'S family as his mistress, when the monstrous state of affairs was soon revealed to her. She anxiously inquired whether it had always been thus, and if there was no hope for a change. She was told that, instead of any hope of improvement, affairs daily were growing worse—when the poor woman in her agony exclaimed, "Oh! I am lost! lost!! lost!!!"

An Elder in this Church, a short time ago, disregarding the remonstrances of a wife, was "sealed" to a young woman, one of the arrivals last season. The occurrence had such an effect upon the wife that she became sick and gave premature birth to her child. The newly "sealed" women on being brought into the family and witnessing the misery she had wrought in it, because so disgusted with the man that she left him immediately, declaring her determination not to live with such a wretch. Truly "the women are the strongest advocates for polygamy."

The Mormons pretend and assert it as a part of their doctrine that no man can take a second wife without the consent of the first. That consent is not unusually obtained by coercion, and the lash and starvation are frequently resorted to for that purpose, many instances of which have come to my notice. But BRIGHAM has adopted another mode of insuring acquiescence. If the first wife evinces any repugnance to the addition he deposes her, as he terms it, from her position as first wife and assigns the place to another.

There are some less grave stories told about this people. Elder W. W. PHELPS, one of the very old Mormon rascals, who plays the part of the Devil in one of their ceremonies representing the Garden of Eden, persuaded one of the "hand-cart women" that she could not be saved unless she was "sealed" to him. She, not understanding exactly what was expected from the "sealed" ones, consented; but when night came on and he wanted to share her couch, she exclaimed: "Is this what you are after, you old covey? I'll seal you," and thereupon struck him in the face with her fist, giving him a black eye which he carried for several days.

A part of Mormon creed is "baptism for the remission of sins," and this baptism is going on by the wholesale. As often as a man sins he must be baptized with water or with blood. If a man's sin be very great in the eye of the Church, his blood must atone for it. This is called baptism with blood. For example, poor TOBIN was baptized with blood. The mandate has gone forth that the whole population shall be baptized, and the Bishops and Elders are visiting every family in the city and country, compelling all, old and young, to come forward for that purpose. There are very few—how much soever they may dissent—that dare refuse, for they would henceforth be looked upon as "apostates." The people assemble by hundreds on a certain block at a specified time, when the Bishops and Elders march them to a pond or creek, where the immersion is to take place. A person witnessing the ceremony would not imagine that they considered it a sacred ordinance, for they make a grand frolic of the occasion. I saw one party the other day of which over four hundred were immersed, and of another party, three hundred. The shouts of merriment strongly reminded me of an old-fashioned sheep-washing, when the farmers would drive their flocks into the water by scores.

SATURDAY, March 21.—Night before last a gentleman named LANDON was followed by two men who dogged him all the evening. When near his house he asked them what cause they had for watching him, and was told they had orders to do so, and that every one who was in any way connected with a "Gentile" was also watched. On entering his house he found his wife in tears and very much frightened. She told him that some men had been there threatening his life because he had refused to come forward to be baptized, and to renew "his covenants," and they told her that if they did not both renew their obligations they would be "dealt with." They said the day would soon come when every one not with them would be "cut off," and that they were determined no apostates should live here.

Last night his house was again visited by two men, who announced that their errand was to require that he should be baptized and receive the "endowments," or to demand to know the reason why he would not. He had a class of three young men, whom he was teaching drawing. The visitors ordered the class to put aside their work, and forbade all labor while they were present. It is a custom with these "Teachers," as they call themselves, when they enter a house, to assume control and order the family about as they please, and the people dare not do otherwise than submit. Having got the attention of the household, the men talked and preached until 12 o'clock, threatening the vengeance of the Church if he refused to obey their requirements, and then left.

Soon after they returned with two more men, and demanded his manuscripts, expressing a determination to search his house for them. Mr. LANDON told them they were welcome to all they found, but before they could search his house they must show a warrant for doing so. They replied that they knew he was capable of doing great injury to the Church if permitted to secede from them; that they were determined to prevent it, and that he should take upon himself all the "obligations" of the order or suffer the consequences of his disobedience. Alternately threatening and cajoling him, they remained until three o'clock this morning.

MONDAY, March 23.—A few days ago we received the news of the robbery of a man named PARRISH, (a dissenting Mormon, who was intending to leave the Territory,) in Springville, a town about sixty miles south of here. Some men came to his premises in the night and took two span of horses and a wagon, with which he contemplated to leave the Territory this Spring. Hearing them moving his property, he went to the door, where he was met by a man who presented a pistol to his head, threatening to blow his brains out if he made any noise or offered any resistance. The next day he found one span of his horses in the stable of one BULLOCK, the Mayor of Provo. He claimed the horses, but BULLOCK refused to let him have them. He then applied to the Judge of the Probate Court, (a Mormon Tribunal, but the only Court left us since the forcible dissolution of the United States Court,) for a writ of replevin, which the Judge refused to issue, and he could get no redress.

We have now received the report and particulars of the murder of PARRISH and two other men. A party of five "apostate" Mormons, PARRISH, his two sons, POTTER and DARGER, having been stripped of all they possessed by Mormon process and open robbery, determined to leave the Territory at all hazards.

Being unable to procure teams, they started on foot and passed out of Springville in the afternoon. They had been watched, and as soon as they had started, several men were called out to assist in the affair. The party had hardly proceeded a hundred yards from the gate of the town before they were fired upon by a band of disguised Danites. POTTER was killed outright, having been pierced by five balls. PARRISH and one of his sons were wounded. The murderers then rushed upon them, and cut Parrish's throat from ear to ear, and ripped open his bowels. Other wounds upon his person showed that he struggled hard. His son, though severely wounded, ran about 80 yards, when he was overtaken, and his throat was cut and his bowels were ripped open. The other two men being a little in the rear escaped.

POTTER had a brother killed in the Gunnison massacre. His wife says that ever since that event the Mormons have been very suspicious, and have been watching him continually, supposing that he knew more about that affair than was consistent with the safety of certain men, particularly if he should escape from the Territory. The murder having been committed in such a public place, within a few yards of a town of 2,500 inhabitants, and two men escaping, the Authorities felt themselves compelled to take some notice of the affair, and therefore called a coroner's inquest, whose verdict was "assassinated by some persons unknown."

As soon as it was known that the victims of this terrible crime were making preparations to leave, an express was sent to BRIGHAM, which performed the journey and returned in less than twenty-four hours, although the distance traveled was about 120 miles—bringing orders the nature of which may be reasonably inferred from the horrible results. The Bishop laid his hands on the heads of some men, (the supposed assassins,) previous to their starting out, blessed them and prayed the Lord to "give them strength to perform the work of the Lord."

We have reports of others being killed, but have no positive knowledge, as the Mormons take care to hide from us every dark deed when they can help it. One of the Bishops, the other day, in preaching to his congregation, said that he "would cut the throats of the apostates with as little compunction as he would go into a pen of hogs and butcher them." One of the "Seventies" said that at first he shuddered at the idea of killing all the apostates—men, women and children—but had become reconciled to it; that he was satisfied he would be saving them and assisting in building up the kingdom.

MARCH 30.—Mr. MOGO, a U. S. Deputy Surveyor, started out about two weeks since to commence his surveying operations, taking with him a strong party of twenty-seven armed men. It had been said all Winter that no surveys would be permitted. Since Mr. MOGO's departure these threats have multiplied, and it is openly declared that he and his party are to be killed. Mormons have been warned not to accompany or work for him, as they would thus endanger their lives.

A flying report has just come in that the Deputy Surveyor and all his party had been massacred.

But I must close, for the present, this recital of crime and misery. For four years have we been anxiously expecting the United States Government to adopt some measure to prevent the coercive prostitution of women, and to punish an insolent band of assassins and robbers who exist here as a distinctive and professional body, and whose impunity is purchased by their readiness to serve the Mormon Church in their line of business. Are we to expect relief or are we to be mocked by a reënactment of the Steptoe farce? VIGO.

Interesting Letter from Judge Drummond—Real State of Affairs in Utah.

CHICAGO, Ill., Monday, May 4, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: A valued friend of mine has just presented me an extract of a communication from FERRAMORG LITTLE, of Great Salt Lake City, which made its appearance in some one of the New-York papers in which this high functionary of Mormonism, this Elder of the Latter Days, this member of the "quorum" of the "seventies," this spiritual brother-in-law of Gov. BRIGHAM YOUNG, this tool, agent and abettor in the blackest crimes that the malignant heart of man can conceive, has had the church duty to perform in denying the allegations in my communications to Attorney-General BLACK. In the first place he asserts that the books and records were not destroyed. I assert that they were, that Mr. LITTLE well knew it at the time of that black outrage, and that in his capacity of Elder he sat in judgment on certain members of the Church and cut them off, for the reason that they expressed a degree of dissatisfaction at that high-handed outrage of the High Priesthood of Mormonism.

Again he asserts that at the time that he left Salt Lake there were no persons in the Penitentiary of Utah save three Indians, who were convicted in A. D. 1854. This, I assert, is a gratuitous and unmitigated falsehood, and well-known by Mr. LITTLE; and that there were at least four young men in the Utah Penitentiary who were tried and convicted before ELIAS SMITH, the Probate Justice of Great Salt Lake City and County, in March, A. D. 1856, and severally sentenced for fourteen, sixteen and eighteen months; and that, too, without those men having committed any criminal act known to the law books save the Mormon Priesthood, and that they were in the Penitentiary when he left Salt Lake City, and that he knew the fact.

Again: I assert that a man by the name of LEWIS was tried and convicted before GEORGE PEACOCK, Probate Judge of Manti County, in December last, for assault and battery, and put in the Penitentiary of Utah for five years' time, and that before he was incarcerated in the prison that he was castrated by a Mormon mob, all of which Mr. LITTLE well knew and no doubt had an active hand in this bloody outrage.

Again, he asserts that he never heard anything of the murder of the dumb boy, Whitehouse, by the English Doctor named BAKER. I assert that Mr. LITTLE'S connection with that band of Church-licensed pirates and murderers well-known as Danites or Destroying Angels, is such as to keep him fully and promptly posted in all the nefarious acts of the Church, and in this case in particular, that he well knew that BAKER was tried and should have been hung for one of the most brutal murders ever committed by the hand of man; that the Jurors did find him guilty of murder in the second degree, and that he, BAKER, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for ten years; was started to the Penitentiary in care of Deputy-Marshal ANSON CALL, on Wednesday, and was promptly pardoned by Gov. YOUNG without ever seeing the inside of the Penitentiary, before the following Sunday; that HOSEA STOUT and JOHN BAIR were the lawyers who defended BAKER, and that JOSEPH A. KELTING was the counsel for the Government on the trial; that LEWIS BRONSON, WM. STEVENS, ALLEN RUSSEL, GEORGE CATLIN, JOHN CAVIER, CHAS. WILLIAMS, CHAS. PRICE, JEREMIAH HATCH, JOHN MANOUM, WARREN SNOW, WM. HOLDEN and ORVILLE COX were the Jurors who tried the case.

Again, Mr. LITTLE asserts that the murder of Col. BABBITT, on the Plains, last Fall, is all fancy, &c. Mr. Editor, I wish it was so; that Col. BABBITT was a bad man, and a murderer, no man will deny, neither did I expect Mr. LITTLE and his numerous licensed coadjutors in crime to acknowledge that they had murdered BABBITT and SUTHERLAND, while on the way to the "peaceful valleys of the mountains;" but, Sir, it is the base and cruel act, the manner in which it was done, of which I complain. If BABBITT was worthy of death, let him be tried by a constitutional jury of his country, and not by a self-constituted court, known as the Melchisadec Priesthood, or higher law of a Church whose code is stained with the blood of countless scores. BABBITT had been in and out of the Church, as occasion seemed to require, for nearly twenty years, and at times, when under the influence of liquor, told many solemn truths on the subject and design of Mormonism, among which were the secret oaths administered to the male members of the Church when taking their endowment degrees, all of which are pregnant with treasonable designs; and for this overt act the poor unfortunate fellow lost his life, in strict obedience to the absolute law of the Church, all of which Mr. LITTLE well knew.

In connection with this communication I send you an affidavit made by HIRAM A. WATSON, now a resident of the city of Chicago, and a gentleman who enjoys the confidence of all who know him (save the Mormons;) and as Mr. WATSON has been a minister of this Church, and was honest enough to leave it after losing several thousand dollars worth of property, I fancy that his statements will be taken for far more real worth than the man who is still in the meshes of the Church, who is still the pliant, willing and obedient tool of the Church, whose duty it is not only to say openly that the charges against the Mormons are untrue, but it is his duty to go into Court and swear that they are false and untrue, which he would assuredly do.

But, Sir, why is it that all the appointees under both FILLMORE and PIERCE'S Administration so nicely agree as to the disloyalty of the Mormons, and their open and secret rebellion to the laws and instructions of the country? Does not the universal language of all these men agree in this state of facts? Certainly, Sir; no man will have the presumption or ignorance to take any other view of the subject. Then you must conclude that these men tell the simple truth as far as they go, or that they have all joined together as enemies to the truth.

Tear up the graves of a SHAVER, a HARRIS, and of BABBITT; call together all the judges, secretaries and Indian agents, who have not been under the baneful influence of Mormonism, and in one universal tongue will they reiterate the same state of stubborn facts which constitute now a record that will yet agitate this happy country from centre to circumference. The American people, thank heaven, are kind and benevolent to a fault; hence, Sir, those arch-traitors are relying on that benevolence; and while the parent Government deals with this Territory as a rude child, in loose kindness, every effort is being made to bring into that Territory a class of ignorant aliens from foreign countries to build up an independent republic in the midst of the most beautiful republican form of Government that civilized man ever beheld, and after ages will yet point to America as a stench in the nostrils of all refined and civilized countries, unless a firm and speedy step is taken to suppress that spirit of organized hostility to our common country; and I, for one, Sir, confess that I have but little hope of seeing this question fairly and promptly met by this Administration; but it will be met in the pulpit and on the rostrum, by politicians in after years, as a stepping-stone to political preferment, which should certainly be avoided; but will it?

Respectfully, yours, W. H. DRUMMOND.

The Trouble in Dr. Cheever's Church

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your editorial notice of the meeting of Dr. CHEEVER'S Church, held last evening, you remark, "The parties who signed the letter asking the Doctor to resign, were among the audience, and either voted with the majority or kept silence."

The two last words express the fact, not only as to such of the signers as were present, (several were not,) but also as to others who would not countenance such an utter disregard of the standing rules of the Church, which provide not only that the meeting should have been called in a different manner, but also, that "no resolution shall be adopted at the same meeting at which it is offered, if any objection is made thereto." Such was the resolution "sustaining Dr. CHEEVER," and it was formally objected to by more than one, but put for adoption notwithstanding.

From this time when the majority refused to accept Mr. WILCOX'S proposed substitute, (published by you,) it is to be presumed that the signers of the letter took no part in any vote.

If so, is "a unanimous vote" a strange result?

It should also be remarked that there was no "charge" or "reason" before the meeting for its approval or disapproval, nor an intimation from the signers why they sent the letter. What or who, then, in any proper sense, was sustained?

The truth will probably be developed in due time, though a majority did vote against Mr. WILCOX'S proposition to get at the facts. CONGREGATION.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, May 19, 1857.

A Card.

The District Attorney feels it due to the commercial community to say, from recent disclosures made to him by an arrested defendant, which he regards reliable, (but not of a legal character as yet to authorize steps of prevention,) that attempts of an organized nature, encouraged by police insubordination, will soon be made to commit burglaries upon stores having valuable property within them. He therefore suggests that the private watch around stores and warehouses should be strengthened; if possible, lights be kept burning inside, with openings in shutters so as to allow the watch to make inspection; and that porters or clerks be made keepers at night. Especially should all stores be carefully watched and visited through Sundays, and the roofs and cellars of houses adjoining to stores be examined.

Correction.

No. 41 ANN-STREET, NEW-YORK, Tuesday, May 19, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Please correct the statement made by your Washington correspondent in this day's TIMES, to the effect that Mr. T. F. MEAGHER is an applicant for the mission to Venezuela, now held by my brother-in-law, Mr. CHARLES EAMES, as such is not the case. Mr. MEAGHER is not an applicant for that mission.

Very respectfully, MALCOLM CAMPBELL.

Letter from Col. Benton—He Looks upon Slavery Agitation as an Evil.

From the Jefferson (Mo.) Inquirer.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, May 7, 1857.

MESSRS. PRICE AND LUSK.—Gentlemen: I found a letter from each of you waiting for me here on my arrival at this place, and as they are both to the same point I answer them together, to save myself some trouble. It was a poor and miserable perversion of my letter to Col. BRANT, to represent my reference to you as a reflection and censure upon you. The letter could bear no such meaning, and the reference to you was plainly a reference to friends whose sentiments agreed with my own, and to whom I had written as suitable persons to make known my sentiments to others; and this I am well assured you did. I was opposed to slavery agitation, and knew you both to be the same, and therefore the more suitable to communicate my sentiments. I might have rested on my known principles of forty years' standing, always opposed to agitation; but in the new conjuncture which had arisen I thought it best to place a new declaration of my old sentiments in the hands of some friends to be shown to others at Jefferson City, and that was the exact reason why I wrote to you. I saw the excuse and justification which was made for this emancipation movement, but that made no difference with me. I was against agitation as an evil in itself, and therefore against it without reference to its cause, or origin, or from whom it might come. I look upon a Slavery agitation as one of the greatest calamities which could befall the country, and, (besides its other evils,) as having a dangerous effect upon the slaves themselves; for it is incident to these agitations for one of the parties to charge the other with Abolitionism, and a design to abolish Slavery, and to represent the free States the same way; all of which is heard by the slaves, or comes to their knowledge; and they being ignorant and credulous, and not knowing that all this abolition talk is mere political lying, for the election, very naturally believe what they hear, and just as naturally conclude that they ought to be doing something for themselves when they have so many powerful friends at work for them. They believe it, and become restless and discontented, and go to plotting, either to escape or revolt. Those who make such charges do not do it to excite the slaves, but they do it so that the slaves hear and know it, and the effect is just the same as if their design was to excite insurrection. We have seen much mischief done in this way already, and if it is continued the most deplorable consequences must ensue. For its effect upon the slaves, themselves, then, as well as for its political and social evils, I am against agitation, and condemn it whenever it appears, without regard to its cause or origin.

Yours, truly and sincerely, THOMAS H. BENTON.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, May 19.

The Royal Mail steamship Niagara arrived here at 9¾ o'clock this morning. She sailed from Liverpool at 10 o'clock on the morning of Saturday the 9th inst—her dates are therefore three days later than those received by the Anglo-Saxon at Quebec and the Arago at New York.

The Niagara passed, May 12, Lat. 100, Long. 290, the steamship Edinburg, from New-York for Glasgow bound East.

The Canadian, screw-steamship from Portland, arrived at Liverpool at 10 o'clock on the morning of Friday, the 8th inst.

The Belgian screw-steamer Constitution arrived at Southampton on the morning of Tuesday the 7th inst.

The steamer City of Manchester sailed from Liverpool for New-York on the 6th inst.

Great Britain.

Parliament was opened on Thursday, the 7th inst.

The following is the Queen's Speech, read by commission:

Lords and Gentlemen:

We are commanded to inform you that Her Majesty has availed herself of the earliest opportunity of having recourse to your advice after the dissolution of the last Parliament. Her Majesty hopes that there will be found sufficient time during the present to enable you satisfactorily to deal with various important matters, some of which occupied the attention of Parliament in the beginning of this year. We are commanded by Her Majesty to inform you that the aspect of affairs in Europe affords a well-grounded confidence in the continuance of peace. All the main stipulations of the Treaty of Paris have been carried into execution, and it is to be hoped that what remains to be done in regard to those matters will be speedily accomplished.

The negotiations upon the subject of the differences which have arisen between the King of Prussia and the Swiss Confederation with regard to the affairs of Neufchatel, are drawing to a close, and will, Her Majesty trusts, be terminated by an arrangement satisfactory to all parties. The negotiations in which Her Majesty has been engaged with the Government of Honduras, in regard to the affairs of Central America, have not yet been brought to a close. Her Majesty commands us to express to you her regret that at the date of the latest advices from China the differences which have arisen between the High Commissioner at Canton and Her Majesty's civil and naval officers in China still remained unadjusted, but Her Majesty had sent to China a Plenipotentiary fully instructed to deal with all matters of difference, and that Plenipotentiary will be supported by an adequate military and naval force in the event of such assistance becoming necessary.

We are commanded by Her Majesty to inform you that a Treaty of Peace between Her Majesty and the Shah of Persia was signed at Paris on the 4th of March, by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, and the Ambassador of the Shah, and Her Majesty will give directions that this Treaty shall be laid before you as soon as the ratifications shall be exchanged. We are commanded to inform you that Her Majesty, in conjunction with several other European Powers, has concluded a Treaty with the King of Denmark, for the redemption of the Sound Dues. This Treaty, together with a separate Convention between Her Majesty and the King of Denmark, completing the arrangement, will be laid before you, and Her Majesty will cause the measures necessary for fulfilling the arrangements thereby contracted to be submitted for your consideration.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

Her Majesty has directed the estimates for the present year to be laid before you, and they have been prepared with a careful attention, and with a due regard to the efficiency of the departments of the public service to which they severally relate.

Lords and Gentlemen:

Her Majesty commands us to recommend to your earnest consideration the measures which will be proposed to you for the consolidation and improvement of the law. Bills will also be submitted to you for improving the laws relative to the testamentary and matrimonial jurisdiction now exercised by the Courts, and also for checking fraudulent breaches of trust. Her Majesty commands us to express to you her heartfelt gratification at witnessing the continued well-being and contentment of her people, and the progressive development of productive industry throughout her dominions. Her Majesty confidently commits to your wisdom and care the great interests of her Empire, and devoutly prays that the blessings of Almighty God may be vouchsafed to your deliberations, and may lead you to conclusions conducive to objects of Her Majesty's constant solicitude, and to the happiness and welfare of her loyal and faithful people.

The Marquis of TOWNSEND moved, and the Earl of PORTSMOUTH seconded, the address in the Lords.

Mr. DONSON moved, and Mr. BUCHANAN seconded it, in the Commons.

No opposition was made to it.

THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE IN PARIS.

Vive la Russie!—The Entree of the Russian Prince—Procession to the Tuileries—Reception at the Palace—Personnel of the Grand Duke—Programme of Festivities—The French Railroad Frauds—Rothschild on Carpentier—Miscellaneous.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

PARIS, Monday, May 4, 1857.

Two years ago in this same Paris the Cossacks were the worst persecuted of all races. The Anglo mania bloomed and flourished. The "ros-bif" and the "Goddam" disappeared from the stages of the theatres; we heard no more of British eccentricity, and the "dear allies across the Channel" were the most noble, the most magnanimous, the most charming of all people; and more remarkable still, spoke French with the least accent! After this last admission one might be prepared for any phenomenon of French admiration. But the Cossacks! On the stages they were beaten, kicked, dog-baited and caricatured. At the Galeté they played a piece one hundred and fifty nights in succession, to the admiration of the sober bourgeoisie of Paris, which had no other merit than the continual successes of the French in war, in duels, and in love, over the poor Cossacks. Every morning CHAM, the caricaturist of the Charivari, treated his readers to a SUWARROW eating candles, or for a change, GORTSCHAKOFF pitching head-foremost over the walls of Sebastopol with the boot of a Zouave in his rear. The toy merchants nearly made their fortunes on woodsn guns that bore the inscription "Cannons to take Sebastopol," or on mimic Sebastopols taken—past tense. When one went to a soirée the lion of the evening was invariably a man in black, with a white cravat and porcupine hair, who had discovered a means by which, if the Government would pay him a million, he would blow up Sebastopol in twenty minutes. I shall never forget the fulminating articles of M. GRANIER DE CASSAGNAC in the Constitutionnel, against the obstinate descendants of PETER the Great!

But how all that is changed! We have just heard these same Parisians shout "Vive le Grand-Duc Constantin!" to the grandson of the great Muscovite CATHARINE. ALEXANDER, camped with his Cossacks in the Champs Elysées, is forgotten; exiled and fettered Poland is banished from memory as it is from existence; ROSTOPCHIN, who obstinately hurnt Moscow, is forgiven; the inspired poetry of ADAM MICKIEWICZ against the great BONAPARTE is no longer called to mind. The women have withdrawn from their wardrobes their furs of sable; COMPIL has brought out from the oxils of his drawers "PETES the Great Vanquishing the Stréltz;" when the Prince YOUSSOUPOFF passes near the aforesaid GRANIER DE CASSAGNAC, the latter makes a profound reverence; the three Siberian bears of the Garden of Plants are nearly dead with gluttony, the work of enthusiastic Young France and dry waffles and gingerbread; at the restaurant everybody cries at the dessert "Garçon, à Charlotte Russe!" the Hippodrome has brought out a grand spectacle piece—"Mazeppa, or the Revolted of the Ukraine;" if CHAM should now attempt to pass off his eternal Russian as eating a candle, he would be hurnt at the stake; in fine, the heavens have joined in the conspiracy, and since the arrival of CONSTANTINE there has been a fearful fall in the temperature.

After all, there is no grandor spectacle for this age of civilization and progress than to see the vanquishers and the vanquished surround each other with a reciprocal esteem. It is only these sudden changes of national sentiment on a grand scale that strike us; and since hatred of Russia was never at the bottom of the demonstrations I have passed in review; since the cause of these demonstrations was but temporary and was soon to cease, the sudden reverse, perhaps, is not after all so irrational or illogical.

As I have already stated, very considerable preparations were made for the reception of the Russian Prince; but there was room left for a marked distinction between this reception and that given to the Queen of England, or even that to the King of Sardinia. The Duke's was more a succes de curiosité than a success of official éclat. The Railroad dépôt was sumptuously decorated with flowers, flags, Government officials and handsome women. All the Russian ladies in Paris, and the number is not small were admitted to the station, to greet their Prince on his arrival. The beauty of these Northern blondes and the richness of their toilettes formed one of the most agreeable surprises of the Duke's reception at Paris.

He found awaiting his arrival at the station the Prince Napoleon, Count Creptowitch, Russian Ambassador at London; Marshal Magnan, M. Haussemann, Prefect of the Seine; M. Pietri, Prefect of Police; Baron Seebach, Minister of Wurtemberg, son-in-law of Count Nesselrode; Baron Rothschild, the Russian Generals Yomini and Mansouroff, Col. Levachoff, Aide-de-Camp of the Grand Duke Michel; the Prince Toistoi, the distinguished Russian General Luders Count Golovine, Admirals Glasenap and Bereas, and other Russians of distinction.

A battalion of the Guard was drawn up in the court of the station to receive the Prince and conduct him to the Tuileries. Five carriages of the palace were in waiting to convey the party. CONSTANTINE mounted into the first one with the Prince NAPOLEON. The others were occupied by the persons already named, and by Count KISSELEFF, Russian Ambassador at Paris and a Chamberlain of the Palace, the Marquis of BEAUMONT, and two other officers of the crown, sent to Marseilles to welcome the Duke to France, and attached to his person during his visit. Gen. TODLEBEN stopped behind at Marseilles, and only arrived in Paris last night.

The Prince arrived at the Lyons station, beyond the Bastille, and thus in order to reach the Tuileries, had to pass five miles of the finest of our Boulevards. Along this route there were no double lines of soldiers as for the Queen of England, nor flags, nor triumphal arches, put up by the State; but the people on the route made a respectable display of flags notwithstanding, with this difference, that where they waved the cross of St. George and the tri-color, we now saw the double-headed eagle of Russia and the tri-color.

Along the whole line of procession dense masses of people were stationed on both pavements, the central roadway being kept clear by the mounted municipal guard in movement. The Duke was not received with enthusiasm, as the Russian and German journals will tell you. He was received with respect, with sympathy, if you please, but especially with curiosity. The people took off their hats, and here and there shouted "Vive le Grand-Duc!" but it was not general. They were too anxious, perhaps, to see their great enemy of yesterday to think of anything else. Then again the Prince NAPOLEON was at his side, and people never cheer where that gentleman is, for fear he might mistake their motives and take some of it to himself. It was remarked too by every one that there was an apparent coolness between the two Princes—that is to say politeness, not cordiality—a state of feeling which is known actually to exist.

Arrived at the Tuileries, the cortége was directed towards the centre of the Place Carrousel, in order to astonish the Duke with the grandeur of the new Louvre and Tuileries combined—a little piece of theatrical detail which may be excused in view of the real beauty of this now immense pile of buildings. As the cortége passed under the arch in front of the court of the Palace, it was received by a double file of gendarmerie of the Imperial guard, formed from the arch of the grand entrance of the Palace. At the bottom of the stairway the Duke was met by the Grand Chamberlain, the Duke DE BASSANO, and by the Grand Master of Ceremonies, the Duke DE CAMBACERES. At the top of the stairway he was met by the Emperor, who, after giving him a warm reception, conducted him at once to the apartments of the Empress, who was awaiting his arrival, surrounded by the official persons of her house.

The greeting of Her Majesty was most cordial. In turn, that of the Duke was not less so, who, to the to the astonishment of every one, gave Her Majesty a sonorous and altogether maritime kiss on the hand—a demonstration which made a sensation in the assembly, where they were not accustomed to see such violations of the rigorous etiquette of the Court. But the Prince is younger than the Empress, and is besides an Admiral—so he was excusable for the brusque cordiality of his greeting. The Prince had the tact to immediately demand to see the young Prince Imperial, a mark of sympathy that touched the mother's heart—as well in a palace as in a cottage—and an hour was named at which he could see the young NAPOLEON. He afterwards dined with their Majesties, and by his open, lively, and at times, blunt manners, made a highly favorable impression.

The Prince was dressed in the uniform of a Grand Admiral: green dress-coat, epaulettes, the high Russian plume of white feathers, and over his breast the cordon of the Order of St. Andrew. The Duke is 30 years of age, thin, rather tall than short, blond, with light moustaches and whiskers, and has an air that pleases at first sight. He resembles much more the Anglo-Saxon than the Slavonic race. His movements are lively, his manners noble, dégagées and cordial. It is impossible to see in him the candle-eating Muscovite of the imagination.

The itinerary of the Prince's fortnight at Paris, as published by the Russian journal at Brussels, may amuse you, and is as follows:

First day.—Thursday, April 30, arrived at Paris; dinner at the Tuileries; repose.

Second day.—Visit to Notre Dame, to the Sainte Chapelle, Pantheon, Hotel Cluny; dinner at the Tuileries; Marco Spada at the Grand Opera. (This last was countermanded on account of the death of the Duchess of GLOUCESTER, which forced the Court to go into mourning for four days.) The Duke went alone to a small theatre.

Third day.—Visit to the Louvre; promenade on the Boulevards; the Artesian Well of Grenelle; dinner at Count KISSELEFF's with the Marshals of France; ball at the Ministry of Marine.

Fourth day, Sunday.—Visit to the Observatory; the Luxemburg; the Polytechnic School; the Garden of Plants; the hospital Hotel Dieu; at 2 o'clock horse races at the new race ground at Longchamps with their Majesties; grand dinner in uniform at the Palace.

Fifth Day.—Visit to the Ministry of Marine; Sevres; dinner at the Palace.

Sixth Day.—Vincennes; dinner at Russian Embassy; theatre.

Seventh Day.—Barracks Napoleon; Museum of Arts and Trades; Grand Review; dinner at his own apartments; Grand Fête at the Hotel de Ville.

Eighth Day.—Races with their Majesties; the Gobelins; Grand Dinner at the Palace, in dress coat.

Ninth Day.—Hotel des Invalides; dinner at home; Grand Ball at the Tuileries.

Tenth Day.—In the morning, promenade at Versailles; breakfast at the Trianon with their Majesties; Review of the Cavalry on the Plain of Satory, at 2 o'clock; dinner at home; theatre.

Eleventh Day.—Go to Fontainbleau; repose.

Twelfth Day.—Promenade in the forest and environs; Ball at the Palace.

Thirteenth Day.—Grand Hunt in the forest; torch-light curée: representation by the actors of the Theatre Française.

Fourteenth Day.—The Prince will return to Paris, leaving the Count at Fontainebleau.

Fifteenth Day.—Departure.

At his visit at Notre Dame the Grand Duke, not being a Catholic, was not officially received by the clergy, as is usual for Catholic princes. Neither were the clergy to be seen on the occasion of the visit of Queen Victoria.

The London Times, copying from the Independance Belge, has put in the mouth of the Prince a word which his friends declare he never pronounced. At Toulon, the Independance says, the Prince, on seeing a collection of new gun-boats, demanded what were their destination. He was answered that they were intended to aid in the war against China. The Prince should have exclaimed, "Is it to be always the destiny of the French to pull the chestnuts out of the fire?" Whether CONSTANTINE said it or not, the word is a good one and will live.

At the ball at the Ministry of Marine, the Grand Duke was accompanied by the Princess MATHILDE. At this ball the Duke seated himself by the side of Marshal PELISSIER, and remained in conversation with the conqueror of Sebastopol nearly an hour.

A grand excitement reigned in financial circles last week in anticipation of the day of the first meeting of the stockholders of the Northern Railroad Company, since the flight of CARPENTIER, GRELET & Co. A stormy meeting was anticipated, and additional interest was given to the event by the report that CARPENTIER, who was known to have left the Eldridge street jail, was to be present and give an account of his pilgrimage to the New World, with his impressions of American justice and of Mr. BUSTEED in particular.

The meeting was very large, and M. ROTHSCHILD presided. He was unwell, having got out of bed expressly for this meeting. M. DELEBECQUE, one of the administrators of the Company, was authorized to present the report. He commenced by an explanation of the affair of CARPENTIER, GRELET and Co. He said that the direction had thought at first of calling a meeting as soon as the event was known; but they were of opinion that it was better to renounce the meeting in order not to embarrass the course of justice. The Company is still held in a certain reserve by this cause. The culprits in America, arrested; their extradition has been demanded by the French Government; but notwithstanding the steps taken by the direction of the Company it has not yet been accorded. The direction wait, however, with confidence the decision of American law.

M. DELABECQUE then went into an explanation relative to the substraction. There existed, he said, at the office of the Northern Railroad Company since 1849, the same as at other offices, a special safe for deposits and certificates of shares; this safe is closed with three keys, confided one each to the cashier, to the depositor of the funds, and to the administrators. Every measure of prudence prescribed by the rules for the safe keeping of the deposits, were regularly executed with the greatest exactitude. [Murmurs.]

The Company had for Cashier, from the origin of its formation, an honest and estimable man, worthy in every respect of the confidence of the Company. In May, 1856, he died, after having specially recommended to the direction GRELET and CARPENTIER, who were known by the direction for their aptitude, their intelligence and their assiduity. [Murmurs.]

These honorable proofs sufficed to determine the direction to give to CARPENTIER, then under-cashier, the place of cashier, and to GRELET, charged with the deposit of shares, that of under-cashier.

The first of September, 1856, we learned the disappearance of CARPENTIER and his accomplices. On examination, it was found that there was no cash deficit; but we soon discovered that there had been an important substraction of shares. The exact figure of this substraction is 1,752 shares and 5,000 obligations. [Murmurs.]

The house of ROTHSCHILD, continued the reporter, will have to suffer the greatest part of this loss. The direction have appreciated, and the assembly will appreciate in its turn, the sentiment of equity which has induced the President of the Company to decide in advance against his own house a question which might have been debated. [Applause.]

In the number of shares and obligations taken, the Baron ROTHSCHILD possesses in his own name 5,671, and he has remitted this important sum to the possession of the company. The house of ROTHSCHILD, therefore, takes to its own charge about 5-6 of the loss. The reporter recommended the division of the other sixth on divers exercises, and first to carry a sum of 150,000 francs to the account of the exploitation.

A stockholder proposed a vote of thanks to M. ROTHSCHILD, which was warmly seconded. The President then rose, and in a speech full of frankness and sincerity, repeated to the assembly that in the incorrectitude of his rights, he had preferred taking counsel of his duty and his conscience, and assume the loss which fell upon his house. As for the balance, he had proposed, as President of the Council of administration, that it should be divided by annuities of 100,000 francs on the divers exercises, an insignificant sum relatively to a capital of 800 millions.

The distinguished author, ALFRED DE MUSSET, member of the Académie Française, died after a short illness, on Friday last, at the age of 46 years. His funeral was attended to-day, from the Church of St. Roch, by all the literary men of distinction of the city. He was one of the youngest members of the Academy.

The Emperor has had constructed, on the side of the Bois de Boulogne next St. Cloud, the finest, most complete, and by far the most picturesque race-course in the world. The Emperor's, the Weighing, the Jockey Club's Stands, and the Tribunes for the public, are constructed with great taste and with a view to permanence. The number of persons on the ground on yesterday (Sunday) was estimated at 150,000! The Emperor, the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, the Prince of NASSAU, and Count KISSELEFF, descended together from the Tribunes, and mingled in the crowd in the weighing inclosure.

Compliments to Senator Sumner in Paris.

INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE.

Senator SUMNER has been tendered a public dinner by the American merchants residing at Paris, in the following complimentary terms:

PARIS, Tuesday, April 28, 1857.

DEAR SIR: The American merchants residing in Paris, desirous of expressing their high regard and admiration for your noble independence and distinguished services as a Senator of the United States, respectfully invite you to meet them at a public dinner to be given at such a time during your sojourn in Paris as may be most convenient to yourself.

Though well aware that you are habitually accustomed to decline all similar requests, we earnestly hope you will yield to our wishes.

As citizens of the great Republic, representing many States, and all actively engaged in commercial life, we tender you this tribute as an evidence of our appreciation of your elevated patriotism, unbending integrity and spotless honor.

With the highest esteem, we have the honor to be your friends and fellow-citizens,

JOHN MUNROE,	C. L. SHARPSTEEN,
B. G. WAINWRIGHT,	HENRY WOODS,
ELLIOT C. COWDIN,	W. ENDICOTT, JR.,
SAMUEL P. HOLMES,	JOHN C. MARTIN,
A. P MONTAST,	WALTER H. LEWIS,
THOMAS N DALE,	GEORGE L TODD,
G. F. T. REED,	DAVID LANE,
JAMES W. TUCKER,	V. MUMFORD MOORE,
GEORGE T. RICHARDS,	J. H. DEMING,
A. K. P COOPER,	JOS. D. B CURTIS,
GEORGE MILNE,	A. B. STRANGE,

To this invitation Mr. SUMNER has returned the following graceful and eloquent reply:

HOTEL DE LA PAIX, RUE DE LA PAIX,
THURSDAY, April 30, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I have been honored by your communication of the 28th April, in which, after referring to my services as a Senator of the United States, in language which is generous beyond the ordinary experience of political life, you are pleased to invite me, in the name of the American merchants residing at Paris, to a public dinner at such time as may be most convenient to myself.

The voice of hospitality is pleasant in a strange land. But the hospitality which you offer me is enhanced by the character and number of those who unite in it, among whom I recognize well-known names, which are intimately associated with the commerce of my country in one of its most important outposts.

But there is one aspect in which your invitation is especially grateful. It is this: if I have been able to do anything not unworthy of your approbation, it is because I have never failed, whether in majorities or minorities, against all obloquy, and at every hazard, to uphold those principles of liberty which, just in proportion as they prevail under our Constitution, make us an example to the nations. And since my public course cannot be unknown to you, I am permitted to infer that the public testimony with which you now honor me is offered in some measure to those principles—dearer to me than any personal distinction—with which I am proud to know that my name is associated.

The invitation you send me, coming from such a source, couched in terms so flattering, and possessing such an import, presents a temptation difficult to resist. But I am admonished by the state of health, which is yet far from its natural vigor, that I must not listen to it except to express my gratitude. In making this excuse, let me fortify myself by the confession that I left home mainly to withdraw from the excitements of public life, and particularly from all public speaking, in the assurance that by such withdrawal, accompanied by that relaxation which is found in a change of pursuit, my convalescence would be completed. The good physician under whose advice I have acted, would not admit that by crossing the sea I had been able at once to alter all the conditions under which his advice was given.

But I cannot turn coldly from the opportunity you offer me. My heart overflows with best wishes for yourselves individually and also for the commerce which you conduct, mingled with aspirations that your influence may always add to the welfare and just renown of our country. As American merchants at Paris, you are representatives of the United States on a foreign mission, without diplomatic salary or diplomatic privilege. But it belongs to the felicity of your position that what you do well for yourselves will be well for your country, and, more than any diplomacy, will contribute to strengthen the friendly ties of two powerful nations. Pardon the allusion, when I add that you are the daily industrious workmen in that mighty loom whose frame stands on the coasts of opposite continents: whose threads are Atlantic voyages; whose colors are the various enterprises and activities of a henchcant commerce; and whose well wrought product is a radiant, speaking tissue—more beautiful to the mind's eye than any fabric of rarest French skill, more marvelous than any tapestry woven for kings—where every color mingles with every thread in complet est harmony and on the grandest scale to display the triumphs and the blessings of Peace.

Accept the assurance of the sincere regard with which I have the honor to be, gentlemen, your faithful servant and fellow-citizen,

CHARLES SUMNER.

To JOHN MUNROE, B. G. WAINWRIGHT, ELLIOT C. COWDIN, Esquires, and others, American merchants at Paris.

The Position of France in the War Against China.

From the Assemblée National.

In the actual condition of our Indian possessions and of our navy, our commerce cannot hope to share the advantages and profits derived by the English in their relations with China. The greatest interest, in fact, the only one we have in China at this moment, is the protection given over the whole world by France to Catholic missions. We are far from being indifferent to this interest, but can it be promoted in an efficient manner by being bound up with contrary and, in some respects, incompatible interests? The sole result we obtained from the treaty signed at Whampoa on the 24th October, 1844, in the name of the French Government, was to assure to Catholic missionaries a little more liberty and a greater amount of protection. This treaty has not borne all its fruits; it has not prevented the massacre of one of these apostles of our faith, M. CHAPDELAINE, in the province of Canton, with the approval of the judicial authorities. This crime has never been expiated; but is it necessary, in order to obtain respect for our countrymen and our missionaries, to identify that noble and holy cause with that of opium and of England? We will consent to admit that the success of the great enterprise in which our neighbors are engaged, is certain; let us therefore at once look to the result. Former treaties will become obsolete; new conventions will open to European commerce a greater number of ports, and will even authorize it to penetrate by rivers and canals into the interior of the empire; new guarantees will stipulate the creation for the protection of strangers of direct relations between the Court of Pekin and the Government of the Queen. England cannot demand more. Without knowing the measure of her pretensions, we do not think she will ask for less, while she certainly will not ask for more. Let us suppose that either by the skill of Lord ELGIN, by the fear of a new war, or even by the force of arms, England were to obtain an advantageous treaty with China, should we not profit by it as we profited by that of 1842? Precedents, the principle of commercial and religious liberty professed by the English Government, prohibit it from demanding any exclusive convention to its sole advantage. It is, moreover, aware that such a policy would unite against it all the powers who have interests in these waters, and some of these powers it fears. We may, therefore, consider it certain that, without entering into a concert which may draw us further than we imagine, without engaging in enterprises which would prove as costly as those of the Crimea, we shall derive profit for our commerce, for the protection of our countrymen; in fact, we shall gain all that England gains. It will only cost us an Embassy and negotiations, which will be facilitated by our pacific attitude. But does it become a nation like France to await the course of events and to profit by them without having taken a part in their realization? Is this a policy worthy of our power and of our rank in the world? We believe that it is easy to prove that the policy of abstention is precisely that which corresponds with our dignity, our honor, and our interests.

Mr. Cobden on His Defeat.

Mr. ALEXANDER LAING, manufacturer, Hawick, has received the following letter from Mr. COBDEN, in acknowledgment of resolutions passed at a public meeting in that town, sympathizing with Messrs. COBDEN, BRIGHT and GIBSON, on their recent defeat at Huddersfield and Manchester:

MIDHURST, Thursday, April 30.

SIR: I have had the honor of receiving your letter, inclosing resolutions passed at a public meeting in Hawick, declaring its attachment to those general views which, in conjunction with my friends Messrs. BRIGHT and GIBSON, I have advocated, and expressing its regret at the result of the Manchester and Huddersfield elections. Pray do me the favor to assure your kind neighbors that I appreciate with grateful warmth this generous mark of their approbation. To be cheered with the sympathy of one's countrymen in moments of discouragement or defeat, is the most gratifying reward and the most useful support that can be rendered to a public man.

It is, however, but just to all parties to add that far more has been implied than any accidental defeat at Huddersfield can be fairly attributed to it. I had no connection with or election in that borough, and no acquaintance with its inhabitants beyond that which I formed in almost every considerable place in the kingdom in the course of the free-trade struggle; and Mr. ARMOYD, the elected member, is as sound a free-trader as myself. The invitation to become a candidate, which emanated from a public meeting, did not reach me till after my opponent, who occupied an influential local position, was a ready in the midst of a canvass from door to door throughout the borough, —an ordeal which I at once declared I could not go through for all the seats in Parliament—and his success was insured against all possible opposition, no matter from what quarter it might have come. In fact, my entrance upon the contest at the time was simply and solely a mistake; but owing to the circumstances under which it was fallen into it involved no blame or serious responsibility to any one. I should not presume to think these particulars worthy of being mentioned but for the impression which I see prevails that I deem myself aggrieved at the result of the contest, and regard it as a deliberate judgment of a popular constituency on my political principles. The electors of Huddersfield were not regularly or fairly empannelled as a jury to try me, and their verdict could not, therefore, involve either credit or discredit to me or themselves.

To complete, since I have commenced this little narrative, let me add that the real cause of my finding myself at this moment out of the House, is to be traced as far back as 1841, when, owing to the overzealous kindness of my friends, I was, while 1,000 miles distant from England, returned for both the West Riding and Stockport. On my return home, at the urgent request of those friends, I reluctantly dissolved my connection with the borough, and elected to sit for the Riding. I should have been but a cold-blooded politician if I had acted otherwise. But I had a full foresight of the consequences, for I was the first to declare that it would be impossible, after the free trade question was settled, that the largest county constituency in the kingdom should continue to be represented by one wholly unconnected with it by birth, property or residence. I accepted its representation ad hoc, as the diplomatist would say, knowing that in withdrawing myself from the safe anchorage of Stockport I was endangering my return at some future election by casting myself adrift upon the storms and breakers of the political ocean. The result has only verified my predictions. But let it not be supposed that I am so unreasonable as to feel aggrieved by the result. I should be about the last man living to be justified in giving way to such a feeling. I have had more than my share of the honors of political warfare, and why should I expect to escape its reverses?

For personal reasons it is convenient to me at present to be relieved from the duties of Parliament. I must confess, however, at the same time, that there never was a moment when, on public grounds, I would have more gladly taken my seat in the House of Commons. Again thanking you and those whom you represent for your friendly manifestations of feeling.

I remain, Sir, yours faithfully,

RICHARD COBDEN.

Speech of Hon. L. M. Keitt—The Palmetto Regiment in Mexico.

The City Council of Columbia, S. C., entertained the remnant of the Palmetto Regiment at a public supper on the 14th last. The Mayor of the City presided. Among the toasts was one in favor of LAWRENCE M. KEITT, M. C., to which the following response was made. Mr. KEITT spoke warmly of his friend and colleague, the late PRESTON S. BROOKS. The South Carolinian says:

"In a very modest way he professed to be embarrassed at having to speak, after such eloquence as he had heard, and endeavored to excuse himself, and in the language of WEBSTER, asked 'Where am I to go?' but he found the effort at excuse 'no go,' and he shook his wings and plumed himself for one of those lofty excursions into the regions of historical incident, effective anecdotes, and social stories, which he peculiarly excels in, and in which it is a pleasure to accompany him. He paid a graceful tribute to his college friend, the orator of the day, whom he ventured to say was his classmate—guarded with the statement, however, that the General was a much older man. This he considered important in view of his present position in society—being yet a bachelor. He said his Excellency complained that in his tour of service he found making speeches his hardest duty; he (Mr. KEITT) thought the State must have changed since he attended with the Staff, in Governor MEANS' day, when the Champagne duties were the most difficult to discharge.

Mr. KEITT said it was out of his line to make a set speech, but with the permission of the company he would ramble along, and give an incident or two which he had derived from General QUITMAN and others, in relation to the Palmetto Regiment—a few of which we report.

General QUITMAN told him that when a portion of his brigade was ordered into battle, Col. BUTLER was refused to be allowed to go, because the Palmettos were actually broken down by fatigue and privation, and he was too feeble for duty. He detailed the New-York Regiment and another, and ordered them forward. Col. PIERCE BUTLER demanded "a place in the picture." "No, Sir, your place is in the hospital." "Sir!" said he, elevating his noble figure, with fire flashing from his eagle eye. "Never, Sir, while the enemy is in sight, and our flag moving onward!" He could not resist him—his demand was acceded to, and the regiment took its "place in the picture," a brilliant light in the canvas. Gen QUITMAN told him, too, that the flag of the Palmetto regiment was the first that waved over the City of Mexico. "Sir, I was with that regiment at the gates of the city, and when I called for a flag to plant upon that gate, the Palmetto flag was the only one there, and that was the flag that first spread its folds in triumph over the Capitol of Mexico."

Mr. KEITT mentioned this glorious testimony to the brave Palmetto boys, because an effort had been made to suppress them and falsify this truthful history.

Another incident he could not omit, in his desultory ramble. While others had spoken of gallant commanders who had fallen in the post of honor, there were others and many subordinates and privates, to whom he could award a passing tribute, did time allow, but he would only allude to one—who had been there, but had fallen in another field battling for the Palmetto State. He alluded to the noble BROOKS—his poor friend BROOKS—his colleague—his companion—his room-mate. He spoke of his nobleness, his gentleness, his magnanimity, and related many beautiful incidents in illustration of his character. He could not trust himself to speak more of him, but his object was now to mention an incident he derived from him, relative to his younger brother who fell at Churubusco.

Poor PRESTON BROOKS had designed and was having executed to wear a signet ring, in memory of his noble-spirited brother, when he himself was taken from the scene of all his earthly honors and labors.

When another regiment fled, and all the horrors and scourges of war were pouring down upon the gallant Palmettos, bathed in the blood of their comrades—when SHIELDS said "Who will follow me?" and BUTLER said "We will!"—BROOKS, yes, the stripling BROOKS, cried out, "Yes, all will follow you to the death!"—and he did. The same ball which pierced his body shivered his musket—and a shivered musket was to adorn the signet, with the motto entis mertes. When this brother left home, BROOKS told him, his father said to his old body servant, "Go with him, and take care of him—I confide my son to you." How did the good old negro act? when the baptism of blood was going on—when perils were lingering around—when the last ignition of stratagem was everywhere—with none to watch the wounded boy but this old servant, he was at his labor of love, taking care of his charge. Crushed bones worked out from the wound—he gathered them up and preserved them. The noble spirit passed out, and the corpse alone was left. What did the old and faithful slave? The regiment gave him a mule and cart—the soldiers helped him to make a rude coffin. With his own hands he placed the earthly remains of his beloved young master in this hearse—he conveyed it to Mexico—he carried it to Vera Cruz—he bore it on shipboard and by railroad, to his old master's home, and delivered the body and the bones of her child to his widowed and bereaved mother, at the limit of his birth place. This is literally true. In classic story—in legendary annals—in ancient or modern time—where is the equal of this touching story?

Mr. KEITT discoursed much eloquence in allusion to the noble deeds and daring of the Palmetto Regiment, and asked, What was it that made each one a hero? It was the memory of Fort Moultrie, of Eutaw, of King's Mountain and the glorious days of Seventy-Six. In the hour of danger and in the crisis of battle the voice of those fields was shouting to them, that they were the trustees of the honor, the pride and gallantry, and heroism of South Carolina—and bravely did they redeem this sacred obligation. It is due to the men who were in this campaign that its history should be written. When the State gathered around the hier of her slaughtered chieftains, she pledged herself that this gallant band should be taken care of—and that its deeds should be recorded in history. Courage and patriotism must have exemplars in every age, or they will diminish. The Palmettos have acted, and made history—the State should record it.

Southern Sentiment on the Kansas Question.

From the Charleston Mercury.

It is a source of extreme regret to notice the cold indifference manifested by the Southern people in regard to Kansas. The reflection is only made the more painful by the striking contrast our present inaction offers to our past efforts in that quarter. One year ago, when the supplication for aid came to our ears, we promptly and eagerly contributed our donation of men and money to secure her to the South. No sacrifice then appeared too great, provided it accomplished our end. But now how striking and painful the contrast! In a few weeks, at most, will be determined whether or not Kansas will be secured to the South; and we, in the meantime, stand supinely gazing on the issue, with scarce an effort to promote our own cause. Appeals have been made, citing her importance to the slaveholding States; yet these appeals, in some parts of the South, have fallen still-born upon the community. The lofty zeal which was not one time manifested in regard to Kansas, seems to have waned into cool indifference.

It is useless, at this late day, to point out the importance of Kansas as a Slaveholding State, to the South. A simple reference to a map of the United States will be sufficient to convince any one that her geographical position is to us one of the most vital importance. Once establish Slavery in her borders, and an effectual barrier is opposed to Abolitionism West of the Mississippi. The immense area of waste lands lying to the South and Southwest, when once settled and protected by a slave power, dividing it from the Free States, must necessarily become slaveholding. Missouri, which is even now tottering against the fierce attacks of Abolitionism, will have another stronghold upon which she may rely for support against her persecuting enemies. New-Mexico, judging from the signs of the times, and recent developments in that quarter, will become slaveholding, should Slavery be established in Kansas; and it is an undeniable fact, that Abolitionism can never pass through a Slave State, and determine the principles of one further South.

The reverse bearing of this picture is shadowed with gloomy forebodings to the South and the Union. Once let Abolitionism set its fatal seal upon Kansas, and the Union itself will be abolitionized. Slavery, cramped in the bounded limits which will then be assigned it, will continue to grow gradually weaker in power and reduced in its scope, until it will at length have obtained a feeble and sickly existence, which, we dare assert, will be the prelude to its total extinction.

The period is fast approaching which will determine whether or not Kansas will go into the Union with a Constitution favorable to Slavery. Her importance to the South makes it imperative on us to do all that a proud and high-minded people can do to secure her for ourselves. It is not yet too late to compete for the prize. Our efforts, if well timed and properly directed, will yet be of avail in the final struggle which is to determine Freedom or Slavery—anarchy, or "the Constitution as our fathers gave it." Let us, then, be up and doing, and if we cannot make her a Slave State, make her at least Democratic.

CASA MATA.

The Danger and Position of the South.

From the New Orleans Delta.

The hour is assuredly approaching—nay, we believe it already at hand—when the South must break, by one vigorous effort, the spell which has so long bound her,—must abruptly turn away from the national charmer, "charm he no'er so wisely," or die in her infatuation, like the fool, who, though braved in a mortar will not relinquish his folly. The political status quo may have suffered once, as a temporary policy, for one, two or a dozen years; but in the present complexion of affairs, the preservation of the status quo, and that only, as the policy of the South, means death, more or less fast or slow, but ultimate and inevitable.

Kansas is lost, doubtless, to the South: but the political status quo was not disturbed, and non-intervention was the order of the day. Black Republicanism has one foot firmly planted in St. Louis, and in the centre of Missouri the other in no long time may be resting; yet, as regards Missouri, the political status quo is also intact, and non-intervention is the doctrine of the faithful National Democracy of that State. Virginia is in danger of being Thayerized: Slavery is undergoing an alarming drain from that State; slave-capital, timid as all capital, manifests symptoms of panic in all the border States, and thus helps to hasten the work of depletion which, if not arrested, must finally yield them up to the peaceful occupation of our enemies; and, nevertheless, Virginia, the border States in general, and the whole South, have had the full benefit of the political status quo, and enjoyed the triumph of non intervention.

The fact is, the South must shortly rouse from her somnolence; she must be stimulated from the coma which the soporizing nostrums of political quacks and incapables have brought upon her; she must take her own case in hand, and that right resolutely and vigorously, or she will soon be past help and past praying for.

The New Tariff Act.

Below will be found a circular letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, embodying the additional general regulations made necessary by the new Tariff Act.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 15, 1857.

In performance of the duty imposed by law on this department, of superintending the collection of the public revenue, the attention of collectors and other officers of the customs is called to the provisions of the several acts of Congress levying duties on imports, which will be in force on and after the first day of July next.

The tariff act of 30th July, 1846, having been modified by the act of the 3d of March, 1857, "reducing the duties on imports, and for other purposes," the provisions of the last-mentioned act are hereto subjoined, to which is added a tariff of duties as amended, arranged in schedules, under the provisions of the act of the 3d March, 1857, applied to the act of 30th July, 1846; and, for more convenient reference, there is also subjoined a comprehensive list, alphabetically arranged, of all the designated articles expressly made liable to duty, or exempted therefrom, with their respective schedules and rates of duty, when dutiable, indicated thereon.

As the change in the law regulating the rates of duty by the act of the 3d of March last disturbs but to a slight extent the classification of imports made by the tariff act of the 30th of July, 1846, and is confined principally to a change in the rates of duty, the construction heretofore given by this Department to that act is still in force, and applicable, except where that law has been modified by the act of 3d of March last. Collectors of the Customs will find the decisions of the Department, in various cases presented under the act of 1846, imbodied in general regulations issued by the Department on the 1st of February last.

It will be borne in mind that the provisions of the 20 section of the tariff act of the 30th of August, 1842, a copy of which is subjoined, are still in force, and furnish a rule of construction to be applied to articles not specially designated in the several schedules of the act of 3d of March, 1857. These provisions, properly applied, will aid the officers of the customs in assigning articles of import, not designated in terms in the tariff, to the schedule to which they are to be regarded as belonging, in reference to their liability to duty.

All other unenumerated articles, not so susceptible of classification, will be liable to the duty of fifteen per centum, as prescribed in the first section of the act of 3d March, 1857.

By the fourth section of the said act it is provided that all goods, wares and merchandise which shall be in the public stores on the first day of July next, shall be subject, on entry thereof for consumption, to no other duty than if the same had been imported, respectively, after that day. Merchandise, therefore, in public store on the first day of July next, or in bond under the warehousing laws, whether deposited in any warehouse authorized by law or passing in transitu, under bond, from one part of the United States to another, will, irrespective of the date of their original importation or bonding, be subject, on withdrawal for consumption, to the rates of duty prescribed by the act of 3d March, 1857.

It has been represented to the department that, under the designation of "galvanized tin plates or sheets," there have been attempts to introduce sheet iron, covered with a thin coating of tin, the purpose being to pass the iron through the Custom-House at a lower rate of duty as a galvanized tin. The attention of collectors and appraisers is specially directed to this subject, and they will, on the entry of all articles purporting to be tin plates or sheets, galvanized or not, carefully inspect the articles, and admit nothing as tin plates or sheets that were not clearly known as such in commercial parlance at the passage of the tariff act of 1846. Where plates or sheets of iron or other metal are attempted to be introduced in evasion of the law, under a false designation, the proper proceedings will at once be instituted to enforce the forfeitures and penalties provided by law; and in all cases where no fraudulent attempt is manifested the duty to which the articles, according to their true character, are liable under existing laws, must be levied and collected.

A question has recently been presented to the Department in regard to the exemption from duty of certain articles claimed to be "paintings," and as such falling within schedule I of the tariff. It is decided by the Department that the "painting" referred to in that schedule, as entitled to free entry, must be an object of taste recognized as a painting in the usual acceptation of the term; and that paintings on glass specially provided for in schedule C, on porcelains, alabaster, china, marble, plaster or similar materials; on plates, globlets, vases, or any other utensil; or paintings capable of being converted into breastpins, cardrops, or other ornaments to be worn on the person, are not entitled to free entry under the law.

In schedule I, it will be seen, there is a provision for the admission free of duty of sheeps' wool, unmanufactured, of the value of twenty cents per pound or less at the port of exportation. The question has been submitted, whether, in estimating the value in such cases at the port of exportation, the expenses of packing, commissions, and other charges, incident to the shipment of articles for exportation, are to be included?

The value referred to in this provision of the law is the current market value or price at which the article in question could be generally

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Fifty years ago, when New-York had not a tenth of its present population, nor a hundredth part of its wealth or means of intellectual recreation, a satirical periodical was published here, which happens to be the only successful undertaking of the kind that has been attempted on this side of the Atlantic. It would be a melancholy task to make a catalogue, if we were able to do it, of all the failures that have occurred in New-York, in the attempt to establish a satirical and humorous periodical. They have been very numerous, and many of them were very costly. But, for some reasons or other, with our growth and prosperity we have lost our fertility of humor. It is not the case in England. In the days of Queen ANNE they had the Spectator, and the Tatler, and now, in the reign of Queen VICTORIA, they have Punch, which constantly overflows with wit and humorous satire, like a perpetual fountain. Strange as the assertion may sound, it is, nevertheless, unquestionably true, that we are more provincial and dependent upon England for our literature now than we were fifty years ago, when Salmagundi, the work to which we have alluded first appeared. The first number of this periodical was published on the 24th of January 1807; its principal writers were WASHINGTON IRVING and JAMES K. PAULDING, both of whom are still alive, hearty, and capable of doing a good deal of literary work. Perhaps if Salmagundi were to appear now it would not make much of a sensation; but, the same freshness, wit, and sarcastic humor applied to the affairs of the present time, could not fail to create the same excitement that Salmagundi did fifty years ago. Perhaps it was the subsequent fame of its authors that preserved it from oblivion; but we believe that it possessed sufficient vitality to keep it alive even until the present time, even though its authors had done nothing better. G. P. PUTNAM & Co., have just published a new and cheap edition of Salmagundi as the first number of a series of popular books which they designate Putnam's Railway Classics—a very questionable and ambiguous title, as the first three volumes were all written and published before railways were invented. By the way, we do not use the English term railway in this Country, but railroad, which is a much better word. The Railway Classics are Salmagundi, the Sketch Book, and Tales of a Traveler, by IRVING. The type in which they are printed is entirely too fine and indistinct for railroad reading. When the author of these productions looks at them now, he probably feels like exclaiming with Dean SWIFT, on seeing a copy of A Tale of a Tub in his old age, "What a genius I had when I wrote that book!" It is a curious circumstance that, in the same week that this new edition of IRVING's first attempt in authorship appears, the concluding volume of his Life of Washington is also published. In closing this fourth volume, our literary Nestor promises, if life and health should continue, he will add another, devoted to the Presidential career of Washington, and making the Life complete. The four volumes include his youthful and military career only. After a literary life of fifty years, and never having produced an unsuccessful work, Mr. IRVING intimates that he needs repose and rest, and lays down the pen for awhile, to recuperate his strength. He is a younger man than the British Premier, who holds the reins of Government for Queen VICTORIA, and we hope he will resume the pen once more to finish the work he has commenced.

Reprints are much more numerous than original books, and among the many undertakings of our publishers there are none that will be likely to meet with more general acceptance than the scheme of DERBY & JACKSON, who have commenced new library editions of FIELDING, SMOLLET, SWIFT, STERNE and JOHNSON. These are books which are as necessary to every library as bread is to the dinner-table. There are not any good English editions of these works except such as are very costly and very bulky, which must render their sale here very limited. But the editions now publishing by DERBY & JACKSON are well adapted for the libraries of country houses, while they are sufficiently full and copious for students. In addition to the classical English prose writers, the same house has issued a very good edition of MARRYATT's Novels, commencing with Midshipman Easy and the King's Own.

On the heels of TICKNOR & FIELD's new edition of the Waverley Novels, another Boston firm, SANBORN, CARTER, BAZIN & Co., have commenced a handsome illustrated "Fireside Edition" of the immortal works of the great monarch of fiction, leading off with Waverley, Guy Mannering and Waverley Anecdotes. The letter press in these volumes is unexceptionable, but the illustrations are worthless. They are very ordinary drawings, neither well cut on wood, nor well printed. Of all authors, SCOTT is the one who least requires illustrations to make his text understood; and, unless illustrations answer the purpose of elucidations, or are, in themselves, valuable as ornamental additions to the page, they are only useless incumbrances of a book, which increase its cost without rendering it more attractive or valuable.

A new reprint of the Complete Works of Gerald Griffin, by D. & J. SADLIER & Co., of this City, will be gladly welcomed by all the admirers of that gifted Irish author. The tales of GERALD GRIFFIN have not been so popular with American readers as the works of some of his countrymen who have hardly a tithe of his talent. If Irishmen themselves are competent judges of the truthfulness of Irish stories, GERALD GRIFFIN has better claims to attention as a true interpreter of Irish character and manners than any other author of the present century.

The most valuable and interesting portion of LITTLE, BROWN & Co.'s edition of the British Poets, is that which includes the Ballads of England and Scotland, arranged by the accomplished editor, Professor CHILD, in five books; each ballad being accompanied with a learned, but brief historical commentary.

We are not aware that so copious and excellent a collection of ballad poetry has been before published. The Editor intimates that there will be four more volumes of ballads, to which he will add an original essay on the ballad poetry of England and Scotland.

We have received from JEWETT & Co., of Boston, a very remarkable volume, large and well bound, printed in large clear type on fine paper, The American Biographical Dictionary, by WILLIAM ALLEN, D. D., third edition. The first edition of this work was published in the year 1809, and the preface of the author is dated in Cambridge; the second edition was published in 1822, and the author dates his preface in Brunswick, Me.; the third edition appears in 1857, with a preface from the author dated in Northampton, Massachusetts. Such instances of literary longevity are extremely rare; and we are happy to find by the last preface that the author is as trenchant and vigorous in his last preface as he was in his first, though there is a difference of nearly fifty years between them. We have grown immensely in intellectual greatness during the last half century, if the increase in the number of names that Dr. ALLEN regards as entitled to a place in his dictionary, be any test of our intellectual growth. The first edition of the American Biographical Dictionary contained the names of only seven hundred Americans; the second edition contained about eighteen hundred, while the third edition contains the names of nearly seven thousand illustrious deceased Americans. In looking over the pages of the Dictionary, however, it must be acknowledged, that we find a good many names which there is no good reason given for including in such a work; while there are some which the author appears to have mentioned for the express purpose of showing that they were not worthy of being mentioned. His personal criticisms on character are, in many instances, most viciously impertinent and in the worst taste possible. He permits his private prejudices to obtrude too glaringly in the face of the reader, who looks into such a work for information and not opinions. Facts, and not sentiments, are what we want in a biographical dictionary. We presume there are few persons who will not feel offended by the appendage of such remarks as the following to an account of ANDREW JACKSON: "It deserves the consideration of a people intrusted with the power of choosing their own rulers, whether they can be justified by any principle of duty or by a wise regard to their own safety in elevating a murderer to the highest rank in the community." If Doctor ALLEN nourishes a pet prejudice against General JACKSON, and considers him in the light of a murderer, he may have a right to indulge in his eccentricity of opinion; but it is hardly proper in him to stigmatize a man who has been twice elected to the Presidency, and who is still regarded with feelings of affection and reverence by a majority of the nation, by calling him a murderer, in a work which professes to be historical. It was, too, quite apart from the purpose of a biographical work, to say that POE "wrote nothing of true value and worth reading." The best critical authorities on both sides of the Atlantic have pronounced judgment upon the writings of POE of a directly opposite character.

One of the most readable and instructive books of travel we have lately looked at is Mr. BRACE'S Norse-Folk; or, a Visit to the Homes of Norway and Sweden, by CHARLES LORING BRACE, just published by SCRIBNER. Mr. BRACE has the requisite qualifications for a traveler, a certain degree of Bohemian feeling without which traveling is irksome, a good memory, a well-educated mind, an inappeasable spirit of inquiry, a benevolent temper, indomitable good humor, and, above all, and without which all other qualities would be useless, a fluent picturesque style in which he narrates his adventures. He is of genuine Norse descent himself, and naturally felt an enthusiasm in going back to the homes of his Viking ancestors which none of the black-haired and dark-eyed races could ever experience. His account of what he saw in Norway and Sweden is exceedingly interesting, and we have no doubt that his piquant narrative will send a good many wandering Americans to the homes of the Norse-folk who might else have spent their time abroad in Italy or Germany. The illustrations do illustrate the subject of the book, instead of being, as most illustrations are, now-a-days, mere pictures to beguile the eye.

An American Merchant in Europe, Asia, and Australia, by GEO. FRANCIS TRAIN, published by PUTNAM & Co., is, as its title promises, a very different work from Mr. BRACE's. Mr. BRACE is a scholar and a philanthropist, while Mr. TRAIN is a dashing young merchant who went out to Australia to make his fortune, on the breaking out of the gold fever, and who seems, from his letters, to have gone on a hap hazard ramble among the antipodes. There is nothing very profound or learned in Mr. TRAIN's book; but there is a good deal of lively gossip, intermingled with personalities, about Australia, Calcutta, Hong Kong, Canton, San Francisco, and other parts which he visited. The letters are introduced with a preface by FREEMAN HUNT, Editor of the Merchant's Magazine.

We have from SHELDON, BLAKEMAN & Co. the third volume of Dr. KENDRICK's translation of Olshausen's Biblical Commentary on the New Testament; with the translation of the same author's Proof of the Genuineness of the Writings of the New Testament, by DAVID FOSDICK, Jr.

A "High-toned" Newspaper.

BOSTON, Saturday, May 16, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I hope you will not suppose that the querulous allusions of some of our would-be respectable dailies to your course in the Burdell murder affair, reflects the sentiments of any considerable portion of our community; on the contrary I am assured by nine out of ten whom I daily meet, that they think the offer of a large reward by one of the leading presses of the City of New-York for the detection of the actors in a foul and most unnatural crime, while the City and State authorities stand by inactive, reflects the highest credit upon the whole press of your City—certainly upon that portion of it who have the good sense to appreciate the act; as to the rest, who have treated the murder of a citizen with levity, as though crime were a fit subject for witticisms, they may be safely left to the verdict of the sober thought of the people. My present object, however, is to explain the cause of the astonishment that your offer has excited in the minds of some of our editors. The Boston Courier in the conclusion of its silly attack upon you for this public spirited act says: "It is painful to see a journal reduced to such a strait in order to keep its name before the public."

Now I dislike to tell tales out of school, but it is painful, very, to see a journal reduced to such a strait (as the Courier has been for two years past) in order to keep, not its name only, but its existence before the public. Not long since this whining concern, sustained in existence by the voluntary subscriptions of old fogy dealers in cotton and other Southern staples, tired of the incubus, made an unsuccessful offer to its compositors and attaches of $2,500 a year, and all they could make besides, if they would relieve its friends of any further pecuniary burden in keeping it alive. It is perfectly plain that such people are wholly incapable of comprehending how a newspaper establishment can possibly have a surplus of $5,000 to expend in a good cause, outside of its legitimate operations. I offer this as an apology for our amazed bedomidal at the act in question; while I wish to assure you that there are few Bostonians who share either their surprise or their spleen.

COCHITUATE.

The Columbus Bank Case—The Federal Government Cheated out of $100,000.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer, May 16.

The Jury in this case rendered a verdict in favor of defendant. They could not do otherwise, under the strange, the astounding charge of Judge MCLEAN, which was for the defendant throughout.

The facts of the case are simply these; When THOS. CORWIN was Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, some of his party friends in this State were Directors of the Columbus City Bank, and also of the Columbus Insurance Company—twin institutions, controled and managed by the same parties. Hearing of the rapid fortunes which CORCORAN and other parties had made in Washington, by obtaining the use of the Government funds for sixty and ninety days, under contracts to transfer the same to remote points, two of the managers of these twin institutions, Colonel MINER and Mr. MOONIE, President of the City Bank, put their heads together to devise a plan for directing a small branch of this Pactolian stream westward. MINER is instructed by MOONIE to proceed to Washington, and under a written power to negotiate with CORWIN for the transfer of government funds for and in behalf of the Columbus City Bank. There is no little cogetting between MINER and CORWIN. The latter does not see how he could, under the Sub-Treasury law, enter into any such arrangement with a bank. This doubt is creditable to his sagacity and conscientiousness, but the logic and eloquence of Colonel MINER finally prevail over all such scruples, and the contract is made between the Government and the bank, and Colonel MINER receives a draft for the solid gold of Uncle Sam, which he undertakes to transfer to New-Orleans in sixty days.

The money never gets below the Ohio, but is quietly placed to the credit of the Columbus Insurance Company, the twin brother of the Bank, and is swallowed up in the total wreck of that institution. We are left in the dark as to the cause of this mysterious transfer of moneys, deposited with the Bank of the United States, to the credit of the Insurance Company, but as the managing directors of both institutions were privy to the transfer, we suppose it was done for reasons satisfactory to themselves. Such an agreement, however, placed their official friend in Washington in a very awkward position, as, if he had doubts as to his power to contract with a bank to transfer funds for the Government, there would certainly be room for much more serious doubts in making such an agreement with an Insurance Company. And yet the Secretary is placed precisely in this position by his friends, who, having used him for their purposes, now seek to attach to his name and reputation the responsibility for a transaction by which Uncle Sam is diddled out of $100,000. The United States Court, presided over by one of its Supreme Judges, has decided that the contract was with the Insurance Office, not with the Bank; that the latter is not responsible for money which its duly authorized agent received for it, and undertook to transfer to a certain point. Thus the Government must add another $100,000 to the losses by Golphinism and Gardenerism, which have given the Administration of TAYLOR and FILLMORE such a painful notoriety for financial mismanagement and recklessness.

THE DENINY ARSON CASE.

The District Attorney's Life Threatened—Extraordinary Proceedings in Court.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before the City Judge

The proceedings in this Court yesterday were somewhat singular. The case of Thomas Deniny, charged with arson in the first degree, was resumed, and an attempt was made, with a new panel of jurors, to complete the list of twelve, necessary to try the case. Ten fit and proper citizens, without bias, were discovered and sworn on Monday; and yesterday, at the opening of Court, only two were wanted. Fifty citizens, meanwhile, had been summoned for this emergency, but less than forty attended. Counsel for the accused challenged each juror as he was called, and objected to several because they were Germans. Deniny, the prisoner, being an Irishman. Counsel for the accused took also another course. We reported duly yesterday morning, the proceedings of the previous day, and, in connection with those proceedings, we said:

"It was noticeable, yesterday, that the prisoner had a list of all the jurors, and that whenever he objected to a juror, though the latter had sworn that he did not know the prisoner, had never heard of the case, and was totally unbiased, he was peremptorily challenged."

Counsel for the accused denied the truth of this, and took the extraordinary course in challenging jurors, of asking whether they had read the report as published in the TIMES. If they had not, he read it to them in open Court, and then said "Suppose you had read this, would it have influenced your judgment of the prisoner's case?" The majority said "No." One man, summoned as a juror, said it would, whereupon counsel for defence objected to him.

But Judge RUSSELL would not admit the objection. He said the juror was evidently competent to sit and try the case, inasmuch as he had not heard it before he came into Court, and before he had listened to the reading of the report. Then counsel for defence rose, and commenced an elaborate speech. The press, he said, was courteous and gentlemanly, but it did an infinite deal of mischief, for it often told the misdeeds of an accused man, and left counsel, whatever might be his attainments, no chance to defend his client. Newspapers had incalculable power, but their editors managed to evade responsibility. If no reports of criminal cases were given to the public, there would be no difficulty in procuring jurors. The statement that Deniny had a jury list was untrue. Deniny was searched on Monday in that Court-room by the police officers, for the purpose of discovering whether he had that jury list about him or not, and it could not be found.

[Counsel for defence was wrong. Deniny was searched by the officers of the Court on suspicion of having concealed weapons about him. He had threatened, as was alleged, to kill the District Attorney, the Fire Marshal, and other parties, who either had, or seemed to have, interested themselves in the prosecution of this notorious case.]—REPORTER.

The new panel was exhausted, there being ten or eleven absentees, who were fined $25 each. There being only eleven Jurors sworn, the District Attorney said he would summon 250 Jurors for the next (June) term, and requested the Court to postpone the case. Counsel for defence earnestly protested. He would try the case with eleven Jurors. He would call back the last man he had objected to. He would do anything.

But the Judge said "No." Too much time had been wasted already, and a murder case was on the calendar for to-morrow. (i. e., to-day.) Still counsel for defence objected; still the Judge insisted, and the case went over to the June Term.

A rape case was called up for second trial, but was not concluded, when the Court adjourned.

THE COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

Before Justices Osborn and Flamigan.

At the Court of Special Sessions, yesterday, an Irishman, named Charles McCombs, residing in Bleecker street, was placed at the bar on a charge of violently assaulting his wife Elizabeth, who was put upon the stand to substantiate the charge. The Court asked her to go on and tell her story. She hesitated greatly, and said finally that the matter did not amount to much, and that John had only thrown a pail of water over her. She was then reminded that she had a few days before caused her husband's arrest by swearing at the Jefferson Market Police that he had beaten her violently and nearly choked her, and that he was in the habit of beating her, and was a common druukard. "Oh well, well," said the witness, "sure the poor fellow has been in jail for several days, and sure he didn't do much—only just threw a pail of clean water over me." The magistrates, after a moment's consultation, dismissed the prisoner, for which they were thanked by the prosecutor.

Michael Cogan was arraigned for assaulting a female residing in Bond-street. The charge was proved. It was shown that liquor had a good deal to do with the affair, but it was shown, also, that Michael, though a well-dressed and modest-looking man of advanced years, was too free with his fists, and had served one term on the Island for assault and battery. The Court thought it would be well to send him back again, and it did so, for the term of three months.

James Smith alias George Thompson, was tried for stealing a watch and $5 in money from Robert Robinson, an aged coachman. Robinson was put upon the stand, and testified to having met the prisoner one night in West-street, and to having walked with him some distance, under the supposition that he was showing him the way home. Officer Addington of the Ninth Ward deposed to having seen the prisoner in company with Robinson on the night in question, and had his suspicions aroused because he recognized the prisoner as a State's prison bird, and knew that he was up to some mischief. He spoke to the parties as they passed, and Robinson replied that "this gentleman (pointing to Smith) is taking me home." In a few moments afterwards Robinson returned saying that he had been robbed of some bank bills and his watch. The officer pursued Smith and arrested him. Neither money nor watch was found upon him, but near by upon a heap of dirt he soon afterwards found the missing watch. Smith was convicted and sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months.

Ann Dolahoe, an old inmate of the City prison, was convicted of stealing a pair of pantaloons from John Doremus, and was sent to the Penitentiary for three months.

Edgar Purdy, an old man, was arraigned for an assault and battery upon his wife Ann. Mrs. Purdy was not willing that her husband should be punished. "He has been in prison some days now," she said, "and I know he is sorry for what he did to me, besides he didn't hurt me much. Pray, do not send him to the Island." The magistrates consulted, and decided to detain the prisoner at the Tombs for 30 days—"But," said Justice OSBORNE, "if you are brought here again for a similar offence, you will be sent up for six months sure. You may thank your wife for being so leniently dealt with this time. Go."

Maria Donly, a dissipated-looking and middle-aged woman, was adjudged guilty of stealing 34 cents worth of calico from Lord & Taylor, the dry goods dealers. Two months on the Island were assigned her.

A very homely-looking black woman, named Mary Jones, was convicted of petty larceny, for stealing some article valued at $1 50. The Judge said he knew her; she had been on the Island three times before, and he would send her there again for six months.

Thomas Byrne, a boy about 16 years of age, was charged with stealing a coat. He pleaded not guilty, though he was seen by the owner to run away with it, and was pursued by officer Brown, of the Fourth Ward, who found it upon him. The prisoner was pugnacious, when overhauled by the officer, upon whom he made an assault. Sent to the House of Refuge.

A country milk dealer named Ryder appeared against a man named Dalton, whom he accused of stealing two milk cans from him. Ryder proved that two milk cans had been stolen from him, but he failed to show that the theft had been committed by the prisoner, who was of course discharged.

Some half a dozen young German girls, some of them of doubtful repute, next appeared and made a great deal of noise about some assaults and batteries. The parties all reside in Reade-street. The accused acknowledged having slapped the face of the complainant, but said she did so because she wouldn't let her sleep o' nights, and was acting very badly all the time. The charge was dismissed.

Patrick Ward, aged about 18 years, pleaded guilty to an assault upon D. P. Wood. He cried when he confessed his guilt, but smiled when he was told that he might depart in peace, at the special request of the complainant, Mr. Wood.

John Collins, John Kennedy, John Jennings, Walter Flynn, James Long, John O'Neill and James Bradley, were arraigned for fighting dogs in Madison-street, on Sunday, May 3, in violation of the law. This was the first case tried under the recent act of the last Legislature, and it excited a good deal of interest. Capt. Letts, of the Seventh Ward, gave evidence as to the arrest of the prisoners, by a party of Seventh Ward policemen under his command, and to the fact that Long, the proprietor of the place or hall where the fight occurred, and Jennings, were in the pit fighting the two dogs when the police entered. Long pleaded his own case ably, and cross-questioned the Captain sharply, but failing to make out a case, he desired the Court to remember that when he (Long) had learned that to fight dogs was unlawful, he at once surrendered possession of "Sportsmen's Hall," and hadn't fought any dogs since. The Court replied that as this was the first case under the new law in relation to such matters, it would not be severe, but would only so act as to notify "sporting men and dog-fighters" that they were liable. It was ordered that Long be fined $25, Jennings $20, and all the others, who were merely lookers-on, $5 each. The fines were paid and the prisoners dismissed.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

QUESTION OF PLEADING.

J. E. Isaac vs. W. Gorham—BRADY, J.—The defendant alleges that at the time of the loan of $1,000, for which sum the action is brought, was made to him, he and his wife gave a note to the plaintiff for the said sum, which was not surrendered, and the plaintiff moves to strike out that allegation as irrelevant. Where the plaintiff sues on the original indebtedness for which a note has been given, and such appears on the trial, the note must be surrendered before a verdict can be had. It was not necessary to plead the giving of the note under the old system, and it may not be necessary to set it up under the Code, but it cannot be stricken out under section 160, unless the party is aggrieved thereby. It requires no reply, and I cannot conceive any good objection to its insertion in the answer. It is equivalent to a notice to produce and surrender, and may be in that respect advantageous to the plaintiff by advising him in time, to enable him to obtain and yield it on the trial. Motion denied, with $7 costs to abide event.

John W. Mitchell vs. William R. Knapp—Motion granted.

Before Judge Daly.

Antonius De Leger vs. William Michaels.—Motion for a new trial denied with costs.

From Nassau, N. P.

ARRIVAL OF THE NEW GOVERNOR—CHOLERA IN DEMERARA—LABOR WANTED.

We (Charleston Courier) have received advices from Nassau, N. P., to the 8th inst. There is little news of importance.

His Excellency CHARLES JOHN BAYLEY, the new Governor arrived in the packet Monte Cristo, on the night of the 15th ult., and took the oath of office on the 19th. Sir ALEXANDER BANNERMAN leaves soon for Newfoundland, (of which Island he takes the Government,) viâ the United States. Gov. BAYLEY held his first levee on the 24th ult.

The General Assembly of the Island has been prorogued till the 28th inst.

His Majesty's brig Mariner (12 guns) arrived with specie for the Commissariat, on the 22d ult., viâ Grytown and Havana, and left for England on the 28th.

Advices received at Nassau from Demerara say that the cholera has ceased to exist at George Town. The disease still lingered in the country districts, however. The expenses which have been increased by the colony in consequence of this disease are said to amount to $80,000. The supply of labor was attracting great attention in British Guiana, and the Royal Gazette says that "if the restrictions which are now placed in the way of free emigration, and especially from Africa, were removed, we have no hesitation in saying, and we say it advisedly, that there would be no difficulty in raising Cotton enough, and that of the finest quality, to meet the entire consumption of the manufacturers of the United Kingdom." This certainly looks very like a request for the re-opening of the slave-trade, and that from her Majesty's own subjects.

There was still some considerable talk at Demerara and Barbadoes in reference to the submarine telegraph connecting the Continent of South America with the West India Islands.

ARREST OF A FORGER OF LAND WARRANTS.—This morning, about seven o'clock, DANIEL B. VONDERSMITH was arrested by Deputy Marshal JENKINS, and kept in his custody at Hopple's Hotel, until this afternoon, when he took him down to Philadelphia, there to await his trial upon several indictments which have been pending against him for over two years for forging land warrants. It will be recollected that in the early part of 1854 Mr. VONDERSMITH, then one of the Associate Judges of the Court of Quarter Sessions, and GEORGE FORD, Esq., one of the most prominent members of the Lancaster bar, charged with a similar offence, both forfeited their bail and left for parts unknown. VONDERSMITH came to Europe viâ New-York, having been escorted from this city to Philadelphia by some friends in a sleigh, and, after traveling and sojourning in Europe for over two years, returned to New-York some time last Fall or Summer, and eventually ventured home again, where he has been since last September. His presence at home was not generally known for a long time, but of late he has become less cautious, and ventured out to visit some of his neighbors in daylight. He had also commenced fixing up the beautiful grounds connected with his residence, placing his favorite flowers in the Summer-house, and had introduced the water into the fountain in his garden, the pipes having been torn up or disarranged while he was making the tour of Europe. These arrangements looked as if he was making preparations for a permanent residence in his old home, and one, to see him there, would hardly have supposed that he was liable at any moment to be snatched up by a United States official, and transferred from that pleasant retreat to the gloom of Moyamensing Prison.—Lancaster Express, Tuesday.

RETURN OF ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-NINE OF LOCKRIDGE'S MEN.—The towboat Persian, Capt. LEMUEL arrived last evening from the Passas, bringing up 189 men from LOCKRIDGE's command in Nicaragua, who were brought from Asplowall on the British war steamer Tartar. The original number taken on board at Greytown was 193. Three died on board of the Tartar, viz: DAVID COMBS, JONES and HOLMES. One man, ROBERT MALONE, died on board the towboat while coming up the river. His remains were brought to the city. Capt. DUNLOP, of the Tartar, accompanied by several of his officers, also came up to the city in the Persia. We have seen and conversed with quite a number of the returned soldiers, all of whom speak very highly of the kind and generous treatment they received on the passage, from Capt. DUNLOP and his officers.—N. O. Crescent.

THE "WAKEMANITES" IN NEW-HAVEN.—It seems we are mistaken in supposing that Mrs. HERSEY, one of the widow WAKEMAN's followers, who died on the 12th inst., had become disabused of her delusion. She remained true to the Wakeman faith. We understand that Mrs. WAKEMAN and SAMMY SLY, who are still confined in our jail, are equally persistent, and they did not believe that any of them would die. When informed of Mrs HERSEY's death, SLY merely remarked, "It is different from what was expected."—New Haven Journal.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.—EDWARD S. HOUGH, Collector, &c., Alexandria, &c., reappointed.

WALTER N. HALDEMAN, surveyor, &c., Louisville, Ky., vice SAMUEL S. ENGLISH, removed.

Dr. G. PASMENTER, inspector of drugs and medicines in Boston, in place of Dr. SMITH, removed.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Niagara, from Liverpool on the 9th inst., arrived at Halifax yesterday morning, bringing three days' later intelligence from Europe. The Queen's speech to the British Parliament was read by the Lord Chancellor on the 7th inst., and, as it may be considered an indication of Lord PALMERSTON'S policy in divers matters of weighty public interest, it possesses unusual importance. The news otherwise is generally interesting. Efforts were making, on the part of the Russian Minister at Teheran, to prevent the ratification of the treaty between England and Persia. Spain is again disturbed. Malaga had been placed in a state of siege, and elsewhere the country was in a troubled state. News had been received in Paris of the ratification of a treaty between Austria and Switzerland—so that we have at last seen the end of the Neufchatel difficulty. Further hostilities had occurred in Persia. The British had captured the city of Mohammerah—the loss of the Persians being two hundred. The British loss was but ten. The commercial news by this arrival is very important, and will be found fully noted in our telegraphic summary.

Major MCCULLOCH has written a letter to a member of the Cabinet, declining the Governorship of Utah, as we learn by a telegraph dispatch from Washington. The same authority states that Judge DRUMMOND has not been offered the appointment, but that it has been offered to a Western man, whose name for the present is withheld. It seems to be pretty generally believed at the Capital that Gen. HARNEY will be sent into the Territory at the head of a considerable body of troops.

Col. BENTON has written another letter, deploring Slavery agitation as an unmitigated evil. He claims that the Emancipation controversy in Missouri is intended only to excite the slaves, and says that much mischief has already been done in this way.

Hon. LAWRENCE M. KEITT, late the colleague of PRESTON S. BROOKS, has made a speech in Columbia, S. C., at a banquet given to the survivors of the Palmetto Regiment, in which, after a labored eulogy upon BROOKS, he gave his own reminiscences of the war in Mexico.

The new Police Commissioners had another meeting yesterday. They agreed upon a permanent meeting place at No. 88 White-street; resolved to bring Policemen HORRIGAN, FILES and EVANS, of the Fifth Ward, to trial on charges of insubordination, and adopted a reply to Mayor WOOD'S late letter addressed to President DRAPER. At the Fifth Ward Station-house everything remained quiet—both Captains acting. Five of the nine Captains of Police in Brooklyn have decided to obey the new law. The rules and regulations were read to the men Monday night, by Captain MILLER of the Ninth District, and also by Captain COMBS, of the Eighth District. The remaining three Captains read the papers, as directed, last evening.

The Excise Comissioners held their first official meeting under the new law, yesterday morning, in the Common Pleas Court room, City Hall, over which Justice INGRAHAM presided. They held two sessions, but received no applications for licences. A memorial from the New-York City Temperance Alliance was the only thing submitted for their consideration. Justice INGRAHAM treated the Commissioners very hospitably, and has offered them his court-room for use whenever the Court is not in session. The Commissioners adjourned to Saturday. A meeting of the Judges, upon whom devolve the appointment of a Commissioner in place of Mr. HAWES, resigned, will also be held on Saturday.

The Central Park Commissioners had a session yesterday. A resolution was passed directing legal notice to be given to the Adjutant General, Inspector General and Commissary General, the Commissioners having supervision of the sale of the State arsenals at New-York and Albany, of their previous resolution to purchase the arsenal and grounds belonging to it located within the Central Park. The Board have secured rooms for their future meetings in the Bank of Commerce building.

Owing to the storm the Board of Governors were unable to get a quorum yesterday.

The first trial under the recent act of the Legislature, prohibiting dog-fights and similar "amusements," took place, yesterday, before Justices OSBORNE and FLANDREAU, at the Court of Special Sessions. The prisoners (all of whom were found engaged in a dog-fight in a hall in Madison-street, last Friday week) were convicted and fined in sums varying from $5 to $25. The Court remarked that it was thus lenient because the offenders were, probably, ignorant of the act for the violation of which they were convicted.

The investigation into the claim of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM to the estate of Dr. BURDELL was to have been continued yesterday before the Surrogate, but it was postponed until Tuesday, June 2.

The examination of the captain and mate of the alleged slave schooner Merchant, before Commissioner MARTIN, is postponed till Friday.

ROBERT SEYMOUR, charged with having stabbed JOHN C. BOSTER, mate of the ship Calhoun, was arrested by the United States Marshal, on Monday evening, and locked up to await examination.

The Association of Medical Superintendents of the American Institutions for the Insane is now in session in this City,—the first meeting having been held at the Metropolitan Hotel, yesterday, Professor RAY, of Providence, presiding.

JAMES O'DONNELL, the young man who was stabbed, on Sunday night, during a fight in Roosevelt-street, with one MICHAEL HAYS, died at the City Hospital, yesterday, of his injuries. A Coroner's Inquest is now sitting upon the body. HAYS has fled.

The Kings County Excise Commissioners met yesterday and received seventy-five applications for licenses. The price for a license was fixed at $30.

RESULTS OF MOB LAW.—It is refreshing to read, in the Louisville Journal, a fierce denunciation of Judge Lynch, published the very day after Louisville had been disgraced by the deliberate murder of four wretched men by a mob of respectable citizens. The Journal is unsparing in its denunciations, calling the ruffians who perpetrated the foul deed "inhuman fiends," and telling the people of that city that "the finger of the world's scorn is already pointed at them." It is most encouraging to know that there is one paper that has the courage and manliness to tell the half-savage people of their criminal conduct, and to honestly hold up, for their contemplation, the inevitable results of their lawless violence. If there were but a few more such outspoken papers in the Southwest as the Louisville Journal, we should not so frequently be compelled to chronicle the acts of Judge Lynch, to the great disgrace of American institutions.

The Police War—Mayor Wood and the Police Commissioners.

Our City Government is in a disturbed and most discreditable condition. The conflict of authority between Mayor WOOD and the Commissioners appointed by the Legislature, paralyzes the arm of justice and threatens an actual collision,—involving force and the loss of life. The mere fact that such a state of things should have arisen is in the highest degree disgraceful. That it is dangerous to the public peace,—that it encourages criminals of every grade and involves the certain increase of crimes against persons and property, are matters of course. The twelve hundred members of the Police Department are placed in a position where it becomes impossible for them to act with any degree of vigor and efficiency. Two sets of officers claim the right to control them, and each threatens them with punishment if they obey the orders of the other. Ignorant, themselves, of the merits of the quarrel, and unable to conjecture upon which side the victory will rest at last, they have no semblance of security but in inaction. They stand still, while their superiors are fighting for the authority to command them, and the thieves, murderers and vagabonds whom it is their business to keep in check, find themselves in absolute possession of the field.

In all this proceeding Mayor WOOD is clearly and culpably in the wrong. He is openly and forcibly resisting what he is bound, legally and morally, to regard as the law of the State. As it stands, whatever may be the final decision, the law creating the Board of Metropolitan Police, and clothing it with the powers which its members are endeavoring to exercise, is just as valid and binding as the law creating the office of Mayor of this City, or as any other law upon the statute book. It is a law of the State, and as such, until repealed or annulled by some regular form of proceeding, it is of binding validity and obligation upon every officer and every citizen of the State. To say that it may hereafter be declared unconstitutional, and therefore need not now be obeyed, is simple nonsense. No man has a right thus to ignore and discard a plain matter of fact, and to govern his conduct by the presumption of a possible change in the future. Mayor WOOD has an undoubted right to contest the validity of this law, or of any other law, at his own discretion, but he must do it by legal methods, and upon legal grounds. And, until he has thus contested and overthrown it, he is bound to obey it. The fact that he happens to be in possession of power to resist it is no justification or excuse for such resistance. As the case stands now, the Police force which he assumes to control is simply an illegal, unauthorized, and therefore criminal, organization, formed for the purpose of forcibly resisting the execution of the law. If the emigrant-runners had formed themselves into squads, and, with Judge RUSSELL'S particular friend, ENRIGHT, at their head, had determined to resist by force the execution of the law just passed concerning their offences, on the plea of its unconstitutionality, they would have held precisely the same position as that in which Mayor WOOD has placed the Police Department, and would have had just as good a right to countenance and support in their action, as he has in his. Any gang of thieves or murderers might, upon Mayor WOOD'S theory, imitate his practice and offer an organized resistance to all law, upon the assumption that they might be able at some time hereafter to prove its invalidity.

The ground on which Mayor WOOD rests for a justification of his conduct is utterly untenable,—and he is acting the part of an incendiary and an enemy of the public peace in the course which he is pursuing. The new Board of Commissioners are prima facie in office; they are there by a law of the State, duly enacted, and about the construction or interpretation of which there is not the slightest dispute or doubt. Mayor WOOD insists that they are not in office,—because their appointment was void. But the Revised Statutes lay down the law upon this subject, and declare explicitly that officers are to be vacated for this cause, only upon "the decision of a competent tribunal declaring void the election or appointment" of the persons by whom they are filled. The "competent tribunals" in this case are the Courts of law to which Mayor WOOD has appealed. Upon their "decision" that the appointment of the new Board was "void" they will cease to be Commissioners. But neither Mayor WOOD nor anybody else has any right to anticipate that decision, or to assume authority to declare in advance what it will be.

Mayor WOOD under the old law was President of the Police Commission and at the head of the Police Department. When the new law took effect, he ceased to hold that office: he was removed from it by the operation of the law which created the New Board and made them his successors in it. And it was his duty at once, on demand, to deliver all the books and papers—all the evidences of authority and the means of performing the duties of the office,—to those successors. The language of the Revised Statutes (Part 1., Art. 5, § 54) upon this point is very explicit:

"Whenever any person shall be removed from office, or the term for which he shall have been elected or appointed shall expire, he shall, on demand, deliver over to his successor all the books and papers in his custody as such officer or in anywise appertaining to his office. Every person violating this provision shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor."

Whether the new Board have made the demand upon the Mayor here spoken of, we are not aware. If they have, and he has refused compliance with it, he is clearly and unmistakably guilty of a misdemeanor and may be punished accordingly. Nor does the law stop here. It provides for the most prompt and summary disposition of the matter. In the very next section it is provided that § 55. "If any person shall refuse or neglect to deliver over to his successor any books or papers, as required in the preceding section, such successor may make complaint thereof to the Chancellor, any justice of the Supreme Court, any Circuit Judge of the Circuit or the first Judge of the County where the person so refusing shall reside;—and if such officer be satisfied by the oath of the complainant and such other testimony as shall be offered, that any such books or papers are withheld, he shall grant an order directing the person so refusing to show cause before him, within some short and reasonable time, why he should not be compelled to deliver the same.

"§ 56. At the time so appointed—* * if the person charged with withholding such books or papers, shall make affidavit before such officer, that he has truly delivered over to his successor all such books and papers in his custody or appertaining to his office with-in his knowledge, all further proceedings before such officer shall cease, and the person complained against shall be discharged.

"§ 57. If the person complained against shall not make such oath, and it shall appear that any such books or papers are withheld, the officer before whom such proceedings shall be had, shall by warrant commit (the person so withholding, TO THE JAIL OF THE COUNTY, there to remain until he shall deliver such books or papers, or be otherwise discharged according to law."

The object of these plain provisions of the law is to prevent precisely the state of things which now exists in this City,—the unlawful retention of office after removal and the equally unlawful exclusion of the successors appointed by law. The parties designated by the Statute are to be put promptly and by summary process into possession of office and its authority. The office is to be surrendered;—and proof that it has not been, commits the recusant ex-office holder to the County Jail.

Why have not the new Board resorted to these provisions of the law for the purpose of obtaining possession of the office to which they have been appointed? They were clearly made to cover precisely such a case as theirs and to avert the consequences which the trifling and childish cause they are pursuing seems likely to involve. It is a matter of very little consequence whether they or Mayor WOOD can write the smartest letters,—and it is very paltry, as well as very wrong, to set the subordinate members of the Department to deciding, with their fists and clubs, the question which shall have possession of the office. The law has abundantly provided for this contingency. The records of the Station-houses,—the roll of the members,—the rules and regulations of the Department, are all parts of the "books and papers" appertaining to the office lately held by Mayor WOOD as head of the Police Department. Let Mr. DRAPER, as President of the new Board, demand their surrender. If it be refused, let him make complaint of that refusal before any Judge of the Supreme Court. Mayor WOOD must thereupon either make an affidavit that he has made the surrender required, or else, upon proof of the contrary, he must go to the County Jail. He would then be at full liberty to contest the constitutionality of the new Police Law,—but he would do it as he is not doing it now, in a legal manner.

The Salt Lake Infamy—What Should Be Done.

In addition to still later intelligence from Utah received by last night's mail, we publish this morning a letter from Judge DRUMMOND, late of that Territory, which fully corroborates the tale of Mormon wrong and oppression presented in our Salt Lake correspondence. The startling facts detailed in these communications can hardly fail to take deep hold upon public sentiment, and through it reach the heart and nerve the hands of the National Administration to speedy and decisive action. Already the tide begins to swell towards Washington, bearing upon its bosom a stern demand for needed succor to our fellow-citizens now writhing beneath the heel of Mormon theocracy; and we cannot but hope, despite Judge DRUMMOND'S gloomy forebodings, that Mr. BUCHANAN will give immediate and practical attention to this subject in preference to the distribution of foreign spoils.

There is much truthful satire in the suggestion of a cotemporary that the surest method of securing Mormon subjugation is to send a dozen runaway negroes into the Territory, who will of necessity draw a regiment of troops after them for their capture. If an attempt is made to resist the Fugitive Slave Law, in the case of a runaway here, how quickly are the most vigorous measures of physical force employed to maintain the supremacy of the law: but in Utah we see murders, arsons, robberies and the forcible debauch of defenceless women perpetrated day after day without even an effort to maintain the law and bring the guilty to punishment. These things have occurred for years;—the National Administration has been advised of the facts by every officer sent out there by the Government,—some of whom were themselves Mormons, but have become disgusted with the iniquities perpetrated in the name of religion—and yet the strong arm of the Government, raised so readily to strike down the slave and return him to bondage, moves not to the rescue. The return of the negro to servitude is made practically of far more importance than the rescue of white men and women from bondage more terrible than death!

It certainly seems almost incredible that such outrages, such usurpations of power and disregard of all law as are narrated by our correspondents could have been repeated time and again during months and years past, upon the soil of the American Union. Nevertheless such is the fact; for in "Utah's" veracity we have implicit faith. He is an educated and high-toned gentleman, who writes of what he knows and nothing more. Besides, his statements are confirmed by similar recitals of other parties. Thus we have received the story of Mrs. SUTHERLAND'S persecution from two different sources, as well as the affecting narrative of the orphan child of NASH, who—over the dead body of her father—was told by the Bishop of Provo that she was now defenceless and must become his seventh wife,—a command to which he finally found means to compel her obedience. But no further evidence of the reliability of these recitals is necessary than they themselves furnish; and the authorized speeches of Mormon leaders, the published letters from Utah found in Mormon journals, and the notorious fact that they uphold and defend the degrading institution of Polygamy, prepare the reflecting mind to receive these later revelations of Mormon iniquity with less of suspicion than otherwise would be natural.

Is it possible to subdue the rebellious people of Salt Lake?—or have they become too strong for subjugation to the law? The question is frequently asked,—and a doubtful response is sometimes suggested as a reason for the delay of action at Washington. Upon careful inquiry, we find that the Mormons of Utah are far less numerous than supposed,—that while their census gives them some hundred thousand souls, there are, in fact, less than half that number. We are told that with the view to enhance their importance and their progress abroad, the Mormons gave to the Census-takers an immense number of fictitious names, besides repeating frequently the names of actual citizens. For instance, John Smith has a dozen wives, and each may have three or four married children. The Patriarch would give to the Census-taker, as his family, the whole number of his children, married and single, together with their numerous progeny: and subsequently these sons and daughters would again record themselves and families as another party altogether!

It is well known that there is wide-spread disaffection among the Saints at Utah, and that large numbers would avail themselves of the protection of an armed force to secede from the Church and throw off its allegiance; and it is believed by those competent to judge, that even five or seven hundred men, well disciplined and equipped, and under the command of brave and discreet officers, would be sufficient to establish the law in Utah, break down the despotic rule of BRIGHAM YOUNG and the Elders, and give peace and quiet to the country. These troops could easily be drawn from Kansas, Iowa or the force now about to depart under command of Col. HARNEY, on an expedition against the Cheyennes. Indeed it would be far better to let these poor savages pass for the present, if that be necessary in order to provide the means to punish the still greater savages who libel civilization, and caricature religion at Salt Lake.

The Russian Railway Loan.

The failure of the Russian railway schemes in the London money market proves how utterly unsuccessful have been the attempts made by the Muscovite party, in and out of Muscovy, to convert Europe to the belief that the Czar had abandoned his own policy, and was about to devote himself, heart and soul, to the arts of peace. The railways, we have been told, were intended to open up the interior of this great country and thus assist in developing its boundless resources. The steppes of the interior would thus be enabled to fling their products, in lavish profusion, upon the shores of the more crowded and worn-out countries of the west; and the great Northern bugbear, from threatening the repose of Europe would become its storehouse, its garden, a present help in all times of famine and scarcity. The experience of the war in the Crimea had taught Russia where her real strength and real weakness lay. She now perceived, that in this age, military greatness could only be maintained by the aid of commercial greatness, that to be strong a nation must be rich, that the true road to glory lay through the counting-house. When people asked in which way it could be shown that her policy was really changed, since she devoted herself to mercantile pursuits solely as aids to armed aggression in the future, they were assured, with a slight tinge of scorn, that by a singular dispensation of Providence the very means she employed to nerve her arm in war would tend to render war each year more distasteful, and that at the very time when she found herself best prepared for hostilities, she would be least disposed to fight. We have always looked upon these notions of Russian tendencies as amiable delusions, very useful, no doubt, to any one interested in promoting a Russian loan, or in propagating Russian influence, but very doubtful security for an investment, and a very dangerous basis for negotiation. Admitting that the Russian Government is really sincere in its desire to develop the resources of the country, and that its efforts with that object will prove successful, it by no means follows that her love of conquest and expansion will diminish in proportion to the increase of her wealth and the growth of her trade. Nothing that we know of the history of other nations warrants us in looking for any such result. The love of trade has nearly always gone hand in hand with the love of war and conquest. When HANNIBAL crossed the Alps Carthage was the first commercial community in the world. The warehouses of Venice were never so well stocked as when her galleys carried terror along the shores of the Levant. The great DORIA was the Admiral of Genoa when her factories lined the banks of the Dannbe from Orsova to Sulina, and when her forts crowned every height on the shores of the Euxine. The Dutch were never so wealthy and so absorbed in traffic as when they were lords of the Spice Islands, and masters of the Southern Ocean, and when their fleets ascended the Thames with a broom at the mast-head. The Portuguese carried threatenings and slaughter to the four corners of the earth, when Lisbon was a great commercial emporium, and when the whole trade of the East Indies found its way in Portuguese bottoms round the Cape of Good Hope. In more modern times the growth of the British Empire has been commensurate with the growth of its commerce. Hindostan, the Cape of Good Hope, Gibraltar, Canada, Malta, and the West India Islands, have been acquired at the cannon's mouth, not in days of feudal barbarism, but in the presence of prodigious mercantile enterprise and activity. Are we, too, whose traders have their flags in every port, and whose citizens are engrossed in money-making to a degree almost unknown elsewhere, remarkable for moderate desires, for limited expectations, for philosophical indifference to the expansion of our territory, or to the temptations of military glory?

Every one of the cases we have above cited is much more favorable to the arguments of those who see in commerce a guarantee against aggression, than any example which Russia is likely to afford. In Holland, Portugal, England and America, the growth of commerce has been due to the people and the people alone. The movement which drove the Dutch and Portuguese adventurers to the antipodes in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, and built up the American and English commercial navies in the Eighteenth, was a movement due to a national impulse alone, and sustained by the courage, enterprise and greed of the masses. The new mercantile development in Russia, if it exist at all, is of the government, governmental, and is likely to prove just as much a department of State as the Police or the Custom-House. To expect a commercial enterprise so fostered, and so managed, to prove aught better than a gigantic "land transport" and commissariat organization, in aid of new wars and new invasions, would, with our knowledge of Russian policy and Russian antecedents, be as absurd as to look for grapes on thorns, or figs on thistles. We are, therefore, in the interest of the honest, industrious traders of all free commercial countries, heartily glad to find that the English capitalists will have nothing to do with the great Russian railway loan.

ONE OF THE LOST ARTS.—Among the most important of the arts, which our ancestors appear to have had a knowledge of, but which, unhappily, is lost to us, is that of Municipal Government.

There is a tradition that our City was once well governed, that Aldermen were capable, and public officers honest; that the streets were kept in good condition, and every member of the Government, from the Mayor down to the policeman, did his duty. We could not specify the precise date when these halcyon days of Municipal Government terminated; but nothing is more certain than the fact that, if the art of City Government ever was perfectly well known and practised, it is now entirely lost. Happily for us, the art of self-government is still understood, or we should be in a hopeless condition of anarchy.

To such an extreme point of looseness and confusion have things now been reduced, that even the policemen, who are our last hope in time of disorder, do not know what they are about, nor whom to obey. On Monday last, as our readers are aware, Captain CARPENTER, of the Fifth Ward Police, gave in his adhesion to the new Commissioners of Police, and determined to obey their direction; whereupon the Mayor proceeded to depose him, and invested a Second Lieutenant with the baton of command. But the Captain refused to yield his authority, and both he and his subordinates issued their commands to the men, who were entirely at a loss whom to obey. The Mayor dispatched a squad of men to enforce his orders, but there was no collision between the two opposing forces, and at the last accounts both parties remained in quiet possession of the field. But the art of enforcing the law seems to have been lost by our civic authorities, and disorder of a very mild type appears to pervade all parts of the City Government.

Cruel Treatment of Sailors—A Practical Question.

In the latter part of April last, the packet ship Cultivator arrived at this port from Liverpool. Her crew of twenty-four men, lame and stiff, covered with sores and bruises, presented a frightful appearance. Immediately on arrival they made complaint against the officers of the ship, for cruel treatment on the voyage home. On this complaint the Captain and the first and second mates of the ship were arrested—the third mate escaping over the ship's side into a boat, when the United States Marshal came aboard to make the arrests. After a brief examination of the prisoners, which has recently been concluded before the United States Commissioner's Court, in this City, the complaint of the seamen was dismissed on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to sustain it.

We have no disposition to carp at the decision of the Court in this particular case. But in view of the remarkable fact that nearly every case of a like character, which has ever come under our observation, has been dismissed just as this was, we cannot help asking, What is that "sufficient evidence" which is necessary to establish a complaint of this kind? This is certainly a proper inquiry at the present time, when the frequency of these complaints has become so notorious as to attract to them an unusual degree of attention on both sides of the Atlantic. We hear, from every quarter, of cruelties practiced upon seamen on board American ships. The cases on board the Guy Mannering and the James L. Bogert, which were recently investigated by the Liverpool Courts, and which were not dismissed, as similar cases have been dismissed here, by that subterfuge about "sufficient evidence"—but which were prosecuted to the just punishment of the offenders—are yet fresh in our memory. It is not necessary, however, to cross the Atlantic to find these instances of barbarity. Nearly every ship from Liverpool that drops anchor in this port, brings home a crew whose persons have been bruised, battered and mauled on the high seas. These cruelties have been inflicted either by the sailors themselves upon one another, or by the officers of the ship. The men suffering them, immediately on arrival in port, charge them upon the officers, who, being arrested if they do not succeed in running away, are brought before the Court to answer the charge, but are, some how or other, invariably acquitted of it on the plea that there is not "sufficient evidence."

Again we ask, what is "sufficient evidence?" It is true in nearly every one of the cases complained of—and in the case of the Cultivator there was ocular demonstration of the fact—that the complainants have been most inhumanly treated by somebody—a treatment which we cannot suppose they inflicted on themselves. They describe minutely the various methods in which they were tortured;—how they were bayed by bulldogs, stunned by slung-shot, battered with belaying pins, hammered with steel knuckles, maimed by pistol balls; how their naked bodies were scoured in salt water with coarse canvas, until the skin was chafed away and the raw flesh appeared; how their limbs were smeared with slush; their heads shaved and dressed with tar; how every man in the forecastle was kicked and cuffed, racked and starved, day after day on the voyage—by somebody. They show their scars and wounds yet bleeding; and they affirm unanimously that all these barbarities were perpetrated by the officers of the ship; with whom, as the crew of the Cultivator said, "it was nothing but knock down and knock down and maul the whole voyage!" Yet, strange to say, these half-murdered men obtain no redress at the law. Their complaint is dismissed for want of "sufficient evidence;" and they are carried back to their hospital, while their brutal bullies return to their ships to enact the same tragedies upon another crew, to be arrested on other complaints, and to be again set free. For, in the judgment of our tribunals, there appears never to be any "sufficient evidence" to convict masters and mates of our packet ships for the barbarities which they may happen to practice upon their men!

If it is forever to be allowed that the sailor,—ignorant and debased if you will have it so,—has no standing in a Court of Justice; that the unskillful testimony which he gives in regard to his cruel treatment is not to be credited, even when it is corroborated by the scars and wounds yet visible on his person; if it is to be forever claimed, by all the great respectability of the quarter-deck, that a sailor is not a man, not a moral being, but only a dog,—then we may despair of ever seeing any improvement in the character of our crews, or any elevation of the standard of our seamanship. The Chamber of Commerce, startled by public opinion, may wipe its spectacles and mull over the matter till doomsday; but the cruelty will thrive as vigorously as ever, so long as our merchants ignore it, our shipmasters deny it, and our Courts can find no "sufficient evidence" of its existence.

It must be acknowledged that sailors are a persecuted race, and being so it is no wonder that they should become, what they are accused of being by their persecutors, a brutal and degraded race. Their present condition and the relation which exists between them and their official superiors, is a fit subject for legislative action. There is no class of men that now needs the aid of civilized law more than they. When has this law ever befriended them? When did any sailor succeed any better in seeking redress for cruelties, than did those poor fellows who were half murdered by somebody on board the packet-ship Cultivator!

THE COLLISION AT SEA.—In noticing on Monday the recent collision in the Irish Channel between the ships Andrew Foster and Tuscarora, by which the former was lost, it was stated that the ships "were standing through the crowded Channel on opposite tacks, under full sail, no lights up, and very likely no look-outs on the forecastle." We are informed on good authority that so far as the Andrew Foster was concerned, this statement conveys an erroneous impression. Her crew were aloft shortening sail at the time of the accident:—and the light of the Tuscarora was distinctly perceived on the weather bow. The latter ship, instead of keeping her course as she was bound to do, which would have carried her to windward of the Andrew Foster, kept away to cross her bow and was thus brought into collision with her. So far as our statement imputed blame to the Captain of the Andrew Foster, we were misled by the reports in the English papers.

Major McCullough Declines the Governorship of Utah—A Western Man Offered the Place—The Steam Revenue-Cutter Contract Awarded, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 19.

The Revenue-cutter contract has been awarded to WILLIAM H. WEBB, of New-York. X. Y. Z.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 19.

A member of the Cabinet to-day received a telegraphic dispatch from Major MCCULLOCH, declining the Governorship of Utah. He, however, expects to reach this city in the course of ten days.

It is not true that Judge DRUMMOND has been offered the appointment, but this afternoon a telegraphic dispatch was sent to a Western man, whose name is officially concealed for the present, tendering it to him. Recent information has caused a change in the policy hitherto contemplated, the condition of Utah now being such as to require vigorous measures. Troops in large numbers will be sent thither, probably under command of Gen. HARNEY. The Administration is anxious to at once act in this important manner, especially in view of the late obstruction to judiciary proceedings, and accounts frequently received relative to oppressions by the Mormons of those who do not belong to their fraternity.

Much excitement has existed, for several days past, in the Pension Bureau, in consequence of the alleged discovery of extensive frauds. Commissioner WHITING, after close investigation, found no proofs of venality, but discovered that a clerk therein had extended undue facilities to an agent for claims, some of which were improperly allowed, and required the clerk to resign his office.

A letter from WM. DENNISON, Indian Agent, represents the accounts of Pawnee depredations to be much exaggerated. These Indians (8,000 or 4,000 in number) are in a starving condition, and retaliated upon the whites for supposed wrongs. In the Council which DENNISON held with them, they did not deny that some young men of their tribe were guilty of misdemeanors, but none of so serious a nature as to warrant the whites in taking the life of one of their chiefs.

They said they were willing to make a treaty to be placed on an equal footing with the Otoes, Missourians and Omahas.

ALGERNON S. GARNETT, of Virginia, has been appointed an Assistant-Surgeon, and CHARLES A. DAVIS, Chaplain in the Navy.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, May 18, 1857.

The interest which the present Administration has taken in the Tehuantepec route, to secure to us the shortest and most speedy communication between the Atlantic and Pacific, will soon be made manifest by the publication of certain documents, now being prepared by the State Department. The advantages of this route are well known, and our relations with Mexico, (especially at this time,) are such as to afford us all the facilities that we may ask or require, besides those already granted to the contractors who have lately finished the plank road. We have assurances that Mexico will cede to us an uninterrupted transit on this route, which will make us entirely independent of New Granada; and our difficulties with that petty Republic cannot therefore impede our commerce and transit to the Pacific by the railroad route.

Speaking of Mexico, it is said that ex-Gov. RODMAN M. PRICE, of New-Jersey, will be appointed Minister to that Republic. It is thought that Col. JOHN T. PICKETT, the present Consul at Vera Cruz, will be retained, unless the influence of Mr. HARGOUS shall prevail so as to give him the Consul and Minister again, to secure his interests in Mexico. This would indeed be deeply regretted by the American residents in Mexico, with whom the HARGOUS' are anything but popular.

Rev. Mr. CUMMINS, of Trinity Church, this City, in a most impressive and eloquent sermon, yesterday, took occasion to reprehend parents for permitting the introduction of demoralizing French literature in their families, as productive of the greatest evil. He also denounced some of the New-York press for the publication of the most obscene testimony in certain criminal cases, which tended as much to demoralize, poison, and corrupt the youth of the country, by its circulation, as the worst pollution. He was afraid to let such journals come into his house, as they were only fit for the fiends to read.

Mr. BUCHANAN did not appear on Saturday last at the music in the President's grounds. He was too fatigued, and wished to escape from the bites of the political leeches who still hang on here. Both the friends and enemies of Mr. BUCHANAN give him credit for his frank up-and-down courteous manner. He holds out no false hopes, and tells office-seekers at once what they may depend on. There is none of the weak, vacillating hypocrisy of PIERCE about him—who held out flattering, but delusive hopes to every man. Last week, it is said, he told a Hoosier, who aspired to go abroad, in his most bland and affectionate manner, that he had better go back to his plow, as it was much preferable in honor and respectability, and more certain of support.

The bids for the contract for building the Revenue Cutter Steamer are expected to be opened by Secretary COBB to-day. This has created much excitement among the New-York shipbuilders, on account of the competition. It is said that Mr. STERRS, the brother of the celebrated naval architect, will probably get the contract.

THE KANSAS AID RESOLUTIONS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE—EMBEZZLEMENT.

BOSTON, Tuesday, May 19.

The Senate to-day passed to their engrossment the resolves appropriating $10,000 from the State Treasury to the aid of the Free-State settlers of Kansas with an amendment providing that the opinion of the Supreme Court shall be obtained in favor of the constitutionality of the appropriation before a dollar can be drawn from the Treasury.

Serious Accident at Sandusky—Death of E F. Osborne.

SANDUSKY, Monday, May 18.

A sad accident occurred here this morning, on a vessel being built by Capt. DIBBLE. The mast broke and fell, severely injuring five men, named CHARLES MCKINNEY, JOHN POTTER, Capt. DIBBLE, JOHN HILL and GEORGE LITTLEJOHN. POTTER died this afternoon, and MCKINNEY will probably not live till morning. The others are not dangerously injured.

CHURCH BURNT AT POTTSDOWN.

POTTSDOWN, Tuesday, May 19.

A fire broke out about 12 o'clock last night in the shed of the Universalist Church in this place, and notwithstanding all efforts to extinguish it, destroyed the church, the Town Hall and a dwelling-house. The Town Hall was insured.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT TOLEDO.

TOLEDO, Tuesday, May 19.

The Elevators and Grain house of the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad Company were destroyed by fire this morning. Loss, $40,000; insured, $20,000. A quantity of produce, &c., was burned. Loss not ascertained.

Meeting Against Mob Law at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, May 19.

A meeting of citizens was held at the Court-House, to-day, against mob law. ANDREW MUNROE presided. Resolutions were passed in favor of supporting the civil authorities and to enforce the laws, and for forming military companies, none being organized here.

PROGRESS OF OUR MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONS.

The Metropolitan Police.

The new Police Commissioners had another meeting yesterday at SIMEON DRAPER'S office in Pine-street. All the members were present except Mr. STRANAHAN, (who is yet indisposed,) and the ex-officio members, Mayors WOOD and POWELL.

The New-York members of the Board were appointed a Committee to arrange the rules for the management of witnesses in accordance with section 14 of the new act.

The President reported that he had engaged the house No. 98 White-street as a permanent meeting place for the Board and an office for the Superintendent.

Notices of charges of insubordination against policemen HORRIGAN, (lately appointed by the old Commission Captain,) EVANS and FILES of the Fifth Ward, were ordered to be sent to the accused, whose trial was set down for Friday.

A communication was received from the Board of Supervisors notifying the Commissioners that the number of patrolmen under the new Charter had been reduced to five members.

President DRAPER then read the following reply to the late letter of Mayor WOOD, and it was unanimously adopted:

REPLY OF THE COMMISSIONERS TO MAYOR WOOD.

OFFICE OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE COMMISSIONERS, New York, May 19, 1857.

Sir: I recognize your letter of the 16th inst., and have submitted it to the consideration of the Board of Police Commissioners, who direct me to reply, respectfully, that they cannot assume to themselves the power to agree to suspend the operation of the public law, to the end that any captious constitutional questions may in the meantime be litigated, as you propose, because the peace and security of our fellow-citizens would be jeopardized, and without any lawful protection.

Fortunately for our citizens, although the powers vested in the Chief Executive of this city are as numerous as they are important, yet they are not supreme, nor quite absolute, having until now been regarded as subordinate to the legislative and constitutional power of the State. While, therefore, we cannot assume a power which we do not possess, to suspend, resist, or abrogate the public law, as you propose to us, we cannot, without culpable dereliction of duty we have sworn to perform, recognize any power vested in you, either to propose or to enter into such a compact.

In obeying the laws, we seek their authority for the exercise of every power which we assume, and repudiate every act which this test will not justify. The capricious will of despotism is the law of tyrants to which our fellow-citizens are yet not much accustomed.

The achievement which you inform us that you have performed, in placing the constitutionality of a law sanctioned by the Legislature and Executive Departments of the State, and which, in your superior wisdom, you "firmly believe is not law," "on the road to a speedy disposition in the Court of Appeals," (which we hope is not intended to imply the exercise of an improper influence on your part over its proceedings and progress,) is worthy of historic consideration; but your assumption that the case will be argued next month in that Court, and a final decision had, is as destitute of delicacy as it is also of power. It is upon this ground that you desire to enter into compact with this Board, to suspend and prevent the execution of a public law, and prolong the exercise of your patronage and powers without any law, because you "firmly believe that the act of the Legislature is not law," thus setting up your single belief in opposition to that of the legislative wisdom of the State, and leaving the safety of our City and citizens to depend upon your "belief" as to what is or is not law. If every citizen and every administrative officer should follow and adopt your example, and undertake to determine what laws are constitutional and what he would obey, execute, or defy, it needs no oracle to tell us that our City would be in a state of confusion if not conflagration, and yet every citizen or administrative officer has the same right to resist which you claim to have, merely by constituting himself "a power in the State," and sitting in judgment upon the constitutionality of "laws," of the principles and construction of which he is profoundly ignorant.

This Board do not mean, however, to question your own wisdom and attainments as a constitutional lawgiver, nor to make any invidious comparisons between that wisdom and those attainments which have resulted from your experience in municipal statesmenship, and the wisdom collected in the two Houses of the Legislature, and the Executive of the State; but you will, we think, excuse us from being guided by it in the execution of the laws, as well as in the discharge of the duties plainly incumbent upon us by those laws.

You are misled by a commendable zeal to defend yourself, when you assume that this Board deem it prudent to anticipate the decision which you have "placed on its road," "by active movements against the present administration of the Police Department," because it is the law which you wish us to conspire against with you to suspend, (without any power in either of us,) which acts steadily against your assumptions over that administration. We have not, and do not propose to act against the administration of that department, but, on the contrary, as far as our action has extended, we have performed the agreeable duty of conferring upon that organization the power and shield of protection which we are authorized to confer, and we should have derived a peculiar satisfaction if you, as an ex-officio member of our Board, had united with us in the act, instead of presenting yourself to the world in a hostile attitude against the legislative and executive power of the State. This bad example has already had influence enough to bring forward some silly imitators; but recent appearances indicate that they are already ashamed of their position. This Board, therefore, hope that upon more cool consideration, with a due regard to the dignity of the station you occupy, you will submit to the law, like all other good citizens, giving the glory and benefit of your ex-officio aid and experience to carry into effect its provisions, until the Courts, in your stead, shall solemnly pronounce them to be unconstitutional.

This Board concur entirely with you in deprecating a conflict of power between themselves as the servants of the law, and yourself as Mayor of this metropolis, and they cannot believe that you will so far disregard your obligations to obey the laws of our country as to set them at defience by your own authority, and substitute the rule of your own will without law. The effort to justify such a defiance by the instructions of the Common Council, will not surprise any one, since unlawful resistance to the laws always commences under the semblance of some authority. We need not refer you to the historic examples of this which are recently familiar.

The Board are profoundly impressed with a sense of their obligations to you for your generous efforts to instruct them in their new and complex duties, by the light of your varied experience, for the next two months, and they will gladly avail themselves of the advantage so liberally offered to them, if you will consent to do it in a practical instead of a theoretic way, by coming yourself ex officio into our Board as one of its members, in conformity with the law; where we can look you and our duties in the face at the same time, and perform them under your protection and influence. We are satisfied that the confidence of our fellow-citizens in this security of the department would thus be increased, and the exercise of authority without the power and the sanctions of the law would be avoided.

[SIGNED BY THE COMMISSIONERS.]

FERNANDO WOOD, Esq., Mayor, &c., New-York.

The Commissioners then adjourned to 10 o'clock this forenoon, when the trial of Mr. MATSELL will begin.

Matters at the Fifth Ward Station-house went quietly on yesterday. Capt. CARPENTER called the roll at sunrise, and assigned the patrol-men their beats. No objection was made to the proceeding. Capt. HORRIGAN was not present. The two Captains seem resolved to give and take, and First-Lieutenant MARTIN is acting, and will act, the part of a peacemaker. But yet it is expected that, before many days, the orders of the rival Captains must clash, and one of them be forced to retire.

Captain HORRIGAN made his report of arrests, yesterday, to the Chief MATSELL, while Captain CARPENTER sent his report to Superintendent TALLMADGE. Captain HORRIGAN'S return of lodgers accommodated during the night at the Fifth Ward Station-house, was also sent, yesterday, to the office of the new Superintendent; but this, it is said, was done through mistake.

Capt. LETTS, of the Seventh Ward, sent a note yesterday to Chief MATSELL, in which he contradicts the statement published in yesterday's TIMES, that he had been accused by Capt. MCGEE of conspiring to further the power of the new Commissioners. Capt. LETTS says that he is resolved "to obey only such orders as emanate from the honorable gentlemen elected in accordance with the Constitution of the State of New-York to discharge the duties of Police Commissioners; that is to say, Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor; A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge; JAMES M. SMITH, Jr., Recorder."

The Brooklyn Police—Five of the Captains Give in their Allegiance.

The Mayor of Brooklyn and the Deputy Superintendent of Police, are still at loggerheads. The Mayor is sorely disappointed at not being backed up in his position by the Common Council, that body in fact and in effect giving him the cold shoulder, and intends to await events before taking further action.

Five of the nine Captains of Police in the City have decided to act under the new law. The four who decline to do so assume that they are disqualified by the new law. The Captains who have obeyed the law are: Captain SMITH, First District; Captain GUICHARD, Fifth District; Captain STILWELL, Seventh District; Captain COMUS, Eighth District; Captain MILLER, Ninth District.

The Mayor counts Captain MULLEN as opposed to the law, but in this he is doubtless mistaken. He is one of the two Captains who read the Rules and Regulations to the men, as directed by the Deputy Superintendent, on the day the order was received. The other Captain was COMBS, of the Eighth District.

The Captains who stand out against the law are: Captain RINO, Second District; Captain CASS, Third District; Captain POWERS, Fourth District; Captain MULLEN, Sixth District. All of these Captains made their returns as usual to the Office of the Superintendent, yesterday morning.

A large majority of the policemen are openly in favor of the new order. In one District, (the Fifth, Captain GUISOBARN'S,) a votes was taken yesterday, which resulted as follows: for the law, 20; against it, 13.

Several of the Captains of police called upon the Mayor yesterday morning, when considerable pains were taken to impress it upon their minds that they would be summarily proceeded with if they obeyed the new law. The Deputy Superintendent reported to the Commissioners in New-York yesterday morning, and had a long interview relative to the state of the Department in Brooklyn, and it is understood has received the requisite instructions how to proceed in case the Mayor should interfere in the management of the police.

The Excise Commissioners.

NO APPLICATIONS FOR LICENSE—MEMORIAL FROM THE CITY TEMPERANCE ALLIANCE.

The two Excise Commissioners, Messrs. WM JAY HASKETT and JOHN KERR, who still hold on to their appointments, met yesterday, at 3 P. M., at the Common Pleas Court-room, City Hall, to enter upon the duties of their office under the new law. Both the Commissioners took their place on the Judge's bench, when Mr. HASKETT called the assemblage to order. The assemblage at this time, not counting the corps of Reporters present, comprised four individuals. Of these, one was Janitor of the Court-room, who was busily engaged in trying to get up a fire in the stove, and two were Clerks of the Court, occupied in writing up the day's calendar. The fourth individual was an outsider, who had attended the meeting on veritable business.

Order established, Mr. HASKETT announced that they had met in pursuence of the statute requiring them to meet on the "second Tuesday of May." They were ready to enter upon their duties at once, which was to view applications for license, if any had such applications to present, they were solicited to present them.

No one offering a petition, Mr. C. J. WARREN, Secretary of the New-York City Temperance Alliance, asked if he might present a communication.

Mr. HASKETT said that any communications would be received which had reference to granting licenses.

Mr. WARREN, therefore, presented the following memorial:

To the Commissioners of Excise for the City of New-York:

GENTLEMEN: The New-York City Temperance Alliance respectfully ask the Commissioners to rule as follows:

1. That there must be two distinct forms of license, one for taverns, and one for retail stores, and that the minimum price for a license be fixed at $250.

2. That all applicants for a tavern license be required to declare, under oath, that when last they wore licensed, they did not keep on their premises any implements for gaming, and that they did not keep their places of business open for the free and promiscuous sale of liquor on Sunday, and that he has the legally required accommodations for entertaining travelers.

3. That the petition for a tavern license, which is to be signed by the twenty freeholders, must contain an affidevit from each of them that he is a freeholder of this State, and a resident of the election district, and has not signed any other petition.

4. That the verification of the petition by the subscribing witness is not sufficient, unless it contains the affidavit of said witness that he knows each of the twenty signers, and knows each to be a bona fide freeholder of this State, and an actual resident of the election district where the tavern is proposed to be kept, and that he saw each and all of them write their names to the petition.

Respectfully submitted in behalf of the New-York City Temperance Alliance.

C. J. WARREN, Corresponding Secretary.

NEW-YORK, May 19, 1857.

Mr. HASKETT stated that the memoriel was respectfully received.

Mr. WARREN desired to speak more fully upon the points submitted in the memorial, but Mr. HASKETT said they could not listen to him, while sitting as Commissioners, although they should be happy to hear his suggestions when not acting in an official capacity.

Additions were gradually made to the assemblage. As each new comer showed himself, Mr. HASKETT renewed his announcement that they were now prepared to receive applications for license. This was reiterated at intervals of less than a minute each, till 10 o'clock, but without calling out any response. At 10 o'clock A. M., his Honor, Justice INGRAHAM, walked in. He was greeted by the two Commissioners with marked politeness, and he responded with no less. The two Commissioners conferred with the Justice a few moments, when Mr. HASKETT stated that they would adjourn their Board till 11 o'clock, at which hour they were promised by the Justice the use of the Court-room.

At 11 o'clock, the Commissioners resumed their places—again called the assemblage to order, and again, for nearly an hour, at close intervals, repeated the announcement of their readiness to renew applications for license. But there was never a response. It was finally stated that the blank forms of application for license, and the necessary petition to accompany the same, could be obtained, after Thursday next, at the different offices of the Commissioners, when an adjournment was declared till Saturday, at 11 o'clock, at the same place.

The following is the letter of Mr. HAWE, declining the appointment of Excise Commissioner:

NEW-YORK, Saturday, May 16, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I would acknowledge my obligation to you, for the honor done me in the selection of my name as one of the Commissioners of Excise for the County of New-York, particularly as it was unsolicited by me. And it was in the spirit of an earnest desire to respond to your partiality by an acceptance, that I, instead of immediately declining it, as was my wish, took the matter into careful consideration.

Reflection, however, has but served to strengthen my first impressions. I must, therefore, beg leave most respectfully to decline the appointment.

I am, gentlemen, yours, most respectfully,

ROBERT T. HAWE.

Hon. D. T. INGRAHAM, JAMES M. SMITH.

A meeting of the Judge and Recorder, to whom the letter is directed, will be held on Saturday next, to appoint a new Commissioner.

KINGS COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF EXCISE.

This Board met yesterday pursuant to law and received some 75 applications for licenses. The Board will meet every day for six days to receive applications, and the last four days of the ten days allowed by law in which to transact their business will be devoted to granting licenses. The rate of license is fixed at $50 each for grocers and tavern keepers.

The Central Park Commissioners.

The Board of Central Park Commissioners held a meeting at 3 P. M., yesterday, at the office of R. J. DILLON, Esq. Excepting Mr. RUSSELL all the members of the Board were present. The Commissioners still insist on holding their meetings in private.

The only subject of interest talked over was relative to the purchase of the State Arsenal, its grounds located within the Central Park boundaries. A resolution was passed declaring their intention to adhere to their previous action as to the purchase of the same, and that legal notice of such action be given at once to the Adjutant-General, the Inspector-General and the Commissary-General—they being the Commissioners named in the bill that passed the last Assembly authorizing the sale of the State Arsenals at New-York and Albany.

Several applications of minor importance, for doing the work required in laying out of the Central Park, were received and referred to committees to report upon the same.

For the future meetings of the Board, it was announced that rooms had been obtained in the building of the Bank of Commerce. The Finance Committee were directed to have them properly furnished.

Mercantile Library Election.

The annual election of officers of this Institution took place yesterday. A lively time was kept up between the partisans of the regular ticket and the opposition or "reform" ticket. The regular ticket was thus cast:

For President,
ROWLAND H. TIMPSON.....with Philip Dater & Co.
For Vice-President,
ALEXANDER P. FISKE.....with McBride Brothers.
For Corresponding Secretary,
HENRY L. PIERSON, Jr.....with Pierson & Co.
For Recording Secretary,
JOSEPH F. HANFORD.....with Martin & Lawson.
For Treasurer,
WILLIAM HENDERSON.....with Continental Bank.
For Directors,
Charles T. Adee.....with James Wilde, Jr., & Co.
Alfred Lockwood.....with Livingston, Ballard & Co.
Chas. M. Catlin.....with Chastelain, Ponvert & Co.
W. M. Purdy.....with Grinnell, Minturn & Co.
Henry E. Russell....with Russel & Erwin Man'fg Co.
Geo. Jeweeson.....with Corning & Co.
A. F. Eno.....with Eno, Roberts & Co.

It was indorsed by six ex-presidents, and by a large number of leading members of the Institution. It was the ticket, in fact, of the regular report, which set forth that the Institution was never in such a flourishing condition as at present, the number of members being 5,100,—the largest number ever reported, while 8,000 volumes had been added to the library, and more than 100 newspapers and periodicals to the reading-room. According to the supporters of this ticket, everything is couleur de rose in the library. And such, there is no reason to doubt, is the case.

The opposition ticket was as follows:

For President,
ROWLAND H. TIMPSON.....with Philip Dater & Co.
For Vice-President,
R. A. BACHIA.....with Williams & Stevens,
For Corresponding Secretary,
JOHN S. DUNNING.....with Phenix Bank.
For Recording Secretary,
JACOB L. HALSEY.....with Manhattan Life Ins. Co
For Treasurer,
AUGUSTUS M. SCRIBA.....with Metropolitan Bank
For Directors,
Chas. T. Adee.....with James Wilde, Jr. & Co.
Edward C. Taylor.....with Street Commissioner.
J. Thompson Young.....with W. J. Print Works.
Amos F. Eno.....with Eno, Roberts & Co.
Chas. H. Weidner.....with Mott Iron Works
James R. Boyd.....with Boyd & Hincken
Wm. M. Pardy.....with Grinnell, Minturn & Co.

It will be noticed that several names are the same on both tickets. The advocates of this "reform" or opposition ticket, aver that the Mercantile Library is in a state of decay, the members being annually on the decrease, and the resources of the Institution being exhausted in the purchase of books.

This opposition ticket was defeated, the first ticket being victorious. The statement that the Library was badly managed was merely an election dodge of the defeated party.

Personal.

Ex-President PIERCE arrived in this City yesterday in the 2 o'clock train from Philadelphia, where he has been sojourning for some weeks to enable Mrs. PIERCE to receive the medical attendance of eminent practitioners in that city. He is a guest of our esteemed fellow-citizen Hon. HAMILTON FISH, at whose house he will remain for a few days. His Secretary, SIDNEY WEBSTER, is at the old head-quarters of the Ex-President, the Astor House.

Obituary.

MARTIN HOFFMAN, Esq., a member of the firm of L. M. HOFFMAN & Co., Auctioneers, and a man of enviable repute in the commercial circles of New-York, died at his residence in Mamaroneck, on the morning of the 17th inst., in the 62d year of his age.

THE WEATHER.—We had a sort of January thaw yesterday, with heavy rain from 10 o'clock, on. With boots that reached the thighs, and a rubber raglan over the surtout, and a stiff, stout umbrella, the traveling was tolerable—in the cars. In doors' fires of Liverpool coal were appreciated.

☞ A little boy named EAGAN, between four and five years of age, has been missing from his home at No. 252 East Fourteenth street since Saturday last, when he went to play with some other boys who are unable to give any satisfactory account of him. He is supposed to be drowned. He was the only son of a widowed mother, who implores any one able to give any tidings of him to direct to Mrs. HARRIET EAGAN, No. 252 East Fourteenth-street.

DAILEY'S.
The topic most discussed at the present time is the great bargains offering by Messrs. DAILEY & CO., Nos. 631 and 633 Bowery. They give a white dinner set for $16, a white toilet set for $8, a dozen of silver-plated table spoons for $3 75, and a dozen of cut-glass goblets for $1 75. See a further list in the dry goods column of this paper.

IT IS TRUE.
We have been there and proved it. Messrs. DAILEY & CO., Nos. 631 and 633 Broadway, do sell the cheapest Chinn, glass, gas fixtures and silver-plated ware in this City. For further particulars, we refer you to their advertisement in the Dry Goods column of this paper.

WAKEFIELD.—THE MEMBERS OF INDUSTRIAL Home Association, No. 3, who have not paid in full for their lots, are hereby notified that all lots not paid for on or before the 14th of May, will be sold at auction at No. 163 Bowery, on the evening of that day, at 8 o'clock. The Purchasing Trustee will be at No. 163 Bowery on each THURSDAY EVENING, from 7 to 9 o'clock, until that time, to dispose of surplus property, and receive money.
CORNS. A. COOPER, Purchasing Trustee.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.—IN BUYING such an article as a sewing machine the truest economy is to buy the best. They who purchase SINGER'S machines always get what they want, and use them with satisfaction and profit; while they who buy any of the cheaper and inferior machines in the market are sure to suffer disappointment, vexation and loss.
I. M. SINGER & CO.,
No. 323 Broadway.

CARPETING.—ROYAL VELVET, 10s. TO 12s. Tapestry Brussels, 7s. 6d., to 9s.; Tapestry Ingrain 8s. to 8s. 6d.; oil cloths, 8 yards wide, for rooms or halls, from 3s. to 10s. the yard. Also, 1,000 pieces Common Ingrain Carpeting from auction, from 2s. to 3s. 6d. the yard; Gold Window Shades, Canton Matting, &c.
J. HYATT, No. 210 Bowery,
Opposite Rivington-st.

RUPTURE.—(MARSH & CO., REMOVED TO NO. 2 Vesey-st., Astor House.)—Only Prize Medal awarded to MARSH & CO., by the Industrial Exhibition of All Nations at the Crystal Palace, for their new Patent Radical Cure Truss. References as to its superiority—Professors Valentine Mott, Willard Parker and John M. Carnochan. Open from 7 A. M. to 9 P. M.

GAS COOKING STOVES AND RANGES.—W. F. SHAW'S patent, combining neatness, economy and convenience. Prices from $6 to $10, with furniture complete, by which cooking can be done at one-half the expense of any other method. Can be seen in operation at GEO. L. CANNON'S, No. 498 Broadway.

CRISTADORO'S HAIR-DYE, WIGS, AND TOUPEES.—To argue in favor of these articles would be folly. This Dye is admitted to be the best in use. Look at the clear browns and the glossy deep blacks it produces. Would nature do better? Impossible. Sold and applied at No. 6 Astor House.

PERSONS GOING TO THE COUNTRY SHOULD provide themselves with India Rubber Gloves for gardening and care of flowers; they keep the hands soft and smooth, and bleach them snowy white. For sale at all Rubber Stores, and at No. 36 John-st., up stairs.

MOTHS.—BREWER'S MOTH-POWDER IS decidedly a superior protection for furs, carpets and all woolen goods. Now is the time to use it. Sold by all the principal druggists.

AUCTION SALES.

ALBERT H. NICOLAY, Auctioneer.

POSITIVE SALE OF THIRTY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS AND A HOUSE AND LOT IN JERSEY CITY, NEAR THE FERRY.—ALBERT H. NICOLAY will sell, without reserve, TUESDAY, June 2d, 1857, at 12 o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange, New-York, thirty good building lots, situated on Steuben-st. and Railroad-av., between Prospect and Warren sts. Also, the valuable lot corner of Prospect and Steuben sts. These lots are suitable for a class of dwellings which are in great demand, also for manufacturing purposes, being located near the ferry, and can be reached in 15 minutes from the foot of Cortlandt-st. Taxes are lower than any other city near New-York, and gas and water have been introduced. Also, the three-story house and lot on the north side of Railroad-av., near Warren-st., with brick first story, with store and extension lot 25x100, house 25x30, now rented for $350 per annum. Terms of sale 10 per cent., and the auctioneer's fee on the day of sale; 20 per cent. on the 1st day of July, when the deeds will be ready, and 70 per cent. can remain on bond and mortgage for 3 years at 6 per cent., or 5 years at 7 per cent., and full warranties deeds will be given. This property comes direct from the Van Vorst estate. On the house and lot 60 per cent can remain at the same rates of interest as above. Parties desirous of purchasing property in this flourishing city should attend the sale, as every lot put up by the auctioneer will positively be sold to the highest bidder, and the title is indispatable For further particulars apply to ALBERT H. NICOLAY, Auctioneer, No. 4 Broad-st.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will ha issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (6th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

Russia.

A telegraphic dispatch from St. Petersburg announces the return of mild weather, with a south wind, and it was therefore expected that the navigation of the Gulf of Finland would shortly generally be reopened.

Persia.

Further hostilities have occurred in Persia. A dispatch had been received stating that the city of Mohammerah was captured by the British on the 26th of April. The enemy lost two hundred, killed and wounded, among whom was Brigadier-General ASHBURNHAM, besides seventeen guns and a vast amount of ammunition and military stores. The Persian army, under SHAH SEADAN, retreated towards Ahevaz and Shuster, in great disorder. The British forces were encamped near Mohammerah. Their loss in killed and wounded was ten. The Arab tribes were friendly, and were sending in their submission.

A telegraphic dispatch from Sir JAMES OUTRAM says a flying expedition to Ahevaz, returned to Mohammerah on the 4th of April, completely successful.

The large Persian Army retired from their position and retreated rapidly towards Dizful before the British force, which was not 400 strong. One gun was captured, and extensive military steres were seized and destroyed.

Latest by Telegraph from London to Liverpool.

LONDON, Saturday morning, May 2, 1857.—The Etna which arrived at Southampton last night, brought the mails of the European and Oneida. The collective mail consists of nearly four hundred boxes and bags.—being the largest mail ever landed at Southampton. The Etna has eighty passengers and twenty six packages of gold of the value of nearly £90,000 st'g. Nearly £50,000 of this gold was on the Oneida, Nearly one hundred passengers left the Etna at Malta to get to England via Marseilles. The Australian passengers were detained nearly three dnye in Egypt, owing to the European arriving at Suez three days before her time.

When the Oneida broke down, although she was only three days by steem from St. George's Sound, it took her seventeen daye to get back. Tue weather at the time was very thick, which prevented the people of the Simla from seeing her.

The Journal de Dresden states upon authority that the ratification of the treaty between England and Persia has been made by the Shah.

DARTMOUTH, Thureday, Mny 7.

The steamer England, for Calcutta, which put in here on the 4th is remaining here, having received some trifling damage to her screw.

The European and Australian Company's steamer Jura, Captain MOODIE, arrived at Southampton yesterday, to be in readiness to convey the Australian overland mails on the 12th inst. She ran from Liverpool to Southampton in 36 hours.

THE ROYAL BRITISH BANK.

The Times, in a leading article, puts some searching questions to Mr. STAPLETON, formerly a Director of the Royal British Bank, and now member of Parliament for Brunswick.

From the Times City Article of Saturday, the 9th instant:

"The funds have entirely recovered the sudden and unexpected depreesion of yesterday. Thirty thousand ponnde were invested in Exchequer bills at par, out of the money received by the Savings Banks from the Exchequer bonds due to day, and an impression entertained that further purchases will be made. The market was likewise strengthened by the operations of the public and hy the steady appearance of the foreign exchanges in the Discount Market and the Bank. The demand for money was very active. A farther sum of about £3,000 of Austrien gold was taken at the Bank to-dey.

"The total retained out of the £200,000 by the Anglesea has heretofore been nearly £170,000. Only a very limited amount of specie has been engaged to be dispatched by the steamer Colombo on the 20th ult.—the total, it is thought, will not exceed £300,000. The mail steamer Brazil to-morrow will take out £250,000 in gold.

The Daily News City Article says that the appearance of the market at the close was very steady. Notwithstanding that the continued demand for money was to-day active and the market rather stringent full prices were exacted. The shares in the Russian Railways were inquired for, and after touching one premium, buyers closed at three-quarters to one premium. The transactions seem to be almost exclusively npon Continental orders, and most observers are of opinion that the demand is not bona fide.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

THE LATE STABBING AFFRAY IN THE FOURTH WARD—FATAL RESULT.—The young man named James O'Donnell, who was stabbed in the abdomen, during a fight with one Michael Hays, in Roosevelt-street, between 10 and 11 o'clock on Sunday night, died of his injuries early yesterday morning at the New-York Hospital. Immediately after the fight, Hays fled to the Fourth Ward Station-house, where he informed the officer in command that he had been assailed and beaten in the street by some men to whom he gave no provocation whatever, and that as his assailants were still about he was afraid to venture home alone, lest they might again attack him. An officer was sent with him, but after traveling some distance the men of whom Hays had spoken were not to be seen, and the officer returned. In a few moments afterwards it was learned at the Station-house that Hays had not been attacked by some men, but that he had just been engaged in a fight with a young man named O'Donnell, whom he stabbed dengerously in the abdomen, and then ran away. An officer was thereupon sent in search of Hays, but he could not be found, and has since evaded arrest. Learning that O'Donnell was in a very critical condition, Coroner Connery proceeded to the Hospital late on Monday night, and took his dying statement. The widowed mother of O'Donnell, a younger brother and two sisters, were at the Hospital at the time, and continued there until death ensued. The mother was in a great state of mental distress, and on learning that it would be requisite to make a post-mortem examination of the body she became almost frantic. She clutched the coffin, and vowed that the body of her dead child should in no wise be mutilated. She would not be pacified, and it was at length found necessary to remove her from the room by force. This only added to her desperation, for she threw herself repeatedly against the door, which had been locked against her; finding her efforts to break in the door of no avail, she demolished all the windows of the room and threatened still further violence. In this she was also joined by her surviving son, who threatened that he would stab the Coroner or the Doctor who attempted to make the post mortem. The scene was a very painful one. A desire was shown to spare the poor woman's feelings as far as possible, and the Coroner inquired of Dr. Noyes whether he could not arrive satisfactorily at the cause of death without making a post mortem. The Doctor replied that he could not with certainty, unless some further examination was made. He thought it would not be absolutely necessary, however, to make a post mortem, and would therefore content himself with a partial examination, and this he did. This had the effect to pacify in a measure the afflicted woman. The following is the dying statement of O'Donnell:

James O'Donnell, being duly sworn, and admonished of the awful consequences which will surely result in appearing before his God with a lie staining his immortal soul, deposes and says: I live in the house corner of Oliver and Cherry streets; last night, between ten and eleven o'clock, there was a muss down near Water street, between two men; I went down and returned again, when I met Michael Hays at the corner of Batavia and Roosevelt streets; we had some words about the two men who were fighting; we both struck each other; I don't know who drew the first blow; both of us fell and when rising up he (Michael Hays) stabbed me with a long knife; he then ran away; in three or four minutes I fell, and let a great quantity of blood; Eugene Sullivan was by at the time, and also John Taylor; I was brought to the New York Hospital, and don't remember anything more; I know I am about to appear before my God, and I solemnly swear I had no knife, and gave no cause that Michael Hays should stab me, as he was the larger man of the two; I am positively sure it was Michael Hays who stabbed me; there was no enmity existing between us previous to this occurrence.

After the examination of several witnesses, the case was adjourned until to-day, when, it is said, some further and very important evidence will be offered. The police of the Fourth Ward are searching for Hays, but it is generally believed he has fled the City, if not the County. O'Donnell, the deceased, was born in Ireland, and was not quite 21 years of age. He resided with his mother at the corner of Oliver and Cherry streets.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT AT RAPE.—Two men, named Patrick McManus and John Moore were arrested yesterday by policemen McDonough and Sullivan, of the Fourth Ward, for an alleged attempt at rape upon Hannah Kilhen, a girl of 14 years, employed as a servant in the house of Mr. Russell, No. 95 Cherry-street. They are locked up for examination to-morrow.

CHARGE OF ARSON.—Francis Guinauss, aged 17 years, is in custody on suspicion of having set fire to the upholstery store of his employers, at No. 83 Sixth-avenue, some time since. Not much damage was done to the store or the stock which it contained. The accused will be detained to await the examination of the Fire Marshal.

SHOOTING.—Edward Pufferer, keeper of a lager-bier saloon at No. 42 Canal-street, was committed to prison yesterday for shooting Michael Starre through the thighe with a pistol on Saturday night, during a disturbence. Starrs is lying at St. Vincent's Hospital. He is badly, though not fatally injured.

CAUGHT HIM.—Jack Dunn, one of the rowdies who, on Monday noon, entered the bar-room of Thomas Clark, at the corner of Chatham and James streets, and made a violent assault upon Edward Sheehan, the bar-keeper, because he refused to furnish them with more liquor when they were already drunk, was yesterday arrested by a Fourth Ward Policeman, and taken before Justice OSBORN, who committed him for trial in default of $500 bail. Arthur Williams, Edward McGibney and Francis F. Cooley, are also in custody for participating in the same affair. One other of the assailants is yet at large. Sheehan was considerably injured, and a large amount of glass ware was destroyed.

After the appointment of several standing committees, and the transaction of other preliminary business, a paper was read by Dr. TYLERS on the "Care of the Violent Insane," which was followed by an interesting distussion of the preeminently important subject of the kind and amount of personal or muscular restraint which is best calculated to promote the comfort and restoration of the insane of all classes. The prevailing opinions of the members of the Association were strongly to the effect that no class of patients should be confined in cells, but in chambers as large and as inviting in their construction as those for the convalescent; that the seclusion of the violent insane, by day, should be infrequent, and generally of the briefest practicable duration; and that neither muscular restraint nor seclusion should ever be subject to the judgment and control of subordinate officers of attendants.

Dr. MCILHENNEY read a paper on "some of the causes that are productive of insanity," which gave rise to a wide and important discussion of the subject of hereditary causes of insanity and those thought to be incident to that deterioration both of mental and physical constitution which is incident to the progress of modern civilization.

Invitations were received from the authorities of the Institutions for the Insane at Bloomingdale and Flushing, L. I., and on Blackwell's Island to visit those establishments, which will be accepted in the course of the week.

This Association is composed of the medical gentlemen having charge of institutions for the insane. Every such establishment on the continent of America is entitled to a representative in the body. It is quietly, voluntarily and hopefully endeavoring to work out the causes, treatment and prevention of insanity.

☞ We were much surprised and gratified the other day by a visit to No. 337 Broadway, where we examined that wonderful invention, the Life-Preserving Shirt, of Mr. C. J. BUNKER. This article is certainly an immense boon to the human race, as almost every one is sometimes exposed to the danger of drowning. These shirts are of white cloth, prepared in a peculiar way, by Mr. BUNKER'S exclusive process, for which patents have been applied in the United States and Europe. No rubber is used in their preparation—they are light, comfortable, may be worn as an undergarment, or carried in the pocket and slipped on at any time over the usual clothing, and inflated in a few moments so as to sustain four or five persons for any length of time in the roughest water. Everybody should be provided with these garments, even if they have only to cross the North or East Rivers; and, if they had been universally in use, we can see how many lives would have been saved at our ferry-slips alone. Officers of vessels are invited to call at the Agency, No. 337 Broadway, and examine. Their cost is trifling.

TO THE GRADUATES OF THE NEW-YORK UNIVERSITY.

CLASSES OF 1840 TO 1856, UNDER JANITOR SMITH'S ADMINISTRATION.—In February of 1856, ex-janitor SMITH was in want of $1,000 to pay off all claims and prevent sale of his goods under execution. The late AUGUSTUS E. KING, graduate, who had charge of his affairs, borrowed from Mr. CHARLES S. WEBB, graduate, this amount, and the ex janitor gave the latter a mortgage for one year. Mr. KING was to pay off the mortgage during that year, but he died in June. This mortgage has been due since March, 1857. Mr. KING'S administrators are anxious to have the money to close his estate. Mr. WEBB writes that "if the money on the mortgage is not paid by the 1st of June, I shall commence a foreclosure." The manner in which the money is appropriated to answer this purpose of cancelling the mortgage, be it more or less than the sum required, will be left, with their permission, to Dr. ROBERT OGDEN DOREMUS, Prof. HOWARD CROSBY and Mr. GEORGE HENRY MOSE, graduates. Contributions sent to No. 66 East Twenty-third-street.

☞ The monster entertainments at PURDY'S National Theatre are overcrowding the house nightly. Last night and Monday evening over one thousand persons had to return home disappointed in gaining admittance. The new drama from COBB'S story, "The Wild Knight, or Unknown Crusader," was applauded throughout most vociferously, and the revival of that grand pantomime, "Asphodel, or the Magic Pen," kept the audience in extacies of delight. Both pieces are to be repeated to night, and the comedietta of "Love in Livery" will conclude the bill.

TUESDAY, May 19—P. M.

The continued good news financially from abroad by the Arago, at this port, and the Niagara, just telegraphed from Halifax, (with Liverpool dates to Saturday, May 9,) and the Bank Statement of this morning, confirm the favorable tone in Money affairs. Demand loans are a little more active to-day, but were readily had at 7 ₱ cent. Discounts without alteration. The additional business to-day in Foreign Bills for the Boston packet was mostly done at 109¼@8⅝ on London. The whole range is called 109¾@109¼ ₱ cent. A large parcel of short-eight London was made against Illinois Central and other Stocks, about $300,000. Francs continue steady at 5.18¾@5.17½. The packet will carry out $900,000 in Bullion on New-York account, about the same as the corresponding steamer from Boston last May. The Arago delivered to-day $185,000 in Spanish Coin.

At the Stock Exchange the excitement was less marked to-day in Cleveland and Toledo shares, but continues in Southern Michigan and Illinois Central. The last named advanced this afternoon to 139½ ₱ cent. cash. New contracts were put out on sellers' option at 138¾@137¾. The steamer to-morrow takes about 4,000 shares off the Street, to supply which there was a good deal of borrowing from outside parties. The fluctuations in Southern Michigan were wide and frequent, the extreme sales being 68@66½, last sales on the Street 67 ₱ cent. The contest against the market for this Road was rendered the more spirited and determined by the near approach of the settlement of contracts, in anticipation of the distribution of the new guaranteed scrip. The general market closed steady, though much overshadowed, for the moment, by the various and conflicting operations in the particular stocks referred to.

The subscription to the Guaranteed Stock of the Southern Michigan will close to-morrow, Wednesday, at 3 o'clock. There was a very numerous additional subscription to-day, mostly from the country, placing the total this afternoon at $5,240,000.

A Board of thirteen Directors for the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company, was elected to-day. The vote polled was the largest ever recorded, the highest number having been 79,124 and the lowest, 40,982. We subjoin a list of the names of the chosen Directors: Cornelius Vanderbilt, Daniel Drew, William C. Wetmore, Francis W. Edmonds, Charles W. Sandford, Horace F. Clark, John Alstyne, Allan Campbell, Horace Brooke, Albert Smith, Nathaniel P. Bailey, Albert J. Akin, John Harper, and Abram B. Baylis.

The export of the leading articles of domestic Produce and Miscellaneous goods, for the week ending this evening, were $1,625,673, against $1,608,969 the corresponding week of last year.

Mr. B. H. TALLMADGE of the Stock Exchange has associated with Mr. GEORGE MANLY, late of the Philadelphia Board, under the style of TALLMADGE & MANLY, Stock Brokers, No. 61 Wall-street.

In the matter of the application for an injunction against the validity of the Albany City Bonds issued to the Northern Railroad, Judge WRIGHT, of the Supreme, Court decides:

1. That the act of 1854, authorizing the loan of the credit of the city of Albany to the Northern Railroad Company, was an exercise of the legitimate power of legislation.

2. That the exercise of this power was not "adverse to the spirit" of the Constitution, so as to authorize the judicial tribunals to call it void.

3. That there is no prohibition in the Constitution against the exercise of such a power by the Legislature.

4. And, therefore, that the remedy for the evils which a large and respectable class of citizens believe to grow out of grants of power to municipal corporations to loan their credit, is not to be found in appeals to the judicial tribunals, but must be sought through other channels.

The Albany Evening Journal remarks that the decision is an able one, reviewing at great length that of Judge ALLEN, in the Rochester City case, and coming to a precisely opposite conclusion.

New-York Daily Times.

VOL. VI.....NO. 1769. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

Mayor Wood's Resistance to the New Police Law—His Late Message.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

To-day, a document directed to me personally, by name, was handed to, or rather served upon, me at my office in this City, by a policeman in uniform, which purports to be a "communication from His Honor the Mayor, FERNANDO WOOD, transmitted to the Common Council of New-York, May 4, 1857," in pamphlet form, headed (Doc. No. 10) pp. 23, and signed "FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor."

By whom this document was so addressed, under what authority or for what purpose, to me as a private citizen, at first glance one would fail to discern; but that it was extensively circulated for some special purpose, is obvious from the fact that the policeman had a large bundle of them, directed in like manner for delivery to other persons.

For what real object then could this most extraordinary procedure have been devised may readily be divined. The ostensible one was probably favorably to impress the community in regard to the personal course of the Mayor in regard to the Metropolitan Police and other so-called obnoxious laws; but the practical effect upon the public mind might be to promote a degree of excitement in it that would lead to anarchy and bloodshed, or to their only proximate and scarcely less deplorable remedy, in the dilemma in which the community is placed in regard to the Police question—a Vigilance Committee.

But, Sir, this paper having been addressed to me personally, a private citizen, having taken no part in the contest for power, now waged by the Mayor against the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, if I have not been made by the Mayor, or some of his partisans, an involuntary party to the contest, I have at least acquired the right publicly to criticise his personal, as well as official course, since the passage of those laws, as a citizen.

As a member of the American Party, I have taken no part either for or against the passage of any of those laws. And while I have not, I frankly confess that it appeared to me, as I believe to a large majority of the citizens of New York, that any change in the police system could not fail to be for the better, according to the old maxim that "When things are at the worst, they needs must mend," but while cherishing this belief, I do not hesitate to say I did and do now condemn what I believe to have been both the political and personal motives of those who promoted the passage of that, and also the passage of some of the other "obnoxious" laws.

What I mean is, Sir, that, even as a politician, I would scorn to build up a party not upon principles, but solely upon the patronage of office, and I as utterly repudiate the attempt of Mayor WOOD to manufacture personal popularity out of the action of the late Legislature, or the Democratic Party—to make political capital out of the License Law, for the next municipal election, by mixing that law with the rest.

The American Party, of which I am a humble member, is not in any way responsible for the passage of any of those acts, whether they be good or bad, constitutional or unconstitutional; nor will it, with my consent, assume the responsibility of siding with either of the other parties in a disgraceful as well as puerile contest for power and patronage, but will, as it does in all other things, patiently abide the result of the issue now pending before the Supreme Court; and soon to be adjudicated by the highest tribunal of this State, the Court of Appeals.

But, Sir, to the text of this document, and to the law, as it is printed in the volume of "Public Acts" of 1857, issued by LITTLE & Co., Albany now before me.

The last paragraph on page 12 of Document No. 10, alluded to, reads, in part, thus;

"It [the law] gives the new Board extraordinary powers in the indirect control of the elections to be held in the four counties, including this City; without its authority NO PERSON SHALL approach within two hundred feet of the POLLS FOR VOTING, except it be its own police agents * * * and in this way one class of voters ARE TO BE kept off or overawed, the rights of another class facilitated, and the tickets boxes to be at the mercy of the men whose past political lives offer no guarantee of regard for the purity of the franchise."

This, Sir, is not only a libel on individuals, but I do not hesitate to say, is false in point of fact, a no such inference, much less construction, could be tortured out of the language of the statute.

But let us quote the language of the statute, (Public Acts, 1857, LITTLE & Co., Albany, ch 569, p. 273. "Elections.")

§ 21. "It shall be the duty of the [new] Board o Police to detail, on the day of any election within th cities of New-York and Brooklyn, at least two patrol men to each election poll, and shall, in and for said cities, appoint all poll-clerks [not inspectors of elections] provided for by law, and shall, in and for said cities, provide ballot-boxes for use at general, special and charter elections, and keep custody of the said boxes, except during the taking, receiving and counting of the votes." [This is the old law also.] "It shall be the duty of the said Board to prevent any booth or box for the distribution of tickets at any election, to be erected or maintained within one hundred and fifty feet of any polling place within said district."

§ 22. "It shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by," &c., &c., "for any person, without justinable or excusable cause," to use personal violence upon any elector in the Metropolitan Police District, or upon any member of the police force thereof, when in the discharge of his duty, or for any such member to neglect making any arrest for an offence against the law of the State, &c.

And that is all, bearing on the points in question, contained in that law.

Now, Sir, a single word upon the question of the constitutionality of this law.

Whatever may be my own opinion as a lawyer is of no moment here, but every tyro in the profession knows that every statute is presumed to be constitutional until the contrary is shown, inasmuch as it presumes innocence until guilt is proven, and upon grounds of public policy. Indeed, a statute is, in fact, constitutional until the question being raised is adversely adjudicated; and there have been and are now on the statute books many laws that when and if attacked, have been and might be declared, either as a whole or only in part, unconstitutional. As in the remarkable instance of the "Missouri Compromise," so called, it being the eighth section of the law of 1820, March 6, authorizing the people of Missouri to form a Constitution, after having been acquiesced in as law for more than thirty years, it has been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court, in the DRED SCOTT case.

And finally, Sir, as I have been indirectly consulted, either personally, politically, or professionally, my advice as a lawyer, without a fee, is, that Mayor WOOD should show his desire to promote the good of the community by obeying the laws of the State, while they remain laws, however obnoxious to criticism or objection in fact, or to himself in person. Yours truly, CIVIS.

ARRIVAL OF THE BLACK WARRIOR—EXPECTED ORDERS TO ATTACK VERA CRUZ—SHORTNESS OF THE SUGAR CROP, ETC.

The United States Mail steamship Black Warrior, Capt. J. W. SMITH, from New-Orleans the 12th, and Havana the 15th, has arrived.

The Warrior experienced heavy gales from N. E. to N. on the 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th.

A report was current at Havana, that the Spanish steamer hourly expected would bring orders for the immediate commencement of hostilities against Mexico, to be opened by a naval attack on Vera Cruz.

The Island continues very healthy.

The Sugar crop is nearly all harvested, and will fall short of last year's crop by about 20 per cent. Prices have still an upward tendency. Stock at Havana and Matanzas 270,000 boxes.

Freights nominal, and no prospects of an improvement this season.

Exchange on New-York at 60 days, 2¼ per cent. discount.

Large Military Force Ordered to Utah—The Governorship—Diplomatic Appointments—Naval Engineers, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 20.

A large military force has been ordered for Utah, to take their position on the Government reserve, forty miles south of Salt Lake City. The new Governor of the Territory has been selected, but has not yet been heard from, and his whereabouts is unknown. Whoever and wherever he may be, it is understood that he was recommended by Mr. BRIGHT, of Indiana.

The Diplomatic Appointments are under consideration, and are all to be disposed of during this month.

Messrs. CASS, BLACK and FLOYD will accept the invitation to the Railroad Excursion to St. Louis. Mr. CASS will go to Michigan, and be absent about a month.

Mr. MORSE, Special Minister to New-Granada, is detained at New-Orleans by sickness in his family. There is nothing new relative to the New-Granada matter; but as Mr. BOWLIN was ordered to withdraw unless the new Government of that country should exhibit a more amicable disposition, it is probable that the next packet will bring either him or favorable advices.

Communication from Governor King—Coroner Connery not to be Dismissed.

The following communication was received yesterday morning by the District-Attorney from Gov. KING:

STATE OF NEW-YORK;
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
ALBANY, Tuesday, May 19, 1857.

DEAR SIR: I am directed by the Governor to transmit to you the inclosed copy of a letter, addressed by him to HENRY L. CLINTON, Esq., upon the subject of certain charges against EDWARD DOWNES CONNERY, Coroner of the County of New-York.

Very respectfully,
HENRY J. SEAMAN, Private Secretary.
A. OAKEY HALL, District-Attorney, New-York.

STATE OF NEW-YORK.
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Albany, May 18, 1857.

SIR: After a careful examination of the testimony taken before Judge DALY, of the Court of Common Pleas in the City of New-York, in the matter of certain charges preferred by you against EDWARD DOWNES CONNERY, a Coroner of the County of New-York, I arrive at the conclusion that this testimony does not sustain the charges, and therefore they must be dismissed, as unproved. Of the unbecoming and flippant manner of the Coroner in conducting parts of the inquest, and of the great indignity of causing the person of a woman to be stripped and examined by a man for the purpose of ascertaining if there were external marks of violence, there should be no difference of opinion; but these do not constitute such a willful abuse of authority as to call for the exercise of the power of removal intrusted to the Executive discretion; as a matter of fact, moreover, there is the testimony of the woman herself, that this examination of her person "was delicately conducted, and that there was no indecent exposure." The presence in the room during the examination, of other men, is proven to have been without any order, or so far as appears, knowledge, on the part of the Coroner. As to the alleged excess of authority by the Coroner, in restraining parties of their freedom, it may well be questioned whether a more prompt and stringent exercise of that authority, by immediately placing the parties at No. 31 Bond-street in separate confinement before any communication could pass between them, might not have led to the detection of the guilty. It need not be pointed out to you, Sir, that the general fitness of the Coroner for the adequate discharge of the duties of his office was a question which had been passed upon by the electors by whom he was chosen; and that unless there be willful or criminal misconduct in his official acts, these acts cannot rightly come under cognizance of the Executive.

Very respectfully,
(Signed.) JOHN A. KING.

To HENRY L. CLINTON, Esq., Counsellor at Law, New-York City,

THE POLICE QUESTION.

The old and new Police Commissioners are playing their finest points, one against the other. Both Boards met yesterday—one to make further progress towards establishing their power, and the other to behead some other members of the Department guilty of "insubordination" in expressing their allegiance to the new law. The Commissioners DRAPER, NYE, BOWEN and CHOLWELL met yesterday forenoon at No. 3 Tryon row, (the private office of Superintendent TALLMADGE,) where they had a consultation with Messrs. CUTTING and EDWARDS, their counsel, with reference to the advisability of disbanding the present or old police force of the City. The result of such consultation is understood to be a resolve that to disband the old police force at present would be inexpedient.

The Commissioners then proceeded to business, the first subject in order being the trial of Deputy MATSELL for "insubordination of orders"—the charge being preferred by Superintendent TALLMADGE.

President DRAPER directed the Clerk "to call GEORGE W. MATSELL," and Mr. BERTOORT called "GEORGE W. MATSELL," "GEORGE W. MATSELL," twice; but "GEORGE W. MATSELL" did not reply to either summons. He was not within hearing distance of the new Commissioners, for just at that time he was within his private office in the basement of the City Hall.

The trial was proceeded with, however.

Superintendent TALLMADGE was called and sworn, whereupon he submitted to the Commissioners the following statement, or charge, in writing:

To the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police District:

GENTLEMEN: On the 14th day of May, 1857, I personally served on GEORGE W. MATLELL, Deputy Superintendent of Police, the orders, of which copies are hereunto annexed, and demanded a compliance therewith, to which he replied that he would not comply with them, and could not recognize the authority of the Commissioners of Police, or of the General Superintendent of Police.

I, therefore, prefer the following charge against GEORGE W. MATSELL, Deputy Superintendent of Police:

Charge—First: Insubordination of orders.

Specification—In this, that on the 14th day of May instant, he refused to obey an order issued by the Superintendent of Police, requiring him forthwith to detail five patrol men for special service, and to report the same to the said Superintendent of Police, at No. 3 Tryon row, in the City of New York, in accordance with an order previously received by the said General Superintendent, from the Commissioners of Police for the Metropolitan Police District, a copy of which was duly served on said MATSELL by me.

F. K. TALLMADGE, Gen. Sup't o Police.

MAY 16, 1857.

The acting Chief Clerk testified that on the 19th of May he served a copy of the charge preferred against him, to Mr. MATSELL, personally.

No other evidence was offered for the prosecution, and as Mr. MATSELL does not recognize the authority of the new Board, of course no defence was made. The Clerk, however, was ordered to notify Mr. MATSELL of the action of the Board, which, in accordance with the "regulations," will give a decision to-morrow.

President DRAPER offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the Counsel of the Board be directed to ascertain and report upon the legal meaning of the resolution of the Supervisors reducing the police force to five members.

The Commissioners then adjourned until to-day at 10 o'clock A. M., when they will meet at their new rooms, No. 88 White-street, which have been fitted up with taste and propriety. The office of the General Superintendent will be there located also. The building is a large one and will furnish ample room and verge enough for any amount of business that the new Commissioners may have at present to transact.

There being more treason in the camp Mayor WOOD and City Judge RUSSELL met in the office of the former at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon as Police Commissioners, for the trial of First Lieutenant JAMES BRYAN, of the Nineteenth Ward, and Sergeant THOMAS STEERS, of the Thirteenth Ward, both of whom were charged with insubordination by their respective Captains. The charge against BRYAN was made on Tuesday. Its nature will be seen by the following notice which was served upon him by the Clerk of the old Board.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 19, 1857.

James Bryan, First Lieutenant of Nineteenth Patrol District:

SIR: The following charge has this day been made against you by FRANCIS J. TWOMEY:

Charge—Insubordination.

Specification—1. That said BRYAN did, under the date of this 19th instant, enter in the Station-house blotter the following words, to wit: "9½ A. M. First Section all present as reserve, except Roundsman MCGUIRE to Deputy Superintendent's office, Officer DEADY to Court of Sessions, LYDECKER with returns to Deputy Superintendent's office."

2. That said BRYAN, when asked why he made such entry, replied that he had done so in accordance with the new rules and regulations, meaning thereby the rules and regulations issued by the new Commissioners of the so-called "Metropolitan Police District," and that he, the said BRYAN, intended to be governed by them, (the said new rules and regulations aforesaid,) thereby repudiating the authority of the Commissioners of Police, consisting of the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge, and creating insubordination in the Department.

You will, therefore, appear for trial on the above charge, before the Board of Police Commissioners, at the Mayor's Office, on Wednesday, May 20, instant, at 3 o'clock P. M.

ALEXANDER MING,
Clerk to Police Commissioners.

The affidavit upon which the above notification was based, was made by Capt. TWOMEY, and is as follows:

City and County of New-York, ss: FRANCIS J. TWOMEY, Captain of the Nineteenth Police District, being sworn, deposes and says, that about one o'clock P. M., this day, the 19th instant, deponent took the Station-House Blotter for the purpose of making an entry in it, when he saw the following, in the handwriting of First Lieut. JAMES BRYAN:

"HALF PAST NINE A. M.—First section all present as reserve, except roundsman MCGUIRE, and Deputy Superintendent; officer DEADY at Court of Sessions, LYNECKER with returns from Deputy Superintendent's Office."

Deponent asked Lieut. BRYAN why he made such an entry in the book? BRIAN replied that he had done so in accordance with the rules and regulations, a copy of which had been furnished him, and that he (BRYAN) intended to be governed by them in future, or words to that effect. FRANCIS J. TWOMEY.

Sworn before me, May 19, 1857.

FERNANDO WOOD.

Mr. BRYAN did not "therefore appear before the Board of Police Commissioners at the Mayor's Office," but on the contrary completely disregarded the order for him to do so. Captain TWOMEY was there, however, and he and others of the district were sworn and corroborated the charge of BRYAN'S "insubordination," who was thereupon peremptorily dismissed the Departments.

The Commissioners (HOYER and RUSSELL) next took into consideration the case of Sergeant THOMAS STEERS, of the Thirteenth Ward, who was also charged with insubordination. He too failed to appear and answer, and the charge against him being proved, he was dismissed.

The following is a copy of the charge made by Capt. MCKINNEY against Sergeant STEERS, and sent to the Mayor:

POLICE STATION-HOUSE, PATROL DISTRICT No. 13,
WEDNESDAY, May 20, 1857—10 o'clock P. M.

To Hon. Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New-York:

SIR: In accordance with an act entitled an Act in relation to the Police of the City of New-York, dated April 13, 1853, I have this day suspended from pay and duty THOMAS STEERS, a policeman of this District, for the following cause, to wit: charge of willful disobedience of orders.

Specification.—That said STEERS on the evening of May 19, inst., was ordered by Capt. MCKINNEY to perform post duty, when he peremptorily and emphatically refused to obey his orders, and would not perform duty as required, in violation of section 38 of the Rules and Regulations, and of section — of Act 1, in relation to the Police Department, passed April 13, 1853.

WM. MCKINNEY,
Captain Thirteenth Patrol District.

Witnesses—Captain McKinney, Policeman Carpenter, Policeman Kelly, Policeman Brensmunger.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Wm. McKinney, Captain of the Thirteenth District, being sworn, deposes and says, that on the evening of May 19, instant, deponent told Policeman Thomas Steers, who was then acting as Sergeant, that he must do post duty, as deponent had appointed another man in his place; said Steers replied that he would not do post duty, and that he did not recognize the old Commissioners; said Steers also said that deponent could not have his star; said Steers did not go on duty as directed by deponent.

WM. MCKINNEY.

Sworn to before me, May 20, 1857.

WM. MCKELLAR, Commissioner of Deeds.

The Board then adjourned to meet again whenever necessary to decapitate any one of the Department guilty of "insubordination," by manifesting any partiality for the new Board.

The case of STEERS, of the Thirteenth Ward, is somewhat peculiar. He has held the position of Sergeant of the First Plotoon for the past three or four years, and had, so far as known, discharged his duties with fidelity. On Tuesday last he was informed by his Captain (MCKINNEY) that he must surrender his Sergeant's star, and be placed upon patrol duty, as orders to that effect had been given him at headquarters. STEERS inquired whether such order was verbal or written, and the Captain answered that it was verbal. STEERS then declared that he would not surrender his sergeant's star until a written order to that effect were shown him from the Mayor or Chief of Police, or from the new Commissioners. Captain MCKINNEY, who appeared to feel the unpleasantness of the duty which he had been authorized to perform, did not press the matter further then, but soon afterwards had a consultation on the subject with the Mayor. He then returned to his Station-house, and informed Mr. STEERS that he had made up his mind to place him on patrol duty, and that he did so on his own responsibility. Patrolman MATHEW O'CONNOR was then appointed to fill the position from which STEERS had been removed.

Mr. STEERS did not surrender his star, however, and did not go out on patrol duty, and repeated his determination not to do so until ordered by the new Commissioners. He spoke to his platoon, saying that he was still their Sergeant, and that MCKINNEY had no authority in the Station-house whatever. And thus the matter stands there at present.

No further disaffections were reported yesterday, but if rumors believed to be well founded, prove true, Messrs. WOOD and RUSSELL will have a busy time of it this week, should they proceed as they have begun, by dismissing every policeman who doubts their competency to act as Commissioners or revolts against their orders.

The new Police Commissioners have determined to meet the Mayor with his own weapons, and act with equal firmness and dispatch. The new Police regulations provide that the respective "inspectors" (corresponding to the Deputy Superintendent. As Mr. MATSELL is yet Deputy Superintendent under the law, the Police Captains, by sending their reports to Mr. MATSELL, only obey the law which the new Commissioners recognize. In consequence not any of the Captains have thus far been forced directly to decide which side of the Police Boards to obey. But they will now, one and all, be compelled to show their hands. Mr. MATSELL will be to-day dismissed by the new Commissioners, who will proceed at once to select a new Deputy Superintendent in his place. The General Superintendent, TALLMADGE, will then immediately issue an order to all the Captains informing them of Mr. MATSELL's dismissal and the appointment of a successor, and ordering them in future to report to the new Deputy Superintendent. Those who fail to comply with this order will be promptly tried and dismissed by the new Board, while those who comply will with equal certainty be dismissed by the old Board.

For the office of Deputy Superintendent there are a good many applicants, but those likely to know, say that JOSEPH KEEN, now Superintendent of the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island, will be the man.

A Temperance Tea-Drinking up Broadway—A Jolly Season.

The Temperance people had a right pleasant time at the City Assembly Rooms last night. It was an old-fashioned Tea-Drinking—a jovial, free-and-easy, off hand, smiling and exceedingly comfortable occasion. The guests were jolly teetotallers; the hosts of the evening were the lads of the American Juvenile Temperance Society. The best of coffee, the most aromatic of tea, came up steaming, and sent forth pleasant odors. The viands came on in bushels, all cold, but all very nice, and when the plates got low, the speakers got up, and the festival ceased to be gastronomic, and became intensely intellectual and improving. At the elevated table, north end of the great ball-room, sat the President of the Society, Dr. JAMES T. ALLEY, supported by a host of clergy and good temperance men not clergy. PETER SINCLAIR, of Scotland, was the target for all eyes, for this festival was one of his own peculiar pattern, just what he liked to see in his own country, and what he has inaugurated on t'other side the water with eminent success. Rev. ASA D. SMITH was alongside of Rev. THEO. L. CUYLER, and both ministers saw many of the young ones (and old ones) of their own flocks sprinkled among the audience before them. The benevolent face of Wm. E. DONOR was gladly seen among the guests. Rev. RUFUS W. CLARK, Rev. JOHN MARSH, Dr. DEWITT, Hon. C. C. LEIGH, JOSEPH HOXIE and LUCIUS HART were among the familiar faces.

The talking began (the tea being ended and the little Ganymedes retired to do their share towards the demolition of the feast) at 8¾ o'clock. President ALLEY came out strong, to lead off. He told how this Juvenile Association had been started only seven months ago, in October, 1856; how it began with a meeting at the Demilt Dispensary in Twenty-third-street; and how it has swelled into a great agency for good, till it now comes up handsomely with 14 meetings weekly, and 1,600 members. Five sermons in its behalf have been preached in five churches. It proposes to reach the young chiefly, but will take hold of anything to make itself useful, and so started this capital enterprise of a general tea-drinking and reunion of "our folks."

Rev. Dr. SMITH, as he walked the plank and brought up on the pine table, which served as pulpit, was evidently regarded with affection, for he encountered a tempest of applause that prevented him from opening his lips for "ever so long." The Doctor was happy and sensible, as usual. He indicated his great reverence for preventive measures, not, however, to the discarding of remedies. Preventive action was what this Society mainly proposed to undertake, and the Doctor cherished great hopes from it. His foot had pressed the soil whence flowed the rills that had at length strengthened and deepened into a mighty river, laden with precious freight. In all its after-courses he had marked its progress with interest, and was rejoiced at its success. In ending he introduced in very complimentary terms the "great gun" of the evening, PETER SINCLAIR.

As the Doctor went backward, Mr. SINCLAIR came forward and was received rapturously. His genial face, beaming with good humor, and his merry twinkle "o' the e'e" insure PETER SINCLAIR a welcome wherever he goes. He spoke with warmth and effect of the utility of social gatherings like this, and recommended regular programmes of Temperance soirees and excursions and public holidays, on which the people ought to have free access to museums and galleries and places of public instruction. Mr. SINCLAIR hailed this festival as the inauguration of a new era for this country, the key-note of a mighty anthem which shall presently swell through the nation.

After SINCLAIR, came Rev. RUFUS W. CLARK, who complimented the ladies, and had a great regard for them and for the newspapers—both exceedingly useful. Then came Rev. T. L. CUYLER, who was full of oddities, quips, quiddities, and anecdotes, with a strong undercurrent of good solid sense. Then a dialogue between a little Miss and a lively lad, who spoke up like a man, and was very animated. And when these two had done, a course of fruit succeeded, and then music by a band and singing by the children, and a time for general conversation.

There were 800 guests and 300 to 400 children, occupying twelve tables—altogether, a company of nearly two thousand persons, a very fair commencement for this new enterprise.

THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The two Excise Commissioners, Messrs. HASKETT and KERR, held a meeting of conference yesterday at the office of the former, in Centre street. The special object of the meeting was to prepare blank forms of application for license. It was decided to postpone any decision upon the price of licenses till a new Commissioner is appointed. It was also decided to defer the election of a Clerk till the appointment of a third Commissioner. About a dozen applications have been made for the position of Clerk.

Discussion Between Frederick Douglass and Charles Lenox Remond.

In spite of the horrible weather and the ten cents charge at the door, the Shiloh Presbyterian Church was full last night with people anxious to hear the advertised discussion between FREDERICK DOUGLASS and CHARLES LENOX REMOND. Both these gentlemen are colored, and it was an opportunity not to be lost to hear the two, both of whom are men of distinguished reputation as Anti-Slavery Speakers. The discussion grew out of some remarks made by Mr. DOUGLASS at the Abolition Society's Anniversary last week, and which Mr. REMOND dissented from. A challenge was given at the time, and accepted on the spot. Mr. DOUGLASS, it may be proper to state, is known as a Gerrit Smith Abolitionist; while Mr. REMOND is of the Garrison school. At 8 o'clock Mr. DOUGLASS moved that Rev. HENRY HIGHLAND GARNET be invited to preside, which was carried. Rev. AMOS C. BEAMAN, of New-Haven, and Mr. HIRAM P. CROZIER (white) were elected to assist as Presidents.

The question was stated as follows: "Is the plan of the American Union under the Constitution, Anti Slavery or not?"

It was agreed that for the first round the speakers should be limited to 15 minutes each—for the second ten each.

Mr. DOUGLASS opened with a graceful admission of his opponent's ability and eloquence, but, said he, if you adopt his view—that the Constitution is a Pro-Slavery document, you are tied up to its dissolution before you can move to abolish Slavery. Hence the question is immediately practical and important.

The country had so far drifted away from the principles of its founders that he presumed, the country through, it was taken for granted that the Constitution was meant to defend Slavery. But he found no such meaning in it. It might be attempted to show its Pro Slavery intention by referring to the action of the Legislature under the Constitution; or to infer it from some unread and unheard-of history of it the intentions of the framers of the Constitution. But the Supreme Court has again and again determined that where the rights of human beings are in issue the rights must be presumed as established until the contrary is distinctly proved. And again that language must be construed strictly in favor of justice. The intention must be irresistible to warrant a Court in interpreting it contrary to the established rights of men. Now under these rules the Constitution plainly is an Anti-Slavery document. To find its Pro-Slavery character we are obliged to go below its apparent intentions. No reader, unacquainted with the circumstances of its adoption, would dream that it protected Slavery. And where villainy and crime are to be protected under the name of law, our opponents are bound to show that it is "nominated in the bond." No implication, no presumptions will suffice. If, too, a law is susceptible of two interpretations, one a just purpose, the other villainous, we are bound to adhere to that interpretation which leans to justice—for law is to be presumed to be for the protection of the right and th econfounding of wrong. Now the Supreme Court of the United States is the supreme law of our land; it must be subjected then to these plain rules of all law. The objects of a law must in all cases have a controlling influence on the details of the law, and its objects must settle the intention when its details seem to be in conflict. Read, then, the preamble to the Constitution of the United States. Note how it reads: "We the people of the United States"—not we the horses—not we the white people, but "we the people, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, * * * and secure the blessings of liberty to"—not the white people, but "ourselves and our posterity, do ordain," &c. Here, said Mr. DOUGLASS, the objects of the Constitution are made apparent to every one. The Constitution knows no man by his complexion, his hair or the texture of his skin. These are modern distinctions and assurances of manhood—and this is a modern doctrine. Alas! that Abolitionists should be ready to concede so much to Slavery!—that if one tells them the Bible is Pro-Slavery, they should admit it, and reject the Bible—that without hesitation they should surrender the Constitution, because corrupt men claim it as Pro-Slavery.

I will admit nothing in behalf of Slavery, said he, that is not plainly down in the bill. [Applause.] "This bond doth give thee here no drop of blood." My Shylock shall have his pound of flesh—no more, no less.

The word slave, or slaveholder, is not in the Constitution. The land claimed is not named in the deed by which he holds. Constitutions floating in the brains of Pro-Slavery Doughfaces at the North may—but not the Constitution of 1789—defend this giant system of outrages, injustices, villainies. They tell us, though, that the framers of the Constitution had a subtle and occult meaning under their plain words. The people did not adopt occult, undercurrent meanings. They adopted the plain reading with its obvious intentions.

But we are pointed to the fact that there were slaves in the country at the time, and that slaveholders helped frame the Constitution, and that they, of course, would not have assented to any compact that disregarded their right in slaves as property. On the other hand, he insisted that at that time, overwhelmingly, the people were in favor of gradual emancipation, and they wished, when the giant iniquity should fall, that there might be no token of it left to disgrace their documentary history.

At this point the Chairman called time, and the speaker sat down amidst general applause, with which he had been frequently interrupted during his remarks.

Mr. REMOND rose to reply. He said he very well knew that he represented the side that was weakest in numbers. But, said he, if one is to die in conflict it is a consolation to know that he dies at the hands of a world-wide-famed antagonist. It was of more credit to fall by his hands than to conquer some folks. If he should be sustained by the audience, they must logically conclude that the slave's only exodus is through the dissolution of the American Union. Dissolution, however, had no possible horrors to his ears, as he knew it had for theirs. They could not assent to what he expected to prove without damaging their popularity or their business; they must confess themselves hypocrites if they assented and still boasted of their country. Your business stands in too way. It was to him of account what BLACKSTONE, COKE, BROUGHAM, or WEBSTER, GERRIT SMITH or WM. GOODELL held to be law. The decisions of the Supreme Court must be our interpreter of our Constitution until the uniform practice of the people contradict it. He wished Mr. DOUGLASS could be accepted in place of the Court—with his nobler interpretation—but as he is not, he could only deem that to be its interpretation which History and Experience coincided to announce. All Legislatures have acted and all Courts decided upon the presumption that the colored man and the white stand upon different platforms. In the absence of the first instance where the colored man has received his liberty as against his master in the name of the Constitution, and while he could give him hundreds of instances of men who have lost their liberty in its name, how could he resist the conclusion that the Constitution recognized and defended Slavery, and all our history showed that the "guarantees" and "compromises" of the Constitution always meant American Slavery. He quoted KENT, DANE, WILMOT and SPOONER on the definitions of law, and as to what should interpret it.

He proceeded to show by the language of the time—the "cotemporary exposition" of the Constitution—that it was all for Slavery. There were four clauses in it which none could doubt to have direct reference to Slavery, [the speaker only commented at length on the three-fifths clause.] He illustrated the quibble of his opponent in demanding the letter as well as the spirit, by quoting the notice on the Providence public squares "$1 fine, keep off the grass," which nobody had deemed yet to mean what it said that those who kept off the grass should be fined $1. [Laughter.] If, said he, Slavery exists in Washington—the heart of our country—where nothing but Congress directly rules, he had a right to think that the Constitution under which Congress makes all its laws recognizes Slavery. Yet it does exist there, and there are on the statute book 105 laws regulating Slavery in that single city.

Here the Chairman announced that the speaker's time was up, and he sat down—the audience applauding loudly.

Mr DOUGLASS replied. His antagonist had referred, he said, feelingly to the course pursued under the Constitution, and he believed if he had his antagonist's eloquence, he would never cease descanting upon the evil practices of rulers, under the Constitution. But the Constitution and the practices of those who hold offices in the Government were very different. And Mr. REMOND must not forget that they had not met to consider and criticise Administrations. On that, he presumed, they would not differ materially. They had met to consider the Constitution; and therefore the evil doings of rulers under it should have no place. He was willing to acknowledge—everybody knew—that those who obtained rule had encouraged Slavery. What he denied was, that they had the right to do so, under a strict rendering of the Constitution. In continuation, he opened authorities, sustaining his position, namely: That the Constitution must not be rendered in accordance with the acts of any set of men; but in accordance with the plain meaning of the language used in its construction. His antagonist had referred to four clauses in the Constitution, but had read but one. He could have wished he had read them all, that the audience might have seen how little evidence he had to produce. He had read that portion referring to the 2d section of the first article relating to those owing service for a number of years, and "other persons." And he (Mr. REMOND) had volunteered the opinion that the "other persons" meant slaves. So said the slaveholder, but so did not say the Constitution. [Applause.] Even admitting that slaves were referred to, although he did not admit it, it was also true that there were others to whom that clause must have referred. There were aliens then as now. But there was but little use in seeking for Slavery there. It was not in it. And it was not for the colored man to admit Slavery was recognized in it, unless they could point to language to that effect, clearly and distinctly. Mr. MADISON had said that the term slave was not in the Constitution, and that under it the fugitive slave could not be brought back. He had opposed the use of the term, because he did not wish it to recognize that there could be property in human flesh. That was MADISON'S opinion, not GERRIT SMITH'S nor BURRIAN GARRY'S. And there were other opinions from men who should have known something of the character of the Constitution. But they were told that Slavery existed at the time, and that a bad tree could not bring forth good fruit. Well, perhaps not. But, nevertheless, Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, and other States, then slaveholding, had abolished Slavery, and slaveholders in Maryland had manumitted 60,000 slaves, and Virginia 40,000. In fact all the freedom that had been gained by the slave had been gained only when the slaveholder had released his grasp. But yet a bad tree could not bring forth good fruit. Therefore the Constitution must recognize Slavery, because there were those who desired to hold slaves—so said Justice TANEY, so said Mr. REMOND. [Applause.] He begged his friend's pardon for naming him in connection with such a miserable scamp. He meant no offence. But his friend was unfortunate in so far as that his position brought him into juxtaposition with TANEY. [Applause.] His friend, however, might take consolation in the fact that being found in a crow's nest did not make a man a crow. [Great applause.] In conclusion, he appealed to the friends of Abolition not to yield any more to the Slave power than is clearly written in the Constitution. He was for Abolition, with or without the Union. But if the Constitution were not a Pro-Slavery Constitution, he thought it would be foolish in him to work for its destruction. He was about to take up another point, when time was called, and he took his seat.

Mr. REMOND ascended the pulpit and said, that all that was left of him appeared before them. In him they had an illustrated known fact that a man might have life in him long after he ceased to move. [Applause.] He then informed the audience that it had been deemed advisable to continue

PARIS GOSSIP.

Installation of the Archbishop of Paris—The Cap of Silence an English Invention—Hume, the American Spiritualist—Cheap Literature in France—Baron A de Rothschild and the Number Thirteen—Rachel—A New Tragedy.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Saturday, May 2, 1857.

The ceremony of installation of the Archbishop of Paris took place on Saturday last with a considerable degree of pomp. Paris was erected into a Bishopric in the third century and into an Archbishopric in the thirteenth; Cardinal MORLOT, just installed, is the seventeenth Archbishop of Paris. He is a small, slim, straight man, with grey hair and a venerable appearance, but wanting in the look of moral force possessed by either of his last two predecessors. He is nevertheless an able man, and a warm partizan of the present dynasty. As Cardinal he is a Senator by right.

One part of this ceremony is curious. In the morning before proceeding to Notre Dame where the ceremony of installation was to take place, the Cardinal SAUCONI, messenger deputed by the Pope for that purpose, solemnly remitted to the new Archbishop in the Chapel of the Roman Legation, the Pallium. The Pallium is an ornament consisting of a band of white wool, three fingers broad, encircling the shoulders, with pendants before and behind as long as the hand, and to which are suspended little pieces of flattened lead covered with black silk and four red crosses. The Archbishop could not officiate pontifically without having been first invested with the Pallium. The mode of preparation of this sacred symbol is very curious. It is a tissue of wool taken from two white lambs blessed at Rome in the Church of St. Agnes, the day of the fete of this saint. These lambs are afterwards guarded in some religious institution, until the time of shearing them arrives. The palliums made of this wool are afterwards deposed on the tomb of St. Peter, and remain there the whole night that precedes the fete of this apostle. They are blessed the following day on the altar of this Church, and then dispatched to the high dignitaries who are to wear them.

Old Notre Dame has now again her Archbishop, and it is to be hoped in the interest of Christian civilization, that he may not meet the tragic fate of his two lamented predecessors.

The story invented in England—for it must be a pure invention—about the Neapolitan bonnet de silence, has, notwithstanding its anonymphal character, given rise to a grave discussion. This bonnet de silence is a sort of garrote for the tongue. By means of a certain disposition of iron bands which can be adjusted and locked over the head and jaws, the wearer is unable to talk, by being rendered incapable of moving his jaws. This ingenious and humane invention, the King of Naples adjusts to each of his refractory subjects as are in positions where their absolute silence is essential to the safety of the State, and particularly to the King. But now see the wickedness of this English invention. Not only do we receive daily proofs that no such inhuman torture has yet been thought of in Naples—that happy country, so much more civilized and prosperous than Boston and New-York—but we have positive French proof for the assertion that the only country where so ingeniously barbarous an invention was ever known or used was in England! In 1838, a distinguished Frenchman, who devoted much of his attention to prisons, M. MORRAN CHRISTOPHE, was sent by the French Government to England to make a report on their prison system. The following is an extract from that report, which gives an account of his visit to the prisons of Manchester:

"One of the things which struck me most in the course of my visit was the prodigious quantity of handcuffs, ankle rings and chains of all kinds which are suspended from the wall of the jailor's room. But the most curious and most significant piece which I saw in this disciplinary arsenal, is an instrument of silence, consisting of several circular bands of iron binding the head of the culprit from the back of the neck to the forehead, and fixed together by a band of iron which is opened to give passage to the nose, and which terminates below by a bent tongue of iron that enters into the mouth as far as the palate. The old jailor who showed me this gag, in a way to make me understand that he had seen it operate more than once, said with a smile that it was only intended for women. Do you still make use of it? I asked him. Very little, was the reply; and then apparently catching himself, he said, Never, never! It would be frightful not to believe him. I saw in the house of correction at Liverpool, a similar apparel, but without the tongue of iron. I saw there two children confined each in a solitary cell, and carrying on their feet shackles of iron, and on the hands long rings of iron attached to chains!"

What could be more unhappy than this calumny of the English journals? These journals never cease to cry to Naples, "Why don't you follow us in the way of humanity and of progress? Why do you persist in practicing such cruelties upon your people in defiance of the nobler sentiments of the civilized world?" There is only one way in which this question ought to be decided: the silence cap, iron tongue included, ought to be applied to the heads of those English journals who are always uttering loud cries against barbarisms that only exist at their own doors. The condition of the Neapolitans is no doubt bad enough without inventing such a calumny as this.

An illustrated journal gives us this week a well executed portrait of HUME, the Spiritualist, or HOME, according to this journal, since they give also his autograph, thus: D. DUNGLAS HOME. The journal contains what purports to be a correct biography of this individual, who has so singularly moved the Parisians; and by this biography we learn that HOME is a frail young man of Scotch parentage, but a naturalized American. He has gone to America to bring over his sister, who is a still more powerful medium than himself; and when she arrives, we may anticipate an extraordinary emotion in high places, since HOME has already convinced and almost crazed many of the witnesses of his feats.

The manner in which HOME was introduced to the Palace was this: At Florence, a year ago, he made the acquaintance of a wealthy Polish nobleman, who took him under his protection and brought him to Paris. At his house, in this city, the Duke de CAMDACORES, Master of Ceremonies at the Palace, was one of the invited guests at a sitting given by HOME. The Duke was powerfully impressed with what he saw, talked of it to the Emperor; and advised him to see him. HOME was accordingly invited to show his power before the Court, and was happy enough, on the first evening, to have the control of obedient spirits, and din wonderful things. The Imperial circle were confounded, and invited him again and again to a repetition of his experiments, some of which were so bizarre as to excite even more than curiosity. Thus HOME suddenly gained a notoriety and excited an interest at Paris which you could not credit if you were not here to verify it.

To give you some idea of the immense movement in France in cheap literature, M. HETZEL, the publisher of GEORGE SAND'S and VICTOR HUGO'S works, sold six months ago to the house of MICHEL LEVY, one order for 200,000 volumes of the one-franc library edition of Madame SAND'S works. He sold to another house at the sale of 400,000 volumes of GEORGE SAND and 240,000 of VICTOR HUGO, all of which will soon be exhausted. The works that sell most in the cheap editions are BALZAC, HUGO, LAMARTINE, DUMAS, SAND.

M. DE CESENA, for so long the chief editor of the Constitutionnel, and a leading member of the world of letters, has abandoned the Constitutionnel and thrown himself fully into the world of stock-jobbers, by becoming chief editor of La Semaine Financiere, a hebdomadal financial Review. When literary men forsake letters to run after the golden calf, what hope can there be for the rest of mankind?

You know, perhaps, the superstition that reigns in France for the number 13. No company will sit down to dinner that numbers thirteen; it is the habit, if no other recourse presents, to send into the street and "impress" the first passer by to supply the wanting number. People will not move on the thirteenth; nor occupy a house or a room—if they have a choice—which bears the number thirteen. It is a superstition, however, which reigns nearly exclusively in the higher classes, and balances with that other superstition of the lower classes which interdicts the undertaking of any enterprise on Friday. You published a short time ago, copied from the London Times, an account of a brilliant marriage in the Rothschild family, between a son of the baron here and a daughter of the baron there. Well, this couple are going to reside in a house in the Rue St. Georges in this city, where formerly balanced a dirty tri colored flag over the bureau of the journal Le National. M. E. DE GIRARDIN founded the Presse there more than twenty years ago. Since then the great millionaire PEREIRE gave dinners and fetes there and thus gained such hosts of friends to his prosperity; it was there that he died but two years ago, leaving his vast heritage a prey to a trial which will long figure as one of the most celebrated on the civil list. This hotel, which precedes No. 15, where resides the eminent advocate M. CHAIX D'EST-ANGE, shore consequently for the National, for M. E. DE GIRARDIN, and for M. PEREIRE, the number 13. The young baron A. DE ROTHSCHILD and his pretty wife preferred to see a less menacing, a less fatal number over their door. They feared to commence their nuptial career with so lugubrious an omen suspended over their heads. So M. DE ROTHSCHILD, with his purse full of money, went to the city fathers and asked a dispensation—a dispensation from inhabiting No. 13! He gave a thousand francs to the poor of the Ward, and they issued a decree permitting him to number his house 11 bis!

Mlle. RACHEL will pass two months during the Summer at Paris. A part of the Autumn will be spent at NICE, after which she will return to Egypt again for the Winter. During her absence she is going to have constructed at Thebes a house after the French style, with a terrace on the Nile. The house of the great tragedienne in the Rue Trudon in this city is to be put into a lottery. The same plan was adopted formerly by a celebrated actress, La GUIMARD, with her hotel of the Rue de la Chaussée d'Antin. The tickets were 120 francs, and it was gained by the Countess DULMAN. Bought in 1793 by the rich banker PEREGAUX, father-in-law of the Duke DE RAGUSE, it was in that house that JACQUES LAFFITTE commenced the grand fortune which he lost in the elegant hotel of the Rue Laffitte, given him by national subscription. The hotel of RACHEL will be placed in lottery at the price of 100,000 francs.

A descendant of the infamous MARAT, having recently attained his majority, and having read the history of the Reign of Terror, has made an application to the Minister of State to have his name changed to MARATTI.

An American by the name of HODSON lately arrived here with a troupe of learned dogs and monkeys, and was not long in obtaining for his intelligent animals an engagement at the Cirque Napoleon. The first night of their performance his animals were intractable under the influence of so exciting a scene as that presented by an immense audience, and the brilliant light of the gas. His monkeys, which were to perform VOLTAIRE and CHATAUBRIAND, and other distinguished characters of French history, were actually hissed. But on a second representation they improved, and last night the Emperor and Empress went to the Circus in state to see the American dogs and monkeys.

The Count de MONTENELLI, the translator of MELEGOUVE'S "Medea" into Italian, has just written a new tragedy in verse and in Italian, for Madame RISTORI, called "Camma." The poet has found the material for this tragedy in a page of Plutarch. The antique recital furnished, however, but a meagre skeleton, which the poet had to fill up. Camma was the wife of Sinatus, one of the tetrarchs of gallican Galatia. Synorix, a friend of Sinatus, fell in love with his wife and killed him, in order to occupy his place in the conjugal bed. After the death of her husband, Camma enveloped herself in the weeds of mourning, and took refuge in the temple of the Coltic Diana, of which she was a priestess. Synorix pursued her, and offered her his hand. At first she refused; then feigning to consent, she allowed herself to be conducted to the altar. There, having made to Diana a libation from the cup of hydromel, according to the Druidical rites, she drank the half of it and offered the rest to Synorix. When he had finished drinking, Camma uttered a cry, and calling aloud to her deceased husband, said, "Dear Sinatus, it was but for this great revenge that thy wife has waited so long to follow thee. Now receive her, who has avenged thee on thy murderer, and who is also as happy to die with him as she was to live with thee!" Then, turning towards Synorix, "Give orders," she said, "that instead of a nuptial chamber you may have a tomb." Synorix, agitated by the violence of the poison, dragged himself to his chariot, and hurried away, cursing the gods; he died the same evening in his own house. As for Camma, having lived through the night and heard the fate of Synorix, she left the world gaily in the morning.

This is the basis of the new piece of M. DE MONTENELLI, which is constructed expressly in view of the qualities and capabilities of the great tragedienne who is its representative. It has proved one of Madame RISTORI'S greatest triumphs. It is ranked by the critics above "Medea," and equal to "Mirrha" or "Maria Stuart." In the style which the great actress brings into the piece there is certainly more of true tragic art and much less of the melo-drama than in any of her other representations, with the two exceptions already made. And this is exactly the point in which she has been attacked by the critics—by those who have felt the courage to attack her. In "Medea" she shows too much heart, too much feeling, in fine, too much melo-drama. The French critics do not admire this: they demand a cold, classic, purely artistic representation; and they all seem to be satisfied with "Camma."

MALAKOFF.

A Suggestive and Significant View of the Object of the Grand Duke Constantine's Visit to France and England.

From the London Times, May 4.

When the season is over your true earnest sportsman has little else to do but to fight his battles over again. Squire meets squire—squire agricultural, squire commercial, squire official, squire legal, squire clerical, for there are squires of all sorts,—and, when the ladies have left the room, by the warmth of an April fire they talk over their covers, their preserves, their stables, their kennels, their armories, and all the sweet auxiliaries and furniture of sport. On these occasions how are unlocked, and the observations and meditations of half a year reveal themselves. The favorite hunter's forelegs and his rider's weight are candidly considered; "You won't ride that brown mare another season;" such a pointer is getting idle, and such a greyhound cunning; such a gun kicks, or hangs fire, or is too heavy, or won't carry far enough for this country, where the birds are very wild. "What shot do you use for grouse?" "What do you find the best wadding?" "What do you give your keepers?" "Do you ever give your hunters carrots?" Then come in shooting jackets, and boots, and pouches of all sorts for all purposes. Then the best breakfast to hunt upon or to walk 20 miles upon, or to set one's self up with when rather "done up." The subject has endless ramifications, and in an age of improvement, with such a succession of new minds brought to bear upon it, is on every point inexhaustible. The curate sirs by, munching the brandy cherries, or yielding his inner soul to the contemplation of a gay new altarcloth, a rare encaustic tile, or a quaint "poppy head." For hours and hours, evening after evening, this is country life in England; and for this the merchant pines to leave his counting house, the lawyer his desk, the official his post, and every man his work, whatever it may be. There is a good deal to be said fur it, and not much against it. At all events, it is a common object, a pursuit, a war, against a common foe, not one of ourselves. It is not everybody who cares for the subject; but the question concerns those who do care for it, not those who do not. Perhaps they prefer human game; the pursuit is more interesting, perhaps, but not so harmless or sociable. It certainly is a matter for congratulation that when the brother Nimrods are discussing these grave affairs, the intended prey are silly brutes or worthless vermin. The guns are not to be pointed at our neighbor's windows; the shot is not for their bodies. The rival sportsmen are fellow-sportsmen also, and the competition is not suicidal.

The great sportsmen of Europe have had a glorious season, a regular battue in the Crimea, capital duck-shooting in the Black Sea, and some rather mild sport in the Baltic. The return of game is considerable, and the improvements in guns, shot and all the personal as well as the material accessories of the amusement immense. We have finished for the present; indeed, the preserves are almost bare, and horses, dogs, and all, fairly done up. So now is the time for that after-sport we have attempted to describe. The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE is come to visit his sporting neighbors, NAPOLEON and VICTORIA. He seems to be making rather a long stay with the former, the latter not being quite ready for him just now. They are doing their very best to amuse him across the channel, and have carefully ransacked up the precedents of PETER the Great's visit to Paris immediately after the accession of the House of Hanover to this throne, and of PAUL'S a few years before the French Revolution. The Grand Chamberlain, the Masters of the Ceremonies, Admirals, Field-Marshals, Prefects, authorities, and constituted bodies of all kinds, are doing their best to show off France—her splendor, her power, her gaiety, and her politeness. Public entries, receptions, balls, operas, reviews, hunts, and everything that Princes are supposed to delight in, are prepared with a zeal that to France is so usual and characteristic as to require no explanation and admit of no comment. But the Grand Duke is a man of business—"a keen sportsman," and "business before pleasure if you please." His soul is in the Arsenals and the Dockyards. Your real sporting neighbor has never done with your horses, your dogs, and your guns, and the Grand Duke returned again and again to the foundries and workships. On a second visit to the Dockyard of Toulon, after examining the new gunboats and a model frigate, he broke out, "I am impatient to have done with these official receptions, in order that we may more carefully examine together your ships and your dockyards." The floating batteries he examined with intense curiosity. To the conductors he imparted his confidential opinion that they would be a failure against any heavier ordnance or a closer fire than at Kinburn; and, hearing that some under equipment were intended for China, he pleasantly observed, "So you are going to take the chestnuts out of the fire there to." But nothing came amiss to his useful and vigilant curiosity. Water tanks, sail-stores, oil stores, small armories, iron and copper works,—everything that contributes to perfection in the sport.—he went through and inspected, with a yard measure in hand. As he always reduced the French measures to ours, it is evident that the British Navy has been the earliest and the most favored object of his official studies. The Grand Duke is quite a model for tourists. This is turning travel to account. When his grandfather, his father and his uncles came to this country, they also brought with them engineers and savans, and took home all sorts of peaceful inventions. But the Grand Duke, as we have said, is a man of business, and he returns to the example of the founder of his empire, who wielded not only a yard measure, but an adze, in our dock yards. As a nation of keen sportsmen, of people who must have an object, and who adapt the means to the end, we cannot but respect the Grand Duke's way of seeing "foreign parts." We cannot help sympathizing with him in his pursuits; nor, it appears, can the French. He has won his way to their hearts. Indeed, it is quite delightful to see the flags of all nations blended, national airs alternated, captured cannon, halls, and other trophies magnanimously hidden, to be uncovered, and all sorts of recollections of certain recent occurrences fondly brought up, while Russia, France, and England, soon to be added to the group, are examining one another's weapons with scientific and affectionate interest, and interchanging hints, or "wrinkles," as sportsmen now call them, for future use. Is not this the lion and the ox, the wolf and the lamb, lying down together? But an odd thought strikes one. Where is the game for this sport? What's the "country," brother sportsman, that you seem so busily and amicably polishing your weapons and taking sweet counsel for? For the noblest possible prey—for one of themselves. Two are to chase, hunt down, shoot, snare, or destroy the third; and which one sportsman, which the game, time alone can show.

This consideration imparts a particular interest to the Grand Duke's approaching visit to this country. When a brother sportsman examines your fowling-pieces, your dogs, or your fishing tackle, you may or may not feel anxious to hear that he has bagged more birds or landed more fish than you have. In this case the object is to beat you, and, of course, you are interested. You are the vermin, and your guest has a fancy for your meat, your fur, or merely your brush to present to his lady, or sweep the dust from his ancestral hall. So he wishes to study your ways, your haunts, your track, where you burrow, when you come out to feed, how you run, how you double, how you defend yourself if you can, the thickness of your fur or your feathers, and what shot will do for you. Small shot, 18-pounders, for example, will glance off your feathers, and the Grand Duke finds he must have heavier metal to do the work. But, like all sportsmen, he is quite fair, and teaches while he learns. He lets us know the thickness of his own fur, and the weight of metal he can stand with impunity. Nevertheless, this is no visit of ceremony or pleasure, and the High Admiral of the Russian Fleet, the sternest of the Russian Princes, is no mere "jim, frank-hearted sailor," but a man who goes about with a yard wand, and makes three visits to a gunboat or dockyard.

"A chiel's amang you takin' notes" and if he does not publish them, which will not answer his purpose, he will put them to a better use.

However, as far as we are concerned, the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE is most heartily welcome to see everything that is to be seen in this country. He will not see so splendid a capital as our neighbors have to show: he will not have such fetes in his honor, and possibly not be assisted with quite so much alacrity in his naval measurements; but there is not an inventive of peace that England will not be proud to show him. That, in fact, is our great art of war. If the Grand Duke wants to know how it is that we carried on the war with so much vigor and success, leaving off stronger than we began, he will see that our military and naval resources lie rather in the prosperity of the people—in their perfect freedom, and their unfettered enterprise—than in any aggressive or defensive organization. He will see that we are really a military power because we seek peace rather than war, while the weakness of his country has lain in its aggressive spirit and expressly military organization. We are amused with the Grand Duke's visit to the Dockyards and the Court of France. Of course we are aware that Russia would rather have France for an ally than a foe, and that on the most common grounds of policy, France will do her best "to be civil" to her Imperial visitor. Indeed, we take it all as a matter of course. We feel, however, that what we have to show Russia is neither naval establishments nor royal magnificence. We neither dread Russia as a foe, nor particularly desire her as an ally; but we do most earnestly desire to see her entering more cordially and unreservedly into the race of civilization. We wish to interchange with her not the ideas and materials of only military success, but of peaceful progress. To this sense Russia will find England much more of a sister and an ally than even France, which is still swathed and cradled by a jealous and prohibitory system. We want in Russia neither a foe nor an ally, but simply a neighbor; and if Russia desires to be worth more fifty years hence, as either foe or ally, she will do well to accept this advice.

INTERESTING FROM MEXICO.

Movements Against the Sonora Fillibusters—General News.

By way of New-Orleans we have received newe from the Mexican capital to the 29th ult., a summary of which has already been telegraphed from that city.

The principal news by this arrival concerns the progress of the fillibusters on the Pacific coast. A dispatch was received at the capital on the 28th, to the effect that an action had been fought at a place called Chalorea, between the troops of Gen. YANEZ and a party of CRABB'S followers, in which the latter were routed. Letters received by the Extraordinary, from Mazatlan, the 17th, however, make no mention of any such occurrence.

It is understood that CRABB had invaded Sonora by way of Sonoyta, and had summoned the Prefect of Altar to place his whole district at his disposition, declaring in his summons that he had 100 men with, and 900 others on the way to join, him. Although Gen. YANEZ seems to credit this, it is not generally believed that CRABB'S force amounts to anything like that figure. The plan of the fillibusters is understood to be a simultaneous attack at several points by land and sea.

It is said that the condition of the fillibusters on arriving on Sonoyta was deplorable, all their baggage having been abandoned on the way, and nothing saved but their arms. They had no provisions either for themselves or their animals, and had been compelled to shoot some cattle for their subsistence, paying the owners in promises.

Of the expedition by sea nothing positive is known; but it was said that a force of 300 men had embarked at Lobos, and Gen. YANEZ was of the opinion that the filibusters designed also to seize the port of Guaymas, inasmuch as a suspicious looking vessel had appeared in that vicinity. There was no force at Lobos to oppose the landing of the fillibusters; but Gen. NORIEGA was at Guaymas, with the garrison of the place and three Companies of the National Guard, ready to receive them.

Gen. YANEZ was to send from Mazatlan on the 17th inst., the Trelon, Ipala and Eclipse, vessels belonging to that port, with troops to Guaymas; while he was to have marched by land on the 13th, with 150 men and the necessary officers for a campaign against the fillibusters. The house of EUCHEGUREN & Co., had advanced $18,000 to supply his immediate wants.

Señor PASQUEIRA, Governor of Sonora, was waiting before setting out from Ures, for the money and munitions of war which he had demanded of General NORIEGA on the 30th of March. The latter was making all haste to forward the munitions, but was unable to send any money. Troops had already marched from Ures for the invaded district. The levy of the National Guard was going forward with activity all over the State. Señor REDONDO, Prefect of Alta, had caused to be armed and harracked all the National Guard of the districts; he had, also, procured extraordinary resources by means of forced loans, and had seized all the horses and mules to be found in his jurisdiction for the purpose of forming a corps of cavalry.

The maritime expedition, which was to have left Mazatlan on the 17th, was under command of General JOSE VELASQUE DE LA CADENA, and was composed of 70 men of the fixed battalion of Mazatlan, three pieces of cannon, with their park and ammunition, and 50 barrels of powder and other munitions of war. The engineers and recruits ordered from Guadalajara will form a contingent of 500 men with artillery and munitions.

It is calculated that the force which will be available to repel the fillibusters will amount to 1,000 troops of the line, about 5,000 National Guard; the Papagos will probably take part in the campaign, their chief having placed himself under the orders of the Prefect of Altar.

General NORIEGA has recommended to Señor PASQUEIRA not to attack the enemy save in detail; to prevent their reuniting; to surprise them in the moment of fatigue, and at a favorable occasion; to take them in ambuscade; to cut off their retreat; in short, to make war upon them with every possible advantage, but not to compromise the dignity of the national arms by engaging in regular actions with them.

It was understood, also, that a force was being prepared in the city to march for the scene of action, and that a dispatch had been sent to the commandant of Jalisco, ordering the light regiment of carbineers, 300 recruits, and the artillery there, to the same destination.

President COMONFORT had returned from his visit to Tacubaya, and resumed his residence in the National Palace.

D. IGNACIO AGUILAR, the celebrated Minister of SANTA ANA, and head of the Revolutionary Party at the capital, had escaped from prison. A meditated escape of the prisoners of the Acordada had also been discovered, and in time, by a vigorous action, to save the unfinished, which the force of 500 malefactors would have occasioned. They had filed the iron railing, and planned the assassination of the guard.

No further collision seems to have taken place between the civil and ecclesiastical powers. The Extraordinary advocates the total separation of Church and State.

D. MIGUEL MIRANON, a conspicuous character in the last Puebla Revolution, had been arrested. He was found concealed in the City of Mexico.

The Trustees of the Ohio State School for Idiotic youth, have taken the oath of office. They proceeded to the organization of their Board by electing WILLIAM DENNISON, Jr., of Columbus, President, and NORTON S TOWNSHEND, Secretary. The Board have appointed Dr. R. J. PATTERSON, Superintendent, and rented for present use the house belonging to Mrs. NEVILLE, on Friend-street, opposite the Blind Asylum.

INSTANCES OF DREADFUL DESTITUTION.

From the Detroit Tribune.

The meeting at the City Hall last evening, for the purpose of devising means to relieve the alarming destitution in the northern part of the State, though not large in numbers, was composed of men of the very first standing, intelligence, and liberality in our community.

It was called to order by T. LOCKWOOD, Esq., on whose motion C. C TROWBRIDGE was called to the chair.

Mr. WALTER CHESTER said he had obtained some facts in relation to this matter. It was a pitiful one, but a short one. At a recent meeting at Lansing, Mr. MANON, a Methodist clergyman, stated that he had received letters from Rev. Mr. HILL, a preacher in the northern circuit, which announced three deaths from lack of food, and a probability of as many more, with in the writer's own knowledge. One poor woman had doled out her scanty provisions to her two children, starving herself, and had died, while they did not long survive her. He further wrote at the house where he stopped, as well supplied as any family, they were subsisting on bread, molasses, and stewed pumpkin. They had nothing for his horse, and he was obliged to leave.

Another gentleman who lived at Lyons, Ionia Co., said that a man in the western part of that county had lived for a week on leeks alone. Others were subsisting on roots and slippery elm bark pulverized with molasses. The meeting at Lansing had adopted immediate measures for relief. There were not probably 45 persons in the house, but so excited were they at the details given that they subscribed $200 on the spot. With this money he had purchased already some three tons and a half of beans and Indian meal, which would be sent to-day to Lyons by the D. & M. Railway. There seemed to be the most suffering on the Pine and Tittlebawasse rivers and their tributaries. The first season after the Graduation Land Act was passed these settlers took up these lands and settled upon them, and did what they could. The next year the fire devastated their fields. Last season their corn was killed. Now, greatly reduced from the loss of horses and cattle, and debilitated by abstinence and insufficient food, they were suffering without the means or ability to help themselves. This extends to some 3,000 people scattered throughout the northern counties. A man from the northern part of Allegan County had offered his only cow for sale in Allegan for the purpose of procuring food for his family. The kind hearted people there gave him $30 worth of food and sent him home with his cow. Small subscriptions have been taken up in Ionia County, but little had been done owing to contradictory reports.

Mr. JACOB HENDRICKSON said he would state a few facts that had been related to him by a man named O. C. MORRIS, of Saginaw County. Two or three years since he became a purchaser of a lot of swamp lands some 12 miles north of Lower Saginaw. Last Spring he went on to improve his lands so as to secure them, and while there boarded with a well-to-do farmer named WRIGHT or WHITE. This man had 240 acres on which he was living, paid for. He came from Massachusetts, and had a wife and three children. When he came away from there, he left his lands in the charge of WRIGHT. About a week ago he went up on the Sam Ward to see his land and visit his friend. In the morning when he came to sit down to breakfast, all they had on the table was a jonny-cake made with water and molasses. Mr. WRIGHT apologized for the fare as much more scanty and plain than he had given him when he was there before, but said it was the best and all he had. On inquiry he learned that they had no meal, lard or butter, had 7 pounds of meat and 40 pounds of flour. This was all they had to last them till next harvest. He had three or four acres of wheat on the ground that looked finely, and 14 shillings in money.

He had worked on the farm all the season expecting to get work among the lumbermen in the Winter. But this resource had failed, the past Winter, although he offered his services at one shilling a day and board. Mr. MORRIS said he had little money with him, but what he had he gave to his friend; the neighbors contributed what they had, and Mr. WRIGHT started for Lower Saginaw to get supplies. With the money he had obtained he got supplies enough to last them at the farthest, a month. This man was as well off as any of his neighbors and better than most, and yet this was his condition.

Mr. HENDRICKSON said he made this statement as he was satisfied there was pressing need throughout the Northern part of the State, and we ought to be apprised of facts.

A subscription was started on the spot, and $1,000 subscribed by those in the room.

This morning the Collecting Committee proceeded to take up subscriptions and collections.

The following letter was received to-day from Rev. Mr. HICKEY, who was sent off on Saturday to ascertain as to the truth of the reports concerning the destitution in the northern part of the State:

ST. JOHNS, Saturday, 4 P. M.

While here waiting I have met several men who have come from the region beyond St. Johns. One from Ionia says some suffering exists in Montcalm County.

One from Muskegon River and its tributaries says the people in those parts are supplied from Chicago. I have met one man with his family, consisting of a wife and three children. He is on his way back to Ohio. He is from Gratiot County, town of Hamilton, twenty miles north of St. Johns. He has sold all his effects but land, to get means to come back. He says that many families have nothing to eat but bread, and little of that. He had last Fall about 500 pounds of flour, of which he lent his hungry neighbors 100 pounds, but could not get it back, and was obliged to leave. He says many a man up in his town would come out to St. Johns and take on their backs what they could carry to their families, if they had the chance.

How Mr. Henry A. Crabb came to be in Sonora.

To the Editors of the Courier and Enquirer:

My attention was called this morning to an article in your paper in which Mr. HENRY A CRABB (called by you Col. CRABB) is classified as a filibuster; and being an intimate friend of that gentleman, and being well aware of the intention of himself and party, I beg to contradict the statement, and assert that he is not a fillibuster, nor did he or any of his party entertain any such idea on their landing at Guaymas, in the Gulf of California. The facts which induced Mr. CRABB and companions to immigrate from California to Sonora, Mexico, are simply these:

For many years past there has been a supposition (how well founded I am not aware) that in the interior of that State, and in a portion of the country occupied by the Apache tribe of Indians, there were valuable gold and silver mines, but which required great risk and hazard to work them with any degree of success, on account of the determination of the savage Indians to murder and rob all who attempted to settle in their midst; and these same Indians have been a source of great terror to the Sonorans having ranches of cattle and horses in that and the surrounding States, on account of the many robberies committed by them. It is true that WILLIAM WALKER had a fillibustering design on that country; and some three years ago a party under the command of a Frenchman, and, if my memory is correct, the party were also mostly Frenchmen, landed in that country with the same intent; and at the time of the sailing of the vessel (brig Caroline) from San Francisco, this same Mr. HENRY A. CRABB had engaged his passage on board of her, and I believe he did not learn the intention of the party until after the vessel had sailed from the wharf, when he immediately requested to be set ashore, which was complied with by the master of the vessel, Mr. CRABB losing the amount paid by him for his passage, as well as a portion of his luggage.

Mr. HENRY A. CRABB was for several years State Senator from San Joaquin County, and has also occupied the position as Editor of the Stockton Argus,—he is a lawyer by profession, and was a candidate before the Legislature of California for State Senator, and had there been sufficient Know-Nothing votes in that body, he would most undoubtedly have been the Senator of that State, at Washington, this day. It will no doubt be a matter of surprise to his friends in California to see him held up by the New-York Press as a pirate, when the object of that gentleman's mission to Sonora was a far different one; and one fact must be remembered, and that is, the Mexican Government has been holding out inducements to all persons who would settle in that State; and is it not natural to suppose that Americans would be the first to be tempted by an advantageous offer made by a foreign Government, and I am of the belief that in the event of the Mexican authorities injuring a hair of the head of Mr. CRABB, or any of the party, they will bring down a dreadful retaliation on themselves at the hands of the California friends of Mr. CRABB'S party; and, in fact, the whole people of the State of California would rise en masse to avenge such an act of treachery. My only reason for thus noticing your article of this morning, in regard to fillibusters, is to place Mr. CRABB and his party before the eyes of the American people in their proper position, so that in the event of their being put to death by the Mexican authorities, they can be able to judge how far the act was justifiable. Respectfully, yours,

FRANCIS D. CLARK,
formerly of Stockton, Cal.

Gov. Walker on his Way to Kansas.

The Rochester American says: Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, the new Governor of Kansas, passed through this city on his way to the scene of his duties, Saturday afternoon, on the express train. He was accompanied by E. O. PERRIN, Esq., and several other gentlemen who are going to the Territory with him. The Governor appears quite anxious to arrive at a just and equitable solution of the difficulties which have convulsed the Territory, and we trust he will be successful in attaining that end. Mr. PERRIN appeared in fine health and spirits. He assured us that he was going to Kansas simply as a private citizen, and that he had no official connection whatever with Governor WALKER'S Administration. He expects to return East before Autumn. None of the party left the depôt, as the train stopped only five minutes. The Governor intended to spend the Sabbath in Buffalo, unless a boat was to leave for Detroit Saturday evening. He expects to reach Leavenworth on Friday or Saturday.

CANAL BOATS DETAINED.—We learn from a gentleman who came over the Central Road yesterday, that for some five miles, between Montezuma and Port Byron, canal boats are lying two deep. They are all bound west. The level between Clyde and Montezuma is not filled, and, it is feared, will not be for some days. There are some forty boats bound for Buffalo detained at Black Rock by the ice. We learn that the dams on the Canal Enlargement work at the Rock were to be removed last evening, so that the boats will, probably, arrive to-day.—Buffalo Com. Advertiser, Tuesday.

The Times' Reward for the Discovery of the Burdell Murderer.

From the Newburg Daily News, May 19.

The New-York papers have for several days been amusing themselves with poking fun at the offer of the TIMES of a reward of five thousand dollars for such information as will lead to the conviction of the murderer of Dr. BURDELL. The animus which dictates these comments is very obvious. We have not been a very special admirer of the course and policy of the TIMES, but it must be admitted that it has rapidly acquired a commanding position among the New-York Dailies, and very naturally that fact has excited a strong jealousy on the part of its cotemporaries. In our judgment the course taken by the TIMES in regard to the brutal murder in question is highly to be commended. It has not hesitated to speak out boldly when the officers of the law have shown both a most lamentable want of efficiency, and on the part of some of them a spirit in the conduct of the investigation which should ere this have consigned them to that degradation which they have already reached in public estimation. It is a fact long ago established that the only hope of ferreting out the murderer lies in an appeal to the avarice of some accomplice or some one who has at least a knowledge of the facts. The TIMES has boldly taken the responsibility, and in so doing entitles itself to the thanks of all friends of justice. We repeat that we believe it is the only way in which the authors of that foul deed will ever be brought to answer to an outraged law, and we honor the press which has the nerve to take the position assumed by the TIMES. If it shall incidentally derive benefit from its public spirit it will have fairly earned it.

Those who have given a patient investigation to the testimony taken in this most extraordinary murder, and have made themselves familiar with such facts as could be brought to the light, are fully convinced that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and EMMET are guiltless of the deed of blood, however unworthy their character has been shown to be in the course of the investigation. There is evidence too, which goes to show that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM was really the wife of Dr. BURDELL. It is not of that nature, perhaps, which would be permitted to go to jury, but its moral strength is not the less conclusive. There is, too, a mass of evidence going to show the correctness of the theory of the medical men that the deed was committed by some man taller than the Doctor, and one whose acquaintance with anatomy showed him exactly where to strike. We have heard statements from gentlemen who have examined critically into the matter, which, in the hands of a skillful advocate, would bring out some startling facts before a court. Suspicion may point in a particular direction with great force, but while it is only suspicion a press as bold as the TIMES has shown itself would not be justifiable in being more explicit, and, as we have said before, it seems to us the offer of a tempting reward affords the only hope of a clue to the tangled web. The trace of blood has been most shrewdly covered, but gold may find a weak spot even in the supposed coat of mail.

From the Washington "States."

NEW-YORK, Monday, May 18.

Public attention has been again attracted with much interest to the Burdell tragedy, by the $5,000 reward offered by the proprietors of the DAILY TIMES, for the discovery and conviction of the murderer. The offer of the reward would not of itself attract so much attention, except for the comment made upon it by the other journals, and the very general discussion in all circles as to the motives of the TIMES proprietors in making the offer. There are some slight hopes that this new consideration of the subject, and the stimulus of reward, will lead to important disclosures. Indeed, already some new facts have been communicated during the last few days, which are believed to afford valuable clues to the perpetrators of the foul deed; and some of the most vigilant officers attached to our police are confident that ere many days they will be able to arrest the culprits upon proof sufficient to bring them to justice. If so, it will be found that the mystery of Dr. BURDELL'S death, whereabout on the afternoon and early evening of the murder, is part and parcel of the mystery of the murder—that one or more of those who were with him after dinner of the fatal day, was concerned in his death.

From the Norwich Courier.

The proprietors of the New-York Times, with a degree of public spirit which puts to shame the imbecility and indifference of the City and State authorities of New York, have offered a reward of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS to any person or persons who shall furnish them information that shall lead to the conviction of the murderer or murderers of Dr. BURDELL. Strange as it may seem, some of the papers in New-York and elsewhere are mean enough to attempt to throw ridicule upon the Times for this most commendable and public-spirited act. That the Times was not wholly indifferent to its own interest in making the offer is altogether probable. But whoever seeks to promote private and personal interests by promoting the public good and rendering life and property in such a city as New-York more secure, is entitled to thanks as a public benefactor, rather than to sneers as a schemer.

From the Ogdensburg Sentinel.

THAT REWARD.—The proprietors of the NEW-YORK TIMES have offered $5,000 reward for the discovery of the perpetrators of the Burdell murder. This is highly creditable to that extensive establishment, while it reflects anything but properly on the public authorities that the press has done, what they should have done. Had it not been for this reward the Burdell affair would probably have ever remained a mystery; now there is at least a chance that this mysterious murder may be traced out. $5,000 will create a greater activity among the police than any "sense of duty" ever would, and as we said before there is a chance for developments.

From the Auburn Advertiser.

THE MURDERER OF DR BURDELL.—The NEW-YORK TIMES of Saturday says, although only two days have elapsed since the offer of $

E. Pierrepont; for defendants, F. B. Cutting, Wm. M. Evarts, Geo. W. Parsons.

SUPERIOR COURT—General Term.
Before Full Bench.

THE NEW-YORK HOTEL DIFFICULTY.

Griffin vs. Judson et al.—This case, commonly known as the "New-York Hotel Difficulty," has already occupied considerable time and attention, and, from present appearances, is likely to continue so to do. The case was first argued before Judge Slosson, who granted a decree in favor of the plaintiff. From this the defendants appealed to the General Term, who yesterday rendered a decision ordering a new trial, costs to abide the event. To this order Judge Slosson dissents. Judge Bosworth will probably write the opinion of the Court.

Wm. C. Gray vs. Thos. Robjohn.—Order affirmed, with costs.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—Special Term.
Before Judge Brady.

QUESTION AS TO APPEALS FROM THE MARINE COURT.

A. Sternhaus vs. G. Schmidt.—Brady, J.—The appeal from the judgment of a single Justice of the Marine Court to the Justices at General Term must be taken in the same manner as appeals in the Supreme Court from a decision of a single Judge of the General Term. (Act of 1853.) The appeals from the judgment of a single Judge of the Supreme Court to the General Term are regulated by section 348 of the Code of Procedure which provides that such an appeal does not stay the proceedings unless security be given as upon an appeal to the Court of Appeals, or unless the Court or a Judge thereof so order, &c. No order in reference to the security to be given was made in this action in the Court below. To render an appeal to the Court of Appeals effectual for any purpose, a written undertaking must be executed on the part of the appellant by at least two sureties to the effect that the appellant will pay all the costs and damages which may be awarded against him on the appeal not exceeding $250, (section 334.) If the appeal be from a judgment directing the payment of money, it shall not stay the execution of the judgment unless a written undertaking be executed on the part of the appellant by at least two sureties, to the effect that if the judgment appealed from or any part thereof be affirmed, the appellant will pay the amount directed to be paid by the judgment, or the part of such amount as to which the judgment shall be affirmed, if it be affirmed only in part, and all damages which shall be awarded against the appellant on the appeal, (section 335,) and an undertaking upon an appeal shall be of no effect unless it be accompanied by the affidavit of the sureties, that they are each worth double the amont specified therein, (section 341.) When the appeal is perfected as provided in section 355, it stays all further proceedings in the Court below, (section 359.) The undertaking filed in the Court below, on the appeal from a judgment for $235 50, was right in form, but the affidavits of justification are deficient. The amount specified in the undertaking, and referred to by section 341, is the aggregate amount of the judgment, and the sum of $250 to indemnify the respondent for costs and damages, and the justification should have been in double such amount—and not only in $500. The amount of the judgment and the sum of $250 must be added together, and the sureties must justify in double the amount of such addition, where there is one undertaking only. The fact that the amount of costs that can be recovered on the appeal in the Marine Court is determined by statute, does not dispense with a compliance with the code as to the manner of taking the appeal. An undertaking which provided for the payment of the judgment, and all the damages, omitting costs, although the justification was ample, was held to be insufficient. The statute must be complied with. (Chemung Canal Bank vs. Judson, 10 How. Pr. Rep., 133.) The justification herein not complying with section 341, the undertaking was of no effect; no stay followed, and the plaintiff could proceed with the execution. The appellant, however, can be relieved under section 327, which provides that when a party shall give in good faith notice of appeal from a judgment, and shall omit through mistake to do any other act necessary to perfect the appeal or stay the proceedings, the Court may permit an amendment on such terms as may be just.

It seems that the goods seized under the execution have been claimed by a mortgagee in an action brought, and it is urged that the plaintiff having given the undertaking provided by section 211, should not now be disturbed by the appeal. That view cannot be sustained. The defendant has a right to appeal, and can exercise it with all its advantages, although between judgment-creditors and his mortgagee, a litigation be pending as to the property seized. He complains of the judgment by which the property was taken, and in which property he has a residuary interest, admitting the mortgage to be valid. Although he might discharge the mortgage, he could not stay the sale under the execution without perfecting his appeal.

Ordered that the defendant have five days from the entry or service of this order to perfect his appeal in the Court below, and proceedings stayed in the meantime on the execution issued.

No costs to either party.

Trial of Dorsay for Murdering a Girl in Worth-street.
COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.
Before the City Judge.

The City Judge, at the opening of the Court yesterday morning, delivered his charge to the Jury, in the second trial of David Gallagher for rape. The Jury took a little less than two hours to consider their verdict, and arrived at last at the conclusion that he was guilty of assault and battery with intent to commit a rape. Gallagher is twenty-one years old, but in appearance he is but eighteen or nineteen. The Jury returned, all things considered, a very lenient verdict. Sentence on him was reserved till Saturday.

THE NEGRO DORSAY TRIED.

The negro, John Dorsay, charged with the murder of the girl Anne Hopkins, in an alley-way, in Worth-street, in March last, was then placed on trial. As he was too poor to employ counsel, the Court instructed Mr. Busteed, the Corporation Counsel, to defend him. After the Jury had taken their seats, Mr. Busteed called their attention to the fact that the prisoner was a colored man, and if any of them entertained prejudices against colored men, they might retire. Two of their number availed themselves of the opportunity and withdrew. Their places being immediately supplied, the trial commenced. After the District-Attorney had stated the nature of the charge, and the facts he expected to prove, he called, as the first witness for the prosecution,

John Maccord, a Policeman of the Sixth District, who stated that about half past one o'clock on the morning of March 10, he saw the woman Anne or Nanny Hopkins, lying dead in the alley-way of No. 3 Worth-street. Her throat was cut in two places, and she was lying in a pool of blood. The alley led to a yard, at the rear of which was a tenement house. The woman was lying on her left side; and close to her body, to the blood that had flowed from her wounds, was the handle of a razor. The woman had some matches grasped in her right hand. Officers Smith and Davis were also present, and one of them having brought a light from the Station-house, the yard was examined for traces of blood. From the spot where the corpse lay, blood was distinctly visible, in drops, more or less numerous, across the yard, up the stairs of the rear house, to the threshold of the room occupied by Dorsay. That room was fastened and they knocked for several minutes before they could obtain admittance. It was at length opened by Dorsay, who in a surly manner demanded what they wanted, and grumbled at them for disturbing his rest. On entering they had to pass through a room occupied by another colored man, named Wilson, before Dorsay's sleeping-room was reached. In Wilson's room was a wash-bowl, with marks of blood on it. Wilson was asleep, or pretended to be asleep. In Dorsay's room the officers found a blue overcoat, the skirt of which was stained with blood. In one of the pockets was a razor case, made, as the stamp upon it proved, in Sheffield. Dorsay was in bed with the woman he lived with as his wife. The officers examined his hands. There was blood on the palm of the right hand, and a long smear of blood on the right wrist. Dorsay denied that there were blood. Afterward he said he had cut his wrist. On the following morning this witness found a razor-blade, made in Sheffield, as the stamp intimated, on the roof of a smoke house opposite Dorsay's window. There was no blood on it. Dorsay, on being taken to the station-house, denied all knowledge of the murder, and said that he had not been out since ten o'clock. He had peaceably rested in his bed since that hour. The murdered woman, witness said, on cross examination, was a prostitute. The man in the front room, John Wilson, was arrested and taken with Dorsay to the station house.

Another Police Officer, Abraham P. Davis corroborated the foregoing evidence, and added that he was left in charge of Dorsay's room while Dorsay and Wilson were taken to the Station-house by the other officers. While in this charge, he searched the room, and concealed at the foot of the bed he found a white shirt with blood upon the wrist, corresponding with the blood streak upon Dorsay's wrist.

Josephine Dixon, a colored woman, living in the rear house, where Dorsay was found, deposed that the murdered girl (a white, Irish girl) was her boarder. She left home about 7½ o'clock that night. About one o'clock in the morning she heard a loud scream in the alley. She was alarmed, and raised the window. A dark-looking man was rapidly crossing the yard. He came from where the scream was, entered the house and went up stairs to Dorsay's room. She did not recognize him. Half an hour afterwards she heard the Police Officers go up stairs.

Another colored woman, named Lydia Groose, living in the same house, also heard the scream, and heard the footsteps of a man cross the yard rapidly and go up stairs. He halted once while going up stairs.

Helena Burdoe, the colored woman who lived with Dorsay as his wife, was the next witness. She had heard him threaten to revenge himself on some woman—she did not know what woman he meant. This threat was made two weeks before the murder. She went to bed at eleven o'clock. Dorsay went out at ten o'clock, and did not return till between twelve and one. He was excited when he returned, and she said to him, "You have been drinking again;" he replied, "Mind your business." He went immediately to sleep, and she had to rouse him when the officers knocked. The white shirt with the blood on it, was one which she had bought for him. She did not hear him open the window after he came in. He sometimes used a razor to shave with. It was a white-handled razor. The handle of the razor produced in Court she did not recognize.

John Wilson, the occupant of the room adjoining that used by Dorsay, was the next witness. He said he came home about midnight, and proceeded to prepare his clothes for going in the morning to a situation he had obtained as a waiter. While so employed Dorsay came into his room, with a lamp in his hand. He had a blue overcoat on, and wore a white shirt. Witness quitted the room, leaving Dorsay there, for a few minutes. Dorsay shaved sometimes with a white handled razor, but, for a week or two before the murder, witness had seen a black handled razor in his possession.

Officer Smith testified to finding blood on the prisoner's coat, and to examining the wounds in the throat of the murdered woman. There were two wounds. The uppermost one was the worst; it was jagged, as if cut with a notched instrument. (The razor blade found on the roof of the house, and produced in Court, had several notches on its edge.) Found a razor case in prisoner's pocket stained with blood.

After the testimony of this witness was taken, the District-Attorney said that the case for the prosecution was closed.

Mr. Busteed, in reply to a question from the Judge, said he had no witnesses to call for the defence.

The Court then adjourned till this morning at 10 o'clock, when Counsel on both sides will sum up. The case of Lecarnes, for arson, will be called up to-day.

SURROGATE'S COURT.
Before Surrogate Bradford.

THE ESTATE OF PATRICK M'LOSKEY.

The estate of Patrick McLoskey was before the Surrogate yesterday, on the final accounting of the Executors, John Read and George Mesteral.

Patrick McLoskey died in France, on the 25th of January, 1854, leaving a polygraphic will, executed in France in accordance with French law. The will was admitted to Probate in the County of New-York, April 2, 1855. By it he disposes of $150,000 worth of personal property.

The executors, upon the will being admitted to probate here, paid legacies amounting to $60,000, immediately upon their appointment.

The residuary legatees now claim that they are entitled to interest on those legacies, they having been paid before the expiration of the year.

By the terms of the will he gave to his two half-sisters $6,000 each, which was to be invested in good State stocks, and not to be transferred to any institution or persons. The residuary legatees claim that on the death of their sisters their share reverts to them—that it is only a life estate.

One of the sisters died on the day previous to the decease of the testator, and the residuary legatees claim that they are entitled to her share. Her next of kin claim that it should go to them.

There is also a legacy of $5,000 to an infant residing in Tuscany. The Consul-General of Tuscany produces the proceedings of a family council of the infant's, by which he is authorized to receive the legacy for it.

The executors insist that a guardian for the infant should be appointed here first, and that they should not be compelled to pay to the Consul General.

The decision in the case is reserved.

NEW-YORK LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Prepared every week, expressly for the New-York Daily, Semi-Weekly, and Weekly Times, by a careful and experienced Reporter.

Wednesday Evening, May 20, 1857.

The principal Market Places are the WASHINGTON DROVE YARDS, 44TH-STREET; BROWNING'S, on Sixth-street; CHAMBERLIN'S, on Robinson-street; and O'BRIEN'S, on Sixth-street. Our reports refer to these regular markets. Irregular sales are sometimes made at Bergen Hill, N. J., and from the Hudson River Boats.

The great sales day at the Washington Yards is on WEDNESDAY of each week. The reports from all the yards are made up for the preceding week to the evening of that day.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about 1¼c. @1¾c. higher.

We quote:

PRICES OF BEEF AT FORTY-FOURTH-STREET.

	To-day.	Last Week.

At Browning's, Chamberlin's and O'Brien's prices do not materially differ from those at Forty-fourth-street. Chamberlin reports Beeves at 11c. @14c. O'Brien reports Beeves at 11c. @12c.

REMARKS UPON THE BEEF MARKET.

Only 2,183 Beeves were offered at Forty-Fourth-street for the present market, including the sales of yesterday. This is 336 less than last week. The receipts at all the markets for the past week amount to 2,743, or 805 less than the weekly average of 1856. With these figures in view, and the fact that the market has been scantily supplied for several weeks past, no one will wonder that prices materially advanced. With no special combination on the part of owners or brokers, the few Cattle in market, and the known wants of butchers were such as to lead to enormous prices, in some instances 14c. ₲ lb. to be weighed, for Cattle which were only of fair quality. In short, prices ruled higher than at any previous market since May, 1845, we believe; and even then, common Cattle were not as high as to-day. We quote an advance of 1¾c @1¾c. over last week, and favoring the seller even then, as, in most cases, full 50 lbs. more ₲ head were allowed by butchers than they would dress. Of this they were very well aware, but in a short market like the present, and empty stalls at home, they were forced to submit, promising an offset when they "come into power," with an overstocked market.... The decline in both hides and tallow act also against the butcher, the former bringing but 8¾c. and the latter 8c. ₲ lb.....A large number of the cattle were from distilleries, and having no previous exposure, they poorly withstood the effects of the late severe storm, both on their way and in the muddy yards, during the rain of to-day. We observed that some of them trembled, and fell upon being taken out, and had to be slaughtered on, or hauled from the grounds..... Sales to butchers at Bergen have been small, in comparison with a full market, say 150 head.....Sales at Albany for the Eastern markets amounted to about 500.....We noticed buyers in the yards to-day from a distance in the country around, and parties were purchasing at high rates for the Bermuda trade.....The general quality of the cattle was fair, being an improvement upon last week.....The yards were emptied before night, and more would doubtless have found ready buyers, even at the prevailing prices.

The following are the principal lots on sale to-day including a few disposed of last evening:

We present, as usual, a few extracts from our copious notes of the transactions of this day:

D. Belden sold on his own account 62 Western Cattle, which he purchased last season and took to his place in Dutchess County for feeding. They were of different weights and qualities, bringing 12½c. @13½c. ₲ lb. H. Kelly took three at $395, and W. Moat, twelve at $116 each, or say 13c.

Wells & Hoxie sold 46 Illinois Cattle, for Silvers & Lakey. They were a hard lot, such as would scarcely sell in a low market, but with the present high prices, brought 12¾c. Average estimated weight, 628 lbs. net. The same parties sold 64 Distillery Cattle for F. Lakey of Palmyra, N. Y. These were a better lot, estimated 750 lbs. and brought 13c.@14c. ₲ lb.

C. W. Roberts, of Marion County, Ohio, brought on 18 fine Steers, weighing, at home, about 1,600 lbs. They were wholesaled, yesterday, to G. Shepard at $165 each, or full 13c. ₲ lb. They were retailed, to-day, at an advance.

J. Burns, of Munroe County, New-York, had the finest pair of Cattle in the Yards. They were large six year olds, in which the Durham blood predominated. Live weight of the pair, at Albany, 5,680 lbs. They were estimated by good judges to dress 3,500 lbs. Geo. Hawes took them at $475, or, as he thinks, 14c. ₲ lb. They were born large and fat.

A. Hurd contributed 66 still fed Cattle, fed by Johnson, Cook & Co., of Onondaga County, N. Y. They were prime for their kind, and sold by Sherman & Hoag, second only to their estimate, for 14½—which are say 15c. Estimated weight 825 lbs net. C. Gwier took 15 at $131 50 each; W. Laylor 9 at $120; B. Lawrence 8 at the same price, and D. Brill 4 at $115 ₲ head.

E. O. Taylor contributed 16 head of fair Kentucky Cattle, estimated 850 lbs net, which were sold by Saml. McGraw at $116 ₲ head, or 13½ ₲ lb.

D. G. Culver sold on his own account 10 good Ohio Cattle at $126 each, or 14c. ₲ lb. They were heavy Cattle, estimated at 900 lbs. net.

Jas. McCullum brought in 80 Steers from Fayette County, Ind., rated 700 lbs. net. They were commonish Cattle and brought 12½ @13c. A few of the best, 13½c. ₲ lb. C. G. Teed, salesman.

Bartram & Megritt sold on their own account 115 very fair Illinois Cattle, estimated at 725 lbs. net, at 13c.@14c. J. E. Bathgate, of Newark, took 22 head at $107 50 each, or 14½, buyer's estimate.

Smith & Lamb contributed 99 fair Illinois cattle, rated 750 lbs. net. T. White & Son disposed of them at 12c.@14c.

George Sage sold at Bergen yesterday 16 common mixed cattle for Mr. Hart, at 12c. ₲ lb. Rouge of weight 450@750 lbs. net.

O. Hurd sold for A. Hurd 40 still cattle from New-York State, estimated 850 lbs. There were in good order and brought 13c @14c. ₲ lb.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and very greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40 or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20 @$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The market is not quite as well supplied with Cows, and an advance is noted. The unusually high prices of beef induce milkmen to throw their poorer cows into the beef market, and seek for fresh ones to supply their places.

Allerton reports 52 Milch Cows received during the week, selling at $30@$35 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $50@$60 for extras. A few as high as $75. Market not as well supplied, and higher prices rule.

Brownins reports receipts of 62 Milch cows, selling at $25@$30 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $60@$70 for extras. Prices are a trifle higher, with a good demand.

Chamberlin reports 117 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$35 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $60@$70 for extras. Fair supply and ready sales.

O'Brien reports 144 Milch Cows, selling, at $30@$40 for common, $40@$50 for good, and a few at $60@$70. Market well supplied, and selling slowly, at last week's quotations.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Bobs"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for but little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are Allerton's, Browning's, Chamberlin's and O'Brien's.

The receipts for the week have been very large, and the quality has, for the most part, been good. Prices have advanced in consequence of the better grade, and high prices of other meats.

Allerton reports receipts of 806 Veal Calves, selling for 5½c.@6¾c. A few at 7c.@7¼c. ₲ lb., live weight. There is an improvement upon the quality, and sales are brisk.

Browning reports receipts of 98 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5c.@7¼c ₲ lb. live weight. Quality fair and market good.

Chamberlin reports receipts of 134 Veal Calves, selling at 5c@7c. ₲ lb. live weight. They are in better demand, with a fair supply.

O'Brien reports 122 Veal Calves, selling at 6c @7½c. ₲ lb. Market well supplied, and selling readily at advanced prices.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at Allerton's, Browning's, and Chamberlin's, at so much ₲ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reported prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 55 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₲ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

Although the receipts have been nearly 1,000 over last week, still the market is not well supplied, and prices continue high. Lambs are more plentiful, but sell at high prices, say 18c.@25c. for the meat. Many of the sheep are now sheared.

Allerton reports receipts of 512 Sheep and Lambs, which brought 13c.@15c. ₲ lb., dressed weight. A few Lambs sold for $6, or about 25c. ₲ lb.

Browning reports receipts of 1,608 Sheep and Lambs, selling with wool on at 13c.@15c.; sheared at 11c.@13c., net. Lambs are bringing $4@$7 50 each, or 18c.@20c. ₲ lb. Receipts light. Arrivals this morning 300 head. Selling readily.

Chamberlin reports receipts of 2,137 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $4 50@$8 ₲ head, or 12½@14c. ₲ lb., dressed weight. Market well supplied with no variation in price.

REPORTS OF BROKERS' SALES AT BROWNING'S FOR WEEK ENDING MAY 19, 1857.

Jas. McCarty reports sales of 938 Sheep and Lambs at an average of $6 29 ₲ head.

Thos. E. Larkin reports sales yesterday of 158 Sheep and Lambs for $11 36 or 13c.@15c. ₲ lb. They were wool Sheep.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ₲ lb., gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at Allerton's, Forty-fourth-street, had at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughter-houses.

Large arrivals of late, and dull sales have caused a large accumulation of hogs. Fear of the distemper prevents both farmers and distillers from purchasing. We again advise feeders to buy at the present time from good droves, as we do not believe they will risk much by so doing.

Allerton reports receipts of 4,534 hogs during the past week. Prices for live hogs ranged during the week at 6¾c.@6¾c. ₲ lb. The market is overstocked, and only extra animals brought the latter price.

Van Brunt & Watrous, Pork-Packers, No. 200 Chambers-street, report prices as follows:

CORN-FED.

Live	6½c.	Dressed	8¾c.

Stock plenty, especially light hogs, with a depressed market.

Philadelphia Cattle Market.
Philadelphia, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

The Beef Market yesterday and to-day was rather poorly supplied, the number offered being much less than for many weeks. This state of things had the effect of making the demand active, and increasing the price.

Beef Cattle—The entire offerings at all the markets only reached 600 head, most of which were of excellent quality. All were sold at from $11 50@$13 ₲ 100 lbs., and a few extra prime ones at $13 50@$14 ₲ 100 lbs.

Sheep and Lambs—The price of Sheep advanced in consequence of the scarcity of Beeves, and 3,050 head in market were soon sold at from 6½c.@9c. ₲ lb., gross. Lambs are worth from $3 to $6, as in quality.

Hogs—This market was very well supplied, the sales having reached 2,000 head, at prices ranging from $7 to $8 50@$8 25, as in condition.

Cows and Calves—This description of stock advanced a shade, 325 head having been disposed of at from $20 to $40 for stock, and from $30 to $65 for Milch Cows.

Wholesale Produce Markets.
Reported exclusively for the New-York Daily Times.

Wednesday Evening, May 20, 1857.

The prices given in our report from week to week are the average wholesale prices obtained by producers, and not those at which produce is sold from the market. The variations in prices refer chiefly to the qualities of the articles.

The cold, backward Spring is unfavorable for a full supply of new vegetables. Asparagus and Rhubarb continue to increase in amount, although much of the former is of weak growth, showing—as the marketmen say by its bent heads and inclination to return to the earth—as though it had made a mistake in coming out in such inhospitable weather.

A few Strawberries have arrived from Virginia, and are held at $1@$1 25 ₲ quart boxes.

Small Turnips of this season's growth are in market from Norfolk, and sell for 50c. ₲ dozen bunches.

Green Peas, from the South, are still scarce, although the price has declined a little.

Tomatoes in boxes holding about six quarts are in market from Bermuda, which sell for $1@1 13 ₲ box.

The steamship Marion brought in yesterday morning 200,000 barrels of new Potatoes and Green Peas, from Charleston, S. C.

There have been no arrivals of Potatoes from Bermuda during the week. The former stock, as well as the supply of old Potatoes, has undergone no change in price.

Butter is dull, with no receipts of good grass-made packages. A slight decline in price is noted.

Eggs are firm at an advance. Moderate receipts from Ohio, Philadelphia and Canada.

Markets....Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

New-York, Wednesday, May 20, 1857—6 P. M.

The boisterous weather is still the most serious impediment in the way of free movements.

ASHES—Are in limited demand at old rates. Pearls, $7 25@$7 37½; Pots, $7 62½@$7 75 ₲ 100 lbs. Saleratus, 7¾c. ₲ lb.

BOOTS AND SHOES—The demand is very tame, and prices lean in favor of buyers.

CANDLES—Are salable and steady, as before quoted.

COAL—The market is dull for foreign, and rather brisker for Anthracite, at unchanged prices.

COFFEE—Is heavy and languid. Java, 15½c @15¾c.; Laguayra, 12¾c @13¾c.; Maracaibo, 12c.@13c.; Rio, 9¾c.@11¾c.; Jamaica, 11¾c.@12c.; St. Domingo, 11½ @11¾c.; Bahia, 10½c. ₲ lb. Stock of all kinds in first hands, yesterday, 99,370 pkgs., including 56,469 bags Rio, 16,806 pkgs. Java, 4,862 bags Maracaibo, 3,893 Bahia, 3,381 Laguayra, 2,275 Native Ceylon, which kind is held at 15c. ₲ lb., and 3 240 bags of other descriptions. An auction sale of 3,000 bags Rio is announced for to-morrow, the 21st inst.

COPPER—Is moderately inquired for, but at easier prices. New sheathing, 31c; old do., 25c @26½c.; Yellow do., 28c.; American ingot, 27¼c @28½c.; Chili Pig, 26¾c @27½c.; Bolts, 33; Braziers, 34c. ₲ lb.

COTTON—Is in pretty fair request at our quotations. Middling Uplands, 13½c.@13¾c.; do. Gulfs 14c @13¾c., and other kinds at proportionate rates. ₲ lb. Our available supply is now 68,000 bales, against 60,000 bales same time last year.

DRY GOODS—We can report nothing really new in this line, save—that there is considerable satisfaction in recording—that Western merchants are beginning to meet the claims of their Eastern creditors, with a degree of promptness, that cannot fail to make some slight atonement for their preceding tardiness. As to current movements, they may be briefly noticed, as being very limited, irregular, and so far as regards their effect upon prices, quite unsatisfactory to sellers, who are eager to reduce their supplies, even though they should be forced to make still heavier abatements, in order to complete a transaction perfectly very desirable object. There is less serious depression perceptible in the market for standard and favorite domestic productions, than for the leading styles of imported fabrics.

FISH—The demand is moderate at essentially unaltered rates.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is depressed and drooping. Sales: 6,500 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 35	@	$6 40
Straight State	6 40	@	6 45
Extra State	6 55	@	6 75
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 35	@	6 65
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	6 50	@	6 70
Fancy Michigan	6 40	@	6 65
Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 70	@	8 50
Extra Ohio	6 90	@	8 75
Fancy Genesee	7 25	@	7 40
Extra Genesee	7 50	@	9 75
Extra Missouri	7 75	@	10 00

Canadian is dull and lower. Sales have been reported of about 600 bbls., in lots, at from $5 40@$8 50 for superfine to choice extra, ₲ bbl. Southern is pretty briskly inquired for, at full rates. The transactions since our last, comprise about 1,800 bbls very low mixed, to choice Extra, at $7 20@$8 ₲ bbl. Rye Flour is salable and firm, at $5 65@$6 for Fine to Superfine, ₲ bbl. Corn Meal is still scarce and held at $3 65@$3

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Governor MARCY has been for some time in this City, where he has been welcomed by his old friends of all political parties with cordial hospitality. His conservative course while Secretary of State, and the degree of influence which is generally attributed to it in holding in check the ultra tendencies of some of his associates in the Cabinet, have commended him very strongly to the regard of the New-York public. The South, the newspaper recently started at Richmond, Va., publishes in a letter from Washington, the report that Mr. MARCY is about to give his open support to the principles and policy of the Republican party. We attach no importance whatever to the rumor, except as an indication of the sentiments felt towards him by that section of the Democratic party which the South represents. He has always been distrusted by the ultraists of the Southern States, and is now a special object of dislike to the fire-eaters and fillibusters, whose designs no amount of political pressure could induce him to regard with favor or toleration.

We publish this morning details of news from the Mexican Capital to the 29th ult., mainly accounts of the movements of Government against the Sonora filibusters. A force was preparing at the Capital to march to the scene of action. The Extraordinary estimates the number of troops of the line in Sonora, at 1,000, to which are to be added 3,000 National Guards, and such other forces as could be made available. The Government was very active, and evidently labored under serious apprehensions for the result.

Since the above was written, the Mexican account of the battle with and capture of Colonel CRABB and his followers has reached us, in the Evening Edition of the New-Orleans Picayune of the 14th inst. It conforms with the brief telegraphic account already published.

The steamship Black Warrior, from New-Orleans on the 12th and Havana on the 15th, arrived last night. A report was current at Havana when she left, that the Spanish steamer, then hourly expected, would bring orders for the immediate commencement of hostilities against Mexico, to be opened by a naval attack on Vera Cruz. This, in connection with the fact that latest advices from Spain state that fresh troops were being shipped from Havana, is significant of a determination on the part of Spain to push matters with Mexico to the furthest extreme.

It is stated that the Sugar crop of Cuba will fall short of that of last year by about 20 per cent., and prices still had an upward tendency.

The Havana correspondent of the New-Orleans Delta has the following in reference to the rumored flight of General WALKER: "It was rumored about yesterday that WALKER had been so terribly beaten by the Central American allies, that his soldiers had been disbanded and he compelled to flee to an English ship-of-war for protection. I have traced this rumor to a man not very notorious as a teller of truth, and from his character generally, I really believe that with him, 'the wish has been father to the thought.'"

The steamship City of Manchester, from Liverpool on the morning of the 6th inst., arrived at this port yesterday. Her advices have been anticipated by the Arago and the Niagara.

The steamship George Law did not leave yesterday on account of the storm. She goes to-day at noon.

The steamship Niagara arrived at Boston at 9 o'clock last night, and her mails will reach this City about 5 o'clock P. M. to-day.

The Legislature, at its last session, appointed Messrs. DAVID D FIELD, WM. CURTIS NOYES and ALEXANDER W. BRADFORD, Commissioners to codify the entire public laws of this State. These gentlemen have accepted the duty (for which the act expressly provides there shall be no remuneration) have entered upon their labors, and having agreed upon a plan to be pursued, have made the proper division of the work.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives yesterday adopted, by a vote of 210 to 69, the address from the Senate, asking for the removal of EDWARD G. LORING from the office of Judge of Probate for Suffolk County. Judge LORING, it will be recollected, decided in favor of the rendition of ANTHONY BURNS, the fugitive slave, whose case created so much excitement some time since, and this action is in consequence of that decision.

PRESSLY O. CRAIG, of Washington City, and son of Colonel CRAIG, of the Ordnance, has been appointed by the President, Second Lieutenant of Artillery.

The Cattle markets have been poorly supplied during the past week, the total City receipts amounting to only 2,743, while there has been an unusual demand for Beef by the great number of persons recently here to attend the Anniversaries besides the customary influx of traders from all parts of the country. The severe storm also kept back the usual receipts from the country adjacent to the City. A panic seemed to take possession of the Forty-fourth-street markets yesterday, and prices went up higher than has been known for a dozen years past. Many Cattle of but ordinary or medium quality sold at prices equal to 12 cents, 13 cents, 14 cents, and even 15 cents per pound for the dressed carcasses, including rough meat, legs and all. The advance upon the average rates of the preceding week were fully 1½ cent. per pound, or 12@15 per cent. Many butchers estimated the advance as greater even than this.

Gov. KING yesterday transmitted to the District-Attorney, and to Mr. H. L. CLINTON, his decision in the case of Coroner CONNERY. He thinks the evidence taken before Judge DALY, touching the alleged improper conduct of the Coroner, insufficient, and not of a nature to call for the exercise of the power of removal intrusted to Executive discretion. The Governor rather insinuates than openly states an objection to the "unbecoming and flippant manner," of the Coroner while conducting parts of the Inquest, while with regard to the "imprisonment" of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and ECKEL at No. 31 Bond-street, he thinks that even a more stringent deprivation of their liberty would have been beneficial to the ends of justice.

The new Police Commissioners tried Mr. MATSELL yesterday for insubordination in refusing to obey the order of Superintendent TALLMADGE to detail five policemen for the protection of the State property at Quarantine, Staten Island. Mr. MATSELL did not appear to answer. Decision upon the case will be given to-day. The new Commissioners have taken rooms at No. 88 White-street. Yesterday, Mayor WOOD and City Judge RUSSELL dismissed First Lieutenant BRYAN, of the Nineteenth Ward, and Sergeant STEERS, of the Thirteenth Ward, for insubordination in avowing their determination to obey the order of the new Commissioners. At the Fifth and all other Station-houses comparative quiet remains. Capt. CARPENTER still retains his post at the Fifth Ward Station.

The case of FOWLES vs. BOWEN & MCNAMEE, for an alleged libel, was commenced in the Superior Court yesterday. This case is one of importance, not only as it involves a large sum of money, but also charges fraud, which, if committed, would subject to State Prison the members of one of the most prominent dry goods firms in this City. The case was tried once before, and a verdict for $6,000 rendered for the plaintiff, which was set aside and a new trial granted by the General Term, because of some irregularity in the trial. Both the plaintiff and Mr. BOWEN, one of the defendants, are to be placed upon the stand, under the new law.

The Jury impanneled to inquire into the cause of the death of JAMES O'DONNELL, the young man who was stabbed in Roosevelt-street on Sunday night, yesterday rendered a verdict—"That the said JAMES O'DONNELL came to his death from a wound in the abdomen, inflicted by a knife in the hands of MICHAEL HAYS; and it is the opinion of the Jury that his brother, THOMAS HAYS, is an accessory before the fact." THOMAS HAYS is in custody. MICHAEL is at large.

The Superintendents of Insane Asylums at their meeting yesterday resolved to hold their next annual meeting at Quebec on the 2d Tuesday of June, 1858.

The trial of the negro DORSAY, for murder, was commenced yesterday in the Court of General Sessions. All the evidence was taken, and the summing up will take place this morning.

There was a very interesting and spirited discussion commenced last night at the Shiloh Presbyterian Church, between FREDERICK DOUGLASS and CHARLES L. REMOND as to the Anti-Slavery character of the Constitution. The house was full, and the debate admirably conducted on both sides.

ELLEN KELLY, aged 18 years, was burned to death Tuesday afternoon, by her clothes taking fire from a grate in the house of Mr. COOK, No. 122 West Twenty-third-street, where she was employed as a domestic.

The bodies of two drowned men were found yesterday in the East River—one at the foot of Charles-street, and another at pier No. 18. Inquests will be held upon them to-day.

A woman committed suicide yesterday at the corner of Oliver and Water-streets, by taking poison.

Two men were drowned yesterday by the sinking of a sloop at the foot of Jay-street.

Independence of the Press—The Position of the "Times."

The "TIMES" just now is favored with an unusual degree of attention from its brethren of the Rural Press. The statement a few days since that in its political conduct it would be "entirely independent of Political Parties,—judging all events and all men upon their merits, and giving praise and censure, support and opposition, where either may be deserved by a strict and impartial regard to the public welfare," seems greatly to have disturbed the repose, and in some cases the temper, of Journalists in different sections of the State and country. Ultra partisans of the Republican school are disposed to treat it as a change of position,—an abandonment of party and consequently of principle. Ultra partisans of the Democratic faction regard it as an attempt to trespass on their manor by claiming the confidence of men in the Democratic ranks upon whom they consider themselves as having a mortgage. The Journal of Commerce, which from an independent journal has come to be one of the most zealous and unscrupulous party organs in the country, warns the faction it serves against placing any reliance upon the TIMES. The Syracuse Journal, which never claimed to be anything more than a small, hollow tube for politicians to speak through, affects to rejoice that the TIMES has thus "cut loose from its past asscintious,"—expresses the opinion that "the Republican Party can do without it,"—and indicates its own very just, if not very elevated, conception of the position and duties of a party organ by the philosophical remark that "a discontented servant is worse than none." Whatever other complaints the party it "serves" may have against the Journal, that of discontent at the nature or degrading character of its services is not among them. It is the most patient of pack-horses, and, in spite of its Republicanism, is a devout believer in the doctrine of "involuntary servitude" as the normal condition of the Editorial—though not of the negro—race.

We have no fault to find with the sentiments or the practices of our brethren of the profession. They are entitled to judge for themselves as to the line of conduct they will pursue. They can put whatever estimate seems to them just and proper upon their own judgments, and their own independence of opinion and of action. If they think they can do more good by becoming passive instruments in the hands of party managers, and by accepting the decrees of party Committees as their rule of conduct, than by saying and doing what their own judgments dictate, they are quite right in accepting such a rôle. The chances are that it is precisely the one they are best qualified to fill. We believe in the necessity and utility of Political Parties,—and in the consequent necessity and utility of party organs and party tools. They have their uses, and the political condition of the country would be much worse without them than it is with them. The tendency of party is always to excess, and, therefore, to evil. It is checked and restrained by hostile pressure. What the Democratic Party would be and do, but for the resistance and restraint of the Republican Party, may be inferred from what is now doing in this City, where its relative strength almost nullifies the opposition. What the Republican Party might do if it had complete and undisputed sway, may be inferred from some things which it did at Albany last Winter. Both parties are essential to the public good, but it is not desirable that either should become omnipotent. Each should always have a good degree of numerical strength, and a goodly number of active, unscrupulous, energetic, obedient and contented "servants." If we thought there was likely to be any deficiency in the supply of these useful and indispensable auxiliaries, we might possibly enlist in the ranks, and put on the livery ourselves. But this is precisely the department of Journalism which seems to us to be overrun and overdone. It is an easy service, and tempts eligible parties who happen to be out of employment. To say nothing of pay, it is pleasanter, to men of acquiescent mood and social habits, to act with an organized party, than to act alone. Fighting in ranks, and under officers, is more agreeable than carrying on warfare upon one's own hook. If new questions arise, which have public importance, it is difficult to form opinions for one's self upon them, on which it is safe to act. But all this trouble is saved when an Editor can feel sure of getting his opinions and his orders from a political Convention or Committee, or from some potential partisan who governs the politics of his district, and exercises what is called a "controlling influence" over the party in his neighborhood. And we are not at all surprised at the multitude of Editors who seek relief from the labor and perplexity of thinking for themselves, by thus becoming mediums for the utterance of the opinions, and the promotion of the designs, of others.

But the very fact that everybody rushes in that direction inclines us to go the other way. The field is clearer. There is more elbow-room, and if the work is harder, it is somewhat more consistent with self-respect. We aim to publish a good newspaper,—one which shall give to the public prompt and reliable information of all movements occurring in the world of action and of opinion. Why should we cut and carve all this so as to make it suit the views, or promote the purposes, of a sect, a clique, or a political party? A newspaper is designed to accompany its reports of fact with comments and explanations:—why should it make these comments in the interest of a party rather than of the public at large? In its remarks upon the public acts of public men, why should it praise everything done by the men of one party and denounce everything done by the men of the other? Nothing can justify this on moral grounds but the conviction that all virtue, all wisdom, all honesty of purpose, are confined to one party,—and all their opposites monopolized by the other. Very young persons often cherish such a belief; but if they have any brains they generally outgrow it. We shall assume, what we believe to be true, that the great mass of all political parties are equally honest and equally desirous of promoting the public good; and that the leaders of all political parties will alike "bear watching."

So far as questions of principle are concerned, we are not aware of any change actual or intended in the course of THE TIMES. We have seen no reason to change our opinions in regard to any cardinal subject of public policy. We are quite as confident that the public welfare demands the exclusion of Slavery from Kansas,—the restriction of the power of Slavery over our national Government, and the greater infusion of Northern principles and Northern influences into the Federal councils,—as we were while contending for the attainment of these objects through the election of FREMONT to the Presidency. But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the advancement of these principles is not now properly a party question—nor are we disposed to postpone their ascendency until the Republican Party can achieve success. We hope that the present Administration will be compelled by public sentiment and regard for its own interest to make Kansas a free State; and if under that pressure it shall take measures which promise that result, we shall give them all possible aid and comfort. And we propose to pursue the same course in regard to all matters of public interest. Whatever may be done which shall tend to the promotion of the public good shall have our support, no matter what political party may be entitled to the credit of doing it;—and whatever conduct may have an opposite tendency we shall censure and denounce, no matter what party may be responsible therefor. And we shall endeavor to judge of all questions by their relation to the public welfare,—rather than to the ascendency of any political party or the personal advancement of any individuals. If in this there is any change of policy, then it is quite time the change were made.

The Governor King and the Coroner.

Governor KING's letter in regard to the charges preferred against Coroner CONNERY will be found in another column. The Governor seems to be quite unmindful of the maxim, which has generally commended itself by its common sense to men in office, that in writing public letters it is desirable to stop when everything necessary has been said. The public officer who goes further and attempts to enlighten the community by the expression of his mere opinions, is very apt to damage, more or less seriously, his own position.

Governor KING begins by saying that "the testimony does not sustain the charges against the Coroner, and that they must, therefore, be dismissed as unproved." If he had stopped there he would have done well enough. We think the public generally would have agreed with him in opinion. But he proceeds immediately to throw doubt upon the case by indignantly denouncing the "flippant and unbecoming conduct" of the Coroner and especially the "great indignity" of causing Mrs. CUNNINGHAM to be stripped and examined by a man, and in the presence of other men:—and then he still further complicates and confuses his own argument by pleading in vindication of this "gross indignity" the fact that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM herself did not complain of it. What has that to do with the case? Suppose she were too shameless a person to have felt the indignity:—would the Coroner's conduct have been one whit the more justifiable on that account? And suppose, on the other hand, she had objected to it and complained of it:—would not the Governor himself, as well as the public at large, have at once construed that fact into evidence of guilt? Mrs. C. pursued the only course that was safe or possible for her to take. She yielded to brute force which she had no power to resist,—and did what she could not have refused to do without a constructive indication of guilt.

The Governor, after thus disposing of this point, says:—

"As to the alleged excess of authority by the Coroner, in restraining parties of their freedom, it may well be questioned whether a more prompt and stringent exercise of that authority, by immediately placing the parties at No. 31 Bond-street in separate confinement before any communication could pass between them, might not have led to the detection of the guilty."

What this means we do not find it easy to decide. It would seem to imply that the parties indicted for the murder were really guilty of it, and only escaped conviction by the fact that they were allowed to have some communication with each other and thus agree upon the suppression of the truth. If Governor KING has any evidence of this, he should divulge it. If he has not, he should never have allowed himself to say it. So far as we are aware, there is not the slightest proof that any communication of the kind passed between the parties,—that any one of the inmates of the house ever said one syllable to any other about the testimony to be given or suppressed, or anything of the kind. So far as evidence goes, it is all the other way. Unless, then, he has knowledge on this subject from some other source, not accessible to the public, he has trespassed most unwarrantably upon the proprieties of his position, by the unmanly act of invoking the public odium of actual guilt upon a woman who has been acquitted by the legal tribunals, and who in the eye of the law must be held just as innocent as any other member of the community. If Governor KING really entertains the belief that parties in the house committed the murder, and that if the other inmates would tell all they know they might be convicted of it, why does he not stimulate their disposition to tell the truth by the offer of a suitable reward?

The closing sentence of the Governor's letter is not the least remarkable part of it. He avoids the responsibility of acting upon the complaints against the Coroner by saying that his "general fitness" for the place was decided by the fact that the people elected him to fill it. But this begs the whole question. The object of the law in clothing the Executive with the power of removal for cause, was to provide a remedy for mistakes into which the people might be betrayed. The people elected Mayor WOOD to be the head of the Police Department at the same time that they elected Gov. KING to be the Chief Executive of the State. But this consideration did not induce the Governor to withhold his assent from the act of the Legislature deciding against the "general fitness" of the Mayor for the post to which he was thus elected. If the Governor's reasoning were good, it would prove a good deal more than he would be willing to concede. Fortunately for his conduct, his logic is lame.

We do not make these remarks for the purpose of dissenting from the propriety of the Governor's decision to dismiss the charges against the Coroner. That decision is the best thing in the whole letter,—and the danger is that the reasons he gives for it will convince the public that the decision itself is wrong.

Rebellion—in a Pickwickian Sense.

At the meeting called in the Park last week, to resist the laws of this State, the Honorable JOHN COCHRANE made a speech. The Honorable JOHN COCHRANE, it must be remembered, was an officer of the Federal Government under the late Administration, and is now a member of Congress from this City. Therefore, whatever the Honorable JOHN COCHRANE has to say on public occasions is supposed to be interesting, if not important. What the Honorable JOHN COCHRANE did say, on the occasion referred to, has attracted considerable notice; and with how much reason, let the following extract from his speech, as reported in the TIMES, in relation to the New Police laws, show:

"RESIST this oppression! [Cheers.] Resist the despotism of infamous law—a despotism as ruinous in its consequences as this anarchy itself! Anarchy, if the only preventative of anarchy is law, the only remedy for oppressive law is REVOLUTION! Revolution at the ballot-box, if it may be;—AT ALL EVENTS, REVOLUTION! PEACEFUL, VIOLENT, ARMED OR UNARMED! [Immense cheering.] I RECOMMEND IT! That is the higher law. That is the law of the people. The law of the people is the voice of God. It will assert itself. It shall be heard, or you are slaves? Now, choose the alternative! [A voice—"The knife!"] Choose to submit tamely, without resistance, or resist peacefully, if it may be, but VIOLENTLY if it must be! Choose you resistance on this one side, or degradation on the other! [Loud cheers.] That is the issue, and you have to determine it here to-night."

We know that it is the fate of great men to be perpetually misunderstood. We remember that such was the fate of Mr. Pickwick, G. C. M. P. C., "when that illustrious man," as his biographer tells us, "slowly mounted into the Windsor chair, on which he had been previously seated, and addressed the Club himself had founded." We observe that such is the fate of Mr. COCHRANE, M. C., when he exhorts the rabble in the Park to resist, "armed or unarmed," the laws of this State.

For this inflammatory and treasonable speech, the public has called Mr. COCHRANE to account, and the honorable gentleman has just answered the public with a very plausible letter; in which he insists very earnestly that he didn't say what he did say; and that if he did say it, he didn't intend it should be interpreted according to the ordinary use of the English language. In short, the public will be indulgent enough to understand that treasonable resistance—"armed or unarmed"—which the Honorable JOHN COCHRANE recommended, not in any common sense, but purely in a Pickwickian sense.

This explanation reminds us of Mr. Pickwick's dilemma, on the occasion referred to, before the Club. The benevolent Pickwick was discoursing, with great fervor, on the horrible state of affairs in general. He was, like the Honorable Congressman in the Park, calling upon his auditors to contemplate the scenes which were enacting around them—stage-coaches were upsetting in all directions, horses were bolting, boats were overturning, boilers were bursting;—when, suddenly, Mr. Blotton interrupted the orator, who was becoming personal, with the declaration that the honorable gentleman was a humbug! Tremendous confusion ensued, and several members threw themselves upon the Chair, who was quite sure the Honorable Pickwickian would withdraw the expression he had just made use of.

Mr. Blotton (so says the Report) with all possible respect for the Chair, was quite sure he would not. The Chairman then felt it his duty to demand of the honorable gentleman whether he had used the expression which had just escaped him in a common sense. Mr. Blotton felt no hesitation in saying, that he had not—he had used the word in its Pickwickian sense. [Hear, hear.] He was bound to acknowledge that, personally, he entertained the highest regard and esteem for the honorable gentleman; he had merely considered him a humbug in a Pickwickian point of view. [Hear, hear.] Mr. Pickwick felt much gratified by the fair, candid, and full explanation of his honorable friend. He begged it to be at once understood, that his own observations had been merely intended to bear a Pickwickian construction.

The citizens of New-York will feel very much gratified if they can be assured that the treasonable acts and advice of Mayor WOOD and his partisans, who are now endeavoring to trample down the laws of this State, will admit merely of a Pickwickian, or Cochranian, construction.

Crime and its Cure.

The recent Convention of delegates from Juvenile Reformatories held in this City, has developed some most valuable results. If the statistics are exact, they show that the outlay of money on the class of young criminals has been better repaid to the State, than that of almost any other public expenditure. The average expense per capita in the various Houses of Refuge through the country, is only about $90 a year for each child, while the average of reforms reaches some 80 per cent. When it is considered that the State boards, feeds, teaches and apprentices each of these children for some years, at a period when his labor is of little value, the expense is certainly moderate and shows a careful economy on the part of these institutions. And when, further, we remember that eighty out of every hundred of these little vagabonds, instead of plundering society, are reclaimed to add to its wealth and promote its welfare, we feel that, regarded only in the light of economy, the Houses of Refuge are profitable institutions.

In the report of one Reformatory, represented on this occasion, the expenses of Massachusetts for criminal prosecutions and prisons, during the past five years, were presented. They furnish a fair estimate of the extravagance of crime:

Expense of County Jails, for five years	$575,784
Costs of Criminal Prosecutions in Courts	423,154
Costs of Criminal Prosecutions before Justice Courts	884,441
Total	$1,883,379

A gentleman in Fall River, engaged among the criminal classes, estimates the cost of each boy sentenced to prison as about $250 per annum to the State; and some, he says, will cost at least $500. In England, where such statistics are collected with much greater care than in this country, the expenses of trial and imprisonment are estimated at about $300 per annum for each lad convicted, and some $400 more for transportation and settlement in a penal colony, while the Reformatories cost from $30 to $125 per annum for each child.

The returns above given for Massachusetts show more than a million and a quarter of dollars expended in the last five years in punishing criminals.

Who dares estimate what useful men and affectionate women might have been saved to the world by half that sum expended in measures for reforming and preventing? A vagabond, thieving boy, left in his miserable courses, costs the country villages of that State finally, just about what hundreds of them pay their pastor. It is certainly a humiliating reflection that, from neglect and carelessness, the public must come to expend, every year, for a ragged, filthy young thief, as much as they give for the highest services of an educated spiritual man, whose office it is to guide and elevate Society.

Another result of this Convention, which will be valuable for the future, is the revelation it has made of the usefulness of the family system of reformatories, as compared with the congregated or penitentiary system.

The statements made by the Superintendent of the Lancaster Reform-School for girls in Massachusetts, which is managed on this plan, showed the immense advantage of having small families to receive these children, in place of herding them in one great establishment. A child of bad habits put among hundreds of similar children, and only under a general care, can very seldom escape contamination. But if a little circle of twelve or fifteen, with its own especial officer, receive him; if his habits are closely watched and he have about him the influences of a home, a very different result may soon be expected.

This enlightened system has been tried with success in Hamburg, at Red-Hill, in England, at Mettrai, and following this eminent example, at some 35 other juvenile reformatories in France, with such good results that the French claim, in some of their institutions, ninety per cent. as the average number of persons reformed among these young criminals. We understand that a similar institution on the family-system is about to be established in Ohio; and it is to be hoped that the valuable enterprise begun by Mr. NICHOLS, at Chicago, for managing young vagabonds on principles of honor, will finally, as it is extended, take this form. Why should our own House of Refuge have erected its costly buildings, when in a few cheap houses a system so much more practical and humane might have been carried out? The "Family," it is true, does not show off so well, but the public will be quite willing to do without the exhibition of a crowd of reformed children, provided that they can be sure that simple, thorough influences are at work upon the young convict, which will restore him in sound mind to society.

The Invasion of Sonora.

The friends of Mr. HENRY A. CRABB seek to vindicate his memory from the imputation of filibusterism. We should be glad to learn that his innocence and that of the entire company who recently invaded Sonora was fully established; but before any special sympathy is invited for them, it may be well to examine their antecedents in connection with this very enterprise.

For some months past the projected invasion of Sonora has been a fruitful topic of discussion for the San Francisco Press. We could name more than one journal that called upon the authorities to interfere in the matter. The expedition was some time in preparation, and, finally, under the name of the Arizona Colonization Company, it started for the new Territory of Arizona with the ostensible purpose of working the fruitful mines alleged to abound in that region. There were three companies under the immediate command of Gen. CRABB, with regularly appointed officers, and the whole force with large reinforcements to arrive from Texas and California, would, it was expected, number at least 1,500 men. After leaving San Francisco we first hear of General CRABB's company at Fort Yuma, where they arrived on the 1st of March last, and a correspondent of this journal, writing on the 3d of that month, after recording their arrival there, exposed their future plans, which were "to appear as peaceful emigrants until every arrangement was completed, and then to cross the line, and, with their allies in Sonora, make their issue open and in strong force." These plans were faithfully carried out. That a deliberate invasion of the neighboring Republic was the end and aim of the whole enterprise, no one can doubt. The men were armed for such an undertaking. They never halted until they reached the Mexican frontier, and then, when all was ready, Gen. CRABB crossed the line with an advanced guard of one hundred men, and summoned the first Mexican Prefect he encountered to surrender. While en route for Sonora, letters from officers in the expedition were published, and the writers took no pains to conceal the objects in view, or their hopes of the aid they would receive from their allies in Sonora. Fillibusterism has long ogled that fair Mexican Province. First it was invaded by WILLIAM WALKER; then by RAOUSSEL DE BOULBON, and, in the present case, we do not see how the authorities could regard the appearance of Gen. CRABB at the head of an armed body of men except as a hostile demonstration and an invasion. The proclamation of Gen. CRABB, and the fight that ensued with Mexican troops, prove pretty clearly that such, at least, was his intention. Particulars, which may be expected by the next mail, will probably throw more light on the subject.

The telegraph has reported that General CRABB and some sixty of his men were captured by the Mexican authorities and shot. Many of the fillibusters once occupied high positions in California. The chief himself had been a Senator and a leader of the Whig and Know-Nothing parties. We sincerely deplore their untimely and ignominious death; but we can scarcely censure the Mexican Government for the course it has pursued in vindication of its sovereign rights.

Church's Niagara.

The only proof that a thing can be done is the doing it, and every great work which has ever been accomplished in this world was an impossibility until it was achieved. Doubtless the brown-faced friends of Cheops pooh-poohed his Pyramid till its stately apex rose sharp and clear before them against the deep blue of the Egyptian sky. The Conselors of ALEXANDER thought him but a Macedonian madman till the daughters of DARIUS knelt for mercy at his feet. The sage old soldiers of HANNIBAL shook their gray beards, we may be sure, in solemn horror, at the foot of the Helvetic Alps, and never believed in their leader again till they ranged their worn and weary legions in order of battle on the plains of Piedmont. St. Peter's Dome was but a poet's dream till MICHAEL ANGELO had hung the Pantheon plainly in the air, and the steamship was an enthusiast's foolish fancy till the guns of our own Battery echoed back the greeting of the Sirius and the Great Western in the Bay. Time and again have the critics and the public stricken the pencil and the brush from the aspiring artist's hand by the sweeping assertion that the thing he most wished to paint could never be painted by man—and time and again has the artist, taking up his tools, made all their skepticism ridiculous.

What proposition has been more universally accepted as an axiom in American landscape art than this—that Niagara could not be reproduced on the canvass? Everybody has echoed the remark—everybody has believed it—nobody could question, because nobody had disproved it. And now there comes a quiet artist quietly forward, who calmly puts his work down before gazing Broadway, and begs leave to differ from the critics and the public—and in the twinkling of an eye wins all the world over to his side! People go and look at Mr. CHURCH'S Niagara, and come away only wondering that anybody who tried to do it ever failed to paint the Cataract. It seems the simplest thing in the world, for it has been done simply—with the simplicity of power, and the wonderful, convincing truth of simplicity.

You pass from the bustle of the street into that small back room of the Messrs. WILLIAMS & STEVENS, which all lovers of art know so well, and in which they have passed at one time or another so many pleasant hours—and behold! there is the marvel of the Western World before you! The broadening river sweeps curving to the plunge—the beryl-green of the central watery masses charms their else awful might into delicious beauty—the vaporous white veils of mingling spray and mist float lightly and tenderly up, smitten through and through with the glory of the diffusive daylight and the splendor of the glittering rainbow—far away, far as the eye can follow the dreaming fancy, the distant landscape glows and mellows through every hue of purple, gold and amethyst—and overhead the sky bends, warm, and light, and soft—a heaven worthy of the scene.

To write of the picture is like writing of the Falls themselves. You think of it, and your pen hangs idly in your hand, as your imagination brings back to you the grandeur and the grace you gazed upon. The painting of such a picture marks an era in the art of our country, and it is not fit that it should go from among us without some worthy recognition of its real greatness and importance. To criticize it in detail is not our present purpose; we reserve that pleasant duty for another occasion and a more suitable opportunity. We have now only to point to its existence as a most brilliant illustration of the reward which always awaits the trust, the courage and the enterprise of genius.

We cannot believe that the Art of Painting will be left to linger on as it has heretofore been compelled to do, in a country which has produced one such picture, and has given to that picture such a welcome as Mr. CHURCH'S Niagara has received from the public, if not from the press. We do not doubt that the conviction of the greatness of the painter's art, which must be impressed upon the mind of the most careless and the most ignorant spectator, by such a triumph of form and color as this picture is, will send many a man and woman in a more receptive temper to the exhibition, which the National Academy has once more opened to the world. While all England is thronging to Manchester, there to do honor to the mighty masters of the Past, and of many a foreign land, let not our citizens show themselves indifferent to the gallant and aspiring efforts of native genius in New York. The single example of Mr. CHURCH'S splendid achievement is sufficient to show what may be reasonably expected of Painting in America, if the public will but manifest such an interest in the ambition of its votaries as is due to the greatness of the Art itself, and to the shining promise of its actual estate among us.

EASINESS OF WRITING AMUSING ARTICLES.—It has generally been imagined that joke-making, as a profession, was a very serious business, and clowns and comic actors are notoriously the most painstaking and solemn members of a theatrical troupe. The necessity of being funny at stated periods, for a stipulated price, and for a certain time, has always had a melancholy and depressing effect upon the spirits of the practitioner. The anecdote of the Italian clown who was advised by his physician to go and witness his own performance as a cure for his low spirits, is well known. A friend of ours who dined with the Punch writers in London, last Summer, said they were the most melancholy set of men he encountered in England. But, there are exceptions to all rules, and we are pleased to learn that one of the sharpest and wittiest of our cotemporaries in the Southwest, finds the writing of "pleasant and amusing paragraphs" the easiest thing possible. Mr. PRENTICE says, in reference to a report of his having been engaged to edit the jokes of a New-York weekly paper:

"It is true that we have undertaken to furnish weekly a half column of pleasant and amusing paragraphs for the Ledger, but our readers must not suppose that any portion of our time will on that account be abstracted from the Louisville Journal, which we are determined to render the leading political journal of the country, if it is not so already. Our labors for the Ledger will scarcely cost us more than an hour per week, but we shall take great pleasure in performing them."

From the New-York Ledger.

LINES.

As distant leads beyond the sea,
When friends go theace, draw nigh,
So Heaven, when friends have thither gone,
Draws nearer from the sky.

And as those leads the dearer grow,
When friends are long away,
So Heaven itself, through loved ones dead,
Grows dearer day by day.

Heaven is not far from those who see
With the pure spirit's sight,
But near, and in the very hearts
Of those who see aright.

THE ISLAND PRINCESS.

A ROMANCE OF THE OLD AND NEW WORLD.

Author of "The Lost Heiress," "The Deserted Wife," "The Missing Bride," "Retribution," etc.

CHAPTER I.

AN INTERRUPTED WEDDING.

It was the first of May, the marriage-day of the Viscount Montressor of Montressor Castle, Derbyshire, and Estelle, only daughter and heiress of Sir Parke Morelle Hyde Hall, Devonshire.

A glorious morning! the cloudless, blue sky smiled down upon the green hills and dewy dales and deep woods of Devon; and the park around the Hall was all alive and musical, with the joyous notes of birds and the merry laughter of young men and maidens gathering to celebrate their May day festival, and to do honor to the marriage of their landlord's daughter.

The elm-shaded, winding avenue that led from the highway to the house, was arched at each terminus by a mammoth wreath of flowers, and over each the carriages that passed under them, on their way to assist at the wedding; and these contained only the bridesmaids and the nearest friends and relatives of the family, whose relationship or position gave them the right to attend the bride to church;—for a still more numerous party had been invited to meet her at the altar. The villagers and tenants, grouped about under the shade of the great old trees, or wandering over the grass inward on either side the avenue, watched these equipages as they rolled on, commenting as usual on such occasions.

"Oh—dear me! the weddingers won't pass till nearly twelve! and here we are to wait two mortal hours!" said a young girl to the gamekeeper.

"Hush! my darling; look, here comes his Lordship's carriage, itself, just as sure as you're the prettiest lass in the country."

It was Lord Montressor's carriage.

Early that morning, a note from his affianced bride had been put in his hands summoning him to a private conference with her at the Hall, before they should proceed to the church. Surprised and filled with vague uneasiness, his Lordship lost no time in obeying the behest.

Within the most secluded of her suite of richly furnished apartments at the old Hall, half-buried in the depths of a cushioned chair, reclined the bride expectant, in bridal array.

She was alone, her attendants having, by her own desire, withdrawn.

Estelle Morelle—or "la belle Estelle," "Beautiful Stella," "the Midnight Star"—as, for her resplendent dark beauty, she was poetically named—was at that time twenty-five years of age, and more lovely than a poet's or an artist's ideal. Her form was of medium height, and very slender, though well rounded, with a graceful head, over which fell rich masses of jet-black silken ringlets, shading a face of pure, pale olive complexion with large mournful dark eyes, habitually veiled by the long, drooping lashes and delicate, though full, curved lips, ever patiently closed as in silent resignation. The prevailing expression of her dark, brilliant countenance was a profound melancholy.

The announcement of Miss Morelle's approaching marriage with the Viscount Montressor had created a profound sensation in the fashionable and aristocratic circles. A peerless beauty, the only child and heiress of the oldest, wealthiest and haughtiest baronet in the West of England, her heart had been as much the object of assaliation to the youthful and ardent, as her hand and fortune had been the end of desire to the mercenary and ambitious.

At the early age of seven years, Estelle had been placed at one of the first-class female institutions of learning at Paris. Here, as now, considered among the very best of their kind in the world, and there had been left to remain until her sixteenth year, when the sudden and calamitous breaking up of the institution, and her own severe illness, had occasioned her removal. That illness had been attended with marked changes in the constitution and temperament of the young girl.

Estelle, previously the most careless, light-hearted and capricious of children, left her chamber of convalescence a subdued, thoughtful melancholy woman! The laughing lips of girlhood closed in patient sadness; the sparkling eyes sheathed their beams under long, shadowy lashes, now seldom lifted; the silvery, elastic voice sank into deep and thrilling tones; the free, glad motions were measured and controlled.

She never entered another school, but completed her education under the best masters at home. To dissipate what was considered a transient melancholy, her parents traveled with her over Europe, pausing at each capital and chief town, to show her all that was interesting and instructive. But though their daughter repaid their attentions with the sweetest gratitude, and obeyed them with the gentlest docility, she showed no interest in the passing scenes. And though everywhere her extreme beauty and sweetness of disposition, not less than her fortune and position, drew around her many friends and admirers, Estelle remained alone in her isolated thoughts and feelings. Every most distinguished physician in Europe had been consulted upon her case, and the result of their wisdom was a decision that this melancholy was not the effect of ill health, still less of secret sorrow, but that it was a constitutional phase that would probably pass away with maturing years.

They returned to England, presented their daughter at court, and introduced her into all the gayeties of fashionable life. But with no happy effect upon the spirits of Estelle, who remained profoundly unmoved amid the éclat that greeted her début. Her picturesque beauty was the theme of all tongues—her mournful glance was fascinating—her deep tones thrilling—her touch magnetic; still it had no power, yet she who could move all others, remained unimpressed. She who sought no conquests, for that very reason, perhaps, made many. A peer and two commoners, in succession, laid their fortunes at her feet, and were in turn kindly and firmly rejected.

So passed her first season in London, at the close of which her parents took her down to their seat in Devonshire. Here, in her thoughtful, quiet, unostentatious manner, she engaged in works of benevolence among the villagers and the tenantry. And her father, hoping much from this employment, gave her full liberty of action, and smiled to see that she seemed less pensive than before.

At the beginning of the parliamentary term the family went up to London.

And it was here in her second season in town that Estelle formed the acquaintance of Lord Montressor, a young nobleman but lately acceded to his titles and estates, but already known as a man of the most high toned moral and intellectual excellence, as a righteous, as well as a rising statesman and as one who, in the event of a change of ministry, would be likely to fill a high official position in His Majesty's cabinet. Aside from the glare of rank and wealth and power Charles Montressor was a glorious specimen of the Creator's workmanship. Above the average standard of height among his countrymen, broad-shouldered and deep-chested, with a noble head, and a face full of wisdom and goodness, his appearance truly indicated the warm benevolence, clear intelligence and pure spirit of the man. His presence soon inspired Estelle with a faith that she had not been able to feel in any other that approached her. He drew nearer to her than any other had been permitted to come; he crossed the magic circle of her isolation and conversed with her as no other had been allowed to do. The world looked and said that the beautiful Stella had at least met her master and was conquered.

At this stage of affairs, the parliamentary term being over, Sir Parke Morelle and his family left London for Hyde Hall.

Lord Montressor asked and received permission to follow them, and in less than a month, availed himself of the privilege to do so. Thus it was in the home of his ancestors, after having obtained the cordial sanction of her parents, and believing himself sure of the affections of their daughter, Lord Montressor offered his heart and hand to the lovely Estelle, and was, to his profound astonishment, instantly and firmly rejected! In thus rejecting his suit, she wept long and bitterly, praying his forgiveness, that the happiness she had experienced and exhibited in his society should have betrayed him into making this declaration, and beseeching him never to renew his suit; but to leave and forget her. There was something in the tone of her refusal which confirmed and deepened his previous conviction that—even in rejecting him—she loved him! But with his high-toned sentiments he would not in the least degree presume upon that knowledge. Taking her hand with determined tenderness, he said:

"Stella! a man never but once, in his whole existence, loves a woman as I love you! I will not inquire the cause of the rejection, which you have certainly a right to make without assigning any reason for the act. And after having received this repulse, I may not in my distress pray you by a renewal of my suit. But this in parting I must say to you—that, though I go hence I shall not go out of the reach of your friends; I shall never address another woman; so if ever in the course of future weeks, or months, or years, however long you may think proper to review the decision of this evening, Stella, I implore you to let me know! Write but one word, 'Come,' and I will return to lay an unchanged heart at your feet!"

Estelle was weeping too bitterly to reply.

"Stella! will you promise to do this?"

"Lord Montressor, best and dearest friend! do not seek to bind yourself to one who can give you nothing in return! Try to think of the melancholy girl that you gilded and loved—only as a shadow that set for a moment across the sunshine of your path, and then passed away forever!—and so forget her!"

"Stella! I have pledged my honor never to renew this, this suit, unless you reverse in my favor the sentence you have pronounced upon it; but inspired by the deep and deathless love I bear you, and 'hoping against hope,' I feel impelled to implore before leaving you, that, in the event of a favorable change of sentiment or purpose towards me, you will not hesitate to give me leave to return. Stella, will you promise me so much as that?"

"Noble friend that I have in the world! how gladly would I promise, but I must not, Montressor. Were I to do so, you would feel bound to wait the changes of my mood, and so, for a most undeserving love, might miss in some nobler woman's affections, the happiness in store for you!"

"Stella, will you raise your sweet, mournful eyes to mine, one moment, that you may read my soul while I speak?"

Estelle lifted her dark orbs to meet the clear, pure, blue eyes bent with such much love and candor upon hers and read the deep, unchanging truth of the constancy of his soul as he said—

"Stella, in the presence of the heart-searching God who sees and hears me I assure you that I shall never love another woman as I love you, and, therefore, of course, can never wed another; so that, whether you give me this slightest of hopes or not, I am equally and forever bound. Now will you promise, Stella? Remember, it is only to let me know in case of a change in your sentiments."

For an instant the light of an unutterable love and joy broke on her beautiful, dark face, and her smiling lips parted to speak, when, as if a sudden memory and warning had gripped her very heart, she uttered a low, sharp cry, turned pale than before, and then said:

"No! no! my Lord! Stella cannot even give you that; She is poorer than the poorest, in gifts to you! She can only pray that you may forget her and be happy."

He looked profoundly disappointed and troubled. But soon mastering his despondency, he said hopefully:

"Well, dearest Stella, although you reject me without apparent reason, and refuse to give me the slightest promise or the most distant hope, yet I repeat—should you in the long future change your purpose, and write to me one word—'Come'—I will hasten to lay at your feet an unchanged heart! Good bye! God be with you!" and raising her hand, he bowed over it, pressed it to his lips, turned and left the room.

Some moments after, Lady Morelle, who came to seek and congratulate her daughter upon what she imagined to be the only possible result of the interview, found Estelle lying in a swoon upon the floor! It was followed by a long and terrible illness, terminating in a tediously-protracted convalescence. The town season was at hand before Estelle was able to re-enter society.

They went up to London, and once more the "star of beauty" arose upon its world. And though the cloud upon her life settled darker and heavier, day by day, she was more followed, flattered and courted than before.

Thus three years had passed away, when one morning, while the family, then occupying their town house in Berkley square, were seated at a late breakfast, and Sir Parke was engaged in reading aloud from the London Times, an account of the saving of the French ship—Le Due D'Anjou—wrecked off the coast of Algiers—Estelle uttered a low cry and sank fainting from her seat.

This attack was not, as the other had been, followed by illness; on the contrary, from that day, the cloud seemed lifted from her head, and even those who had most admired her face in its shadow, were enchanted to see how brilliant was her beauty in its sunshine! Her health and spirits daily improved, yet in the midst of all this flowing tide of new life, Estelle astonished her friends by suddenly, in the height of the London season, retiring to her father's country seat, where she remained in strict seclusion from the world for eighteen months.

At the end of this period, Lord Montressor, who had never left England, or lost trace of his beloved Stella, and who was now staying at his castle in Dorsetshire, was one day seated at breakfast when the morning mail was brought him. Among a score of letters the first that attracted his attention was a dainty white envelope superscribed in a delicate hand-writing. He took that up first and opened it—It contained but one word—"Come."

The light of an ineffable joy broke over his face! Oh! he had waited, patiently, hopefully, years, for that word, and at last he received it! Thanks to heaven in the first instance! and then pushing all the other letters unopened aside he sprang up, rang for his valet, and ordered his valise packed and horses put in the carriage.

In twenty more minutes he had reached the railway station just as the cars were about to start, and in three hours he was at Hyde Hall and standing in the presence of Estelle!—she looking so beautiful and happy!

With the old chivalric enthusiasm of devotion, he dropped at once, upon his knee, and raised her hand to his saying—

"For four years I have hoped and waited for one word from you, and at last, beloved, you have written—'Come,' and I am at your feet, as I said, with an unchanged heart!"

"But I," she said, deeply blushing, while she held both hands to raise him, "I, my Lord, have not an unchanged heart! for longer than four years I have loved you more than woman's tongue may tell—and never more than at the hour in which we bade farewell, as I thought, forever!"

"I know it, beloved! knew it then! knew it always! I never doubted it! Could I be deceived in the dear heart of the woman I loved? No! and that was the secret of my patience!" he replied, taking his seat on the sofa by her side.

"And yet you never inquired, and do not even now inquire why, without explanation and without hope, I sent you from my presence, and why now, without apparent reason, I summon you back!" she said, as a shade of the old sadness fell upon her beautiful face.

"Your motives, dearest, were, and are your own. Not until your spirit moves you to do so shall you give them to me! I have full confidence in you, beautiful Stella!"

"Confidence! oh, my God!" she exclaimed, in a low, deep, thrilling voice.

"Why, what is the matter, dearest?"

She looked up suddenly, a smile of worshipping love, breaking like sunlight over her dark face, and said—

"Nothing—nothing my lord! but that all your thoughts and feelings are so elevated beyond your poor Estelle's! And yet she would almost choose it so! for, could she be an angel she would wish you to be something far higher—a god!"

"Sweet enthusiast! moderate your aspirations, or the world and its people will disappoint you! Be not an idolater; worship only God, my Stella!"

Such was their meeting!

Yet, occasionally, throughout the interview, a sudden shadow, like the recurrence of a painful thought, would fall upon her bright face, and then pass as it came.

They were engaged, and within a few days the marriage was announced to take place on the first of May.

But it was observed by the nearest friends of the bride that from the day of her betrothal her spirits had been marked by the strangest fluctuations. Sometimes with her beautiful dark face illumined with a deep, still, almost religious joy, she moved about, as it were, on "winged feet," or sat brooding in a happy trance. At other times she fell into deep gloom and anxiety, as inexplicable as it was alarming to her friends, who greatly feared her relapse into the deep melancholy that had so long overshadowed her, and that they had grown to dread as a serious constitutional malady. But they hoped everything from her approaching marriage with the man she loved. Lord Montressor observed with the deepest interest the uncertain moods of his betrothed; but with the high-toned sentiments that distinguished him, refrained from inquiring, and awaited her voluntary revelations.

At last the first of May, the marriage day, upon which I have presented the parties to the reader, arrived, and all the haut ton, as I said, were gathered at the Hall or at the Church to do honor to the solemnities.

And the expectant bride, in her bridal robe and veil, waited within her boudoir the arrival of the bridegroom, whom she had summoned to a private interview before they should proceed to the church. She had not long to wait. He who quickly responded to her slightest inclination, immediately obeyed her call.

Yet when she heard his firm elastic step approaching, "Now, God have mercy on me!" she prayed, and covered her face with her hands.

He entered, unannounced, and saying,

"My beautiful Stella! I am here, your penitive, by your commands!"

She dropped her hands, and revealing a face pale with misery, spoke in a thrilling, deep, impassioned tone—

"You are here by my supplication, my lord! I have no right to command."

"We will waive that! What is your will, my dearest Stella?"

"My prayer, my lord—is first, for your forgiveness."

"Forgiveness!—my Stella!"

"Ay! my dear lord! you see before you a penitent and a suppliant, who may soon be some hang far more wretched!"

"My Stella! what mean you?"

"Come to the window, Lord Montressor!" she said, rising and preceding him. "Look out," she continued, putting aside the rose-colored hangings, and revealing a view of the park below, alive with its restless multitude. "What are all these people waiting for, my lord?"

"What are they waiting for, my Stella?—for that, for which I also wait, with how much more impatience!" he answered, while a deep flush of love and joy, for an instant, suffused the sallowy cast of his face.

"They wait to see a bride pass whom no bride may ever go!" she said, in a solemn voice.

"Stella! great Heaven! what say you!" he exclaimed, gazing on her with profound astonishment.

"That the bride they expect is unworthy to stand before God's holy altar beside Lord Montressor!"

"Unworthy, Stella! You!"

"Most unworthy, my lord!" she said, dropping her eyes, and propping her head in an attitude of the deepest misery. "I should have made this confession long ago, Lord Montressor; but I have deceived you—I have deceived you!"

"In what respect Stella? My God! It cannot be! No, it cannot be! that while betrothed to me, you do not love me!"

"Not love you! Oh! my dear lord!" she murmured, in a voice of thrilling tenderness that carried conviction of her truth to his deepest heart.

"What must you then, dearest one? if indeed you return my deep love."

"Oh! I do, I do, Montressor; whatever happens, wherever you go, take that assurance with you! I love you, my lord! shall ever love you, even though even after what I shall have told you, you repulse and hate me, and go to on friends and say—! That woman whom I was about to wed, is but a whited sepulchre, whom I have proved, and whom I now reject'—and so leave me to the scorn of men, still I say—ever shall say—I love you, Lord Montressor! I love you, and the consciousness of being unworthy of your love is the bitterest element in my punishment" she said, in a voice of such profound misery, that Lord Montressor could scarcely continue to believe her guilty to unfounded or exaggerated.

He drew upon a seat, and sitting still and while as a carved image of stone, gazed upon her, waiting her further communications.

The above is all of this beautiful and highly interesting story that will be published in our columns. We give this as a sample. The continuation of it can be found only in the New-York Ledger, the great family weekly paper, for which the most popular writers in the country contribute, and which can be found at all the stores throughout the city and country where papers are sold. Remember to ask for the New-York Ledger of May 30, and in it you will get the continuation of the story from where it leaves off here. If you cannot get a copy at any news office the publisher of the Ledger will mail you a copy on receipt of five cents. Fanny Fern writes only for the New-York Ledger; Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., writes only for it; Emerson Bennett writes only for it; and nearly all the eminent writers in the country, such as Mrs. Sigourney, Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth and Alice Carey, contribute regularly to its columns. Mrs. Southworth will write for no other paper hereafter. Geo. D. Prentice, Esq., of the Louisville Journal, prepares the Wit and Humor Department in the Ledger. It is mailed to subscribers at $2 a year, or two copies for $3. Address Robert Bonner, publisher, No. 44 Ann-st., New-York. It is the handsomest and best family paper in the country, elegantly illustrated, and characterized by a high moral tone.
